Drugs—overdoses kill more than traffic accidents

By BILL DUNCAN
Staff Writer

By far the majority of them are young.

Their ages range from 16 to 25 years.

Chances are they've been arrested six, seven, eight or more times on the same charge.

Society has all but given up on them.

Their parents are shamed into silence, or shocked into disbelief.

Their peers are too understanding and too protective of their problem.

The police are frustrated at seeing them again and again knowing they will see them at least one more time—even if it is on the morgue slab.

The courts were tough with them in the beginning, but are becoming a little more lenient.

They are narcotic addicts — pill poppers and mainliners — flirting with death from an overdose.

When they overdose, their whole synthetic world crumbles suddenly.

With luck and time, they'll survive this crisis. The next time they may not.

Scare tactics, you say?

Hogwash. Drug overdose in Los Angeles County last year killed more people than did automobile accidents. So did overdose deaths in Orange County.

Society has all but given up on them . . . When they overdose, their synthetic world crumbles suddenly.

"Our statistics for 1971 are not yet complete, but I am sorry to say that already we see that deaths from overdose of drugs in Los Angeles County is on the increase this year," said Emily Kushida, statistician for the county coroner's office.

Miss Kushida said last year 1,139 persons died from drug overdose. Some were intentional, but most were accidental overdoses — addicts taking on more than their bodies could tolerate.

In Orange County last year, 85 died from drug overdose

"We already have verified 33 deaths from overdose this year," said Deputy Orange County Coroner Harold Minick, who has done a seven-year study on overdose deaths and found a steady and alarming increase per capita. "We have more deaths suspected of drug overdose, but these are pending the outcome of toxicological studies."

In 1964, for example, Orange County had 27 deaths from overdose of drugs—that number jumped to 61 in 1969 and to 85 last year.

There is no breakdown in the statistics to indicate how many drug deaths occurred in Long Beach, but there is so much concern over the upward trend that Los Angeles County Coroner's office has begun to separate deaths by regions. Miss Kushida said a report that would show the number of overdose deaths in Long Beach is due by mid-October.

However, local authorities said that in the past seven years the number of overdose deaths has increased 10 times in Long Beach. What is alarming is that the majority are in the young age bracket.

And what's more, the number of drug overdoses that survive the edge of death increases daily and these are only the ones that get reported officially.

"We know that literally thousands of overdose cases go unreported," said Sgt. Mike Hill of the Long

Lend a hand

Although we have established credit with several companies in this area, we recently were refused credit by a department store. The store said the negative information came from TRW Credit Data, 1871 W. Katella Ave., Anaheim. I went to TRW and they said the information was from a loan company, saying we had been late with payments. We have had credit dealings with this company for the last 10 years and only once, when my husband was hospitalized and the loan company insurance was supposed to make our payments, were they late. I went to the loan company manager and he said our credit was good with them, but explained that according to the federal truth-in-lending law, he can answer only two questions when asked for information: how many late notices were sent out and how many late charges were paid. He said no explanation of circumstances can be given. Is he right? A.G., Bellflower.

"The manager couldn't be more wrong in what he told her," according to an officer of the Federal Trade Commission contacted by ACTION LINE. It is not the truth-in-lending, but the Fair Credit Reporting Act, which covers this kind of situation, he said. According to that law, when a consumer feels a credit agency is giving out wrong or misleading information, he can request that the bureau reinvestigate his rating. Unless the consumer's request is "completely frivolous," the law reads, the bureau must conduct a second investigation and delete any data they discover is incorrect. If they do not choose to delete information after the second investigation, the consumer has the right, under the act, to submit to the credit bureau a statement of 100 words or less, setting forth the nature of his dispute with the credit bureau. Every time a company requests information about that consumer, the credit agency must send or read them a copy of the consumer's statement, along with the credit information. Fortunately, by the time ACTION LINE got into your case, TRW Credit Data notified you that, because of the extenuating circumstances, they had decided to delete the late payment information from your record.

Vitamized

Can you explain the corresponding values of milligrams, international units and USP units? All these units of measurement are used on some food or vitamins and it would be helpful to know the relationships. M.C.P., Long Beach.

For the A, D and E vitamins, for all practical purposes, the international unit and the USP (United States Pharmacopoeia) unit are identical, according to Edward S. Brady, associate dean of the USC School of Pharmacy. Almost all other vitamins are measured in milligrams. It is meaningless to compare milligrams with units, Brady said. That's because one milligram of vitamin A equals 3,333 units while one milligram of vitamin E equals 1-1½ units. Some manufacturers list both units and milligrams on their products, but the labeling isn't consistent, he said, because of a lack of enforcement. Some companies use the measurement which makes the strength of $200,000 gone in 2-year spree

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Four years ago Mrs. Jolene Gearin was sitting in her $75-a-month apartment feeling sorry for herself because her merchant marine husband hadn't called her on her birthday.

When the phone finally rang, it was a birthday present she'll never forget — she was told she had inherited $200,000.

Today, sitting in a rented home in San Pedro, the attractive mother of four admits being back where she started — poor.

"We blew it."

Mrs. Gearin explains how:

"You know, the kids and I waited for two years — from the time we knew we were going to get it until we got it — so we sat around for two years talking about how to spend it. When we finally got it we couldn't spend it fast enough."

The money, which started out as a $200,000 inheritance from her father, Chester Charles Hanson, ended up something less than that figure, but the "fun of spending" was there.

"We waited for two long years for the attorneys to haggle and and the government to get its share and my sister to make claims against it, too," Mrs. Gearin explains.

"But when it came, it really wore us out spending it — we were just exhausted . . .'

"We bought cars and motorcycles for the boys and a truck, and a $2,000 hi-fi with components and clothes and we put a

Nixon wins promise of dock settlement

Both sides vow to seek accord by week's end

Combined News Services

PORTLAND, Ore. — President Nixon met with leaders of opposing factions in the protracted West Coast dock strike Saturday and said they had agreed to try to reach settlement by the end of this week.

The President said that union and management negotiators had agreed to resume conferences Monday. The strike, which began July 1, has shut down 24 West Coast ports, idling scores of ships and causing cargo loss in the millions.

The meeting marked the first time Nixon as President has met with both parties to a major strike.

NIXON LATER APPEARED before news and broadcast executives from the Western states and said, "I consider it imperative that management and labor work with a new sense of urgency to end the strike."

The President had flown in from Montana during the afternoon and said that farmers there were asking about the dock strike which he said had a broader interest — an interest extending beyond the West Coast.

President Nixon also noted that in this particular situation, the administration had made recommendations to Congress for dealing with transportation generally. He said he thought what had happened in the dock dispute and rail dispute underscored the urgency for legislation.

He said as things stand there can be great injury and that invocation of the Taft Hartley Act is a possibility here as the situation goes on.

NIXON MET IN A small sitting room at the Benson Hotel with Harry Bridges, president of the striking Internatonal Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and Ed Flynn, president of the Pacific Maritime Association, the employer group.

Bridges and Flynn flanked Nixon but while newsmen and photographers were in the room, most of the conversation was between the President and the union chief.

Ronald L. Ziegler, the presidential press secretary, said Nixon was not going to attempt any mediation himself, but emphasized his concern over the long dispute. The union had rejected Nixon's bid for a halt to all strikes when the Presi-

Detention camps measure signed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — President Nixon Saturday signed a bill repealing a 21-year-old law establishing detention centers for suspected subversives.

The bill, passed by Congress earlier this month, also prohibits re-establishment of the detention centers without the consent of Congress.

The 1950 law had never been invoked, but during debate on its repeal supporters cited widepread rumors that it would be used to imprison persons with unpopular beliefs.

SUPPORTERS of the bill to repeal the act also recalled the internment of 120,000 Japanese-Americans living on the West Coast during World War II.

Nixon announced at an airport speech on his arrival in Portland that he had signed the bill.

Nixon said the government had built six detention camps under the Emergency Detention Act of 1950.

Nixon said the law provided that the camps would be used during internal security emergencies for seizing and detaining individuals likely to engage in acts of espionage and sabotage.

The camps — never used — were identified in the presidential statement as:

—Tulelake, Calif. Closed in 1953 and later sold to private persons.

—Wickenburg, Ariz. Returned to the City of Wickenburg in 1956; now used for emergency air strip and private manufacturing plant.

—Avon Park, Fla. Taken over by the state for a correctional institution.

—Florence, Ariz. of a total of 456 acres, 436 sold to Florence, which later sold them to a private developer for a trailer camp. The remain- in 20 acres were used as a federal jail.

—El Reno, Okla. Used as a grazing land for cattle; kept by the Bureau of Prisons.

—Allenwood, Pa. Minimum-security federal prison camp.

Hurricane Ginger stalled over Atlantic

MIAMI (UPI) — Hurricane Ginger remained stalled 575 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., Saturday night and scientists disclosed they were considering seeding it with silver iodide crystals dropped from aircraft in an attempt to rob it of some of its 85-mph fury.

The storm was sending heavy surf crashing onto beaches from Puerto Rico to the Carolinas.

Burden on U.S. to solve money-exchange rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund's top official Saturday urged devaluation of the dollar to clear the way for world agreement on money-exchange rates. The United States wants such an agreement but thus far has declined to devalue the dollar.

Keynoting the annual IMF meeting, managing director Pierre-Paul Schweitzer suggested also an expanded use for "paper gold" or Special Drawing Rights as a reserve asset on which the value of other currencies would be based.

Schweitzer said at a news conference that the "present situation cannot possibly lead to a satisfactory system of exchange rates."

He referred to PresidentN ixon's decision to cut the dollar loose from its tie with gold and impose a 10-per-cent charge on imports.

The managing director thus placed much of the burden for resolving the international monetary impasse on the United States, saying he does not expect a solution without a "U.S. contribution."

By that, he said he meant a dollar devaluation in terms of its relationship with gold and Special Drawing Rights, the medium of exchange created in 1969 to provide more reserves for payments between countries.

The United States has rejected devaluing and, instead, President Nixon has said the import surcharge will remain until total reform of the monetary system is achieved.

"I would hate to see a situation where the surcharge would remain in effect for a year or so," Schweitzer said.

Although U.S. officials are doubtful that this week's meetings will do the job, they will press for some permanent reform and reshaping of the world's monetary system.

Black died early Saturday, little more than a week after he retired after 34 years on the high court bench. His retirement prompted a national outpouring of praise for a legal career that found its bedrock in the Bill of Rights.

A spokesman at Bethesda Naval Hospital said the 85-year-old jurist died at 1 a.m. of the effects of a stroke and inflamation of the arteries. The end was peaceful.

He will be buried at 3 p.m. at Arlington National Cemetery, an hour after services at Washington Cathedral.

Scrapbook tells fight for life

When 4-year-od Cammie Bohren gets older and learns to read, her mother is going to give her a scapbook. It will contain hundreds of cards and letters from newspaper readers across the nation who offered their encuragement in her battle against a usually fatal disease.

"When she's older, she will appreciate what everybody has done for her," her mother, Margaret Bohren said Friday as she prepared for Cammie's weekend visit to the family home in Concord Calif.

"Now, when she says, 'I want to see my mail' it's because she likes to look at the pictures on the cards."

The story of Cammie's fight for life and her picture were circulated last month.

Since then Cammie has received "a big box full of letters and cards," her mother said.

Cameron Rene Bohren was brought to Children's Hospital Medical Center in nearby Oakland last May 3 suffering from chicken pox which had turned into encephalitis — a massive swelling of the brain.

The swelling pressed on her spinal column, affecing her heart and breathing muscles. Then hours after she was admitted, she stopped breathing and her lungs colapsed.

Doctors said they could find no case where a child with Cammie's complications recovered.

Give 'em hell

Democratic National chairman Lawrence O'Brien visited former President Harry S. Truman Saurday, in Independence, Mo., then declared: "The president and I just agreed that this talk just kicked off the 1972 campaign."

O'Brien spent 52 minutes with the former president and Mrs. Truman at their Victorian home. He stopped off en route to St. Louis for a Truman Day dinner.

O'Brien said Truman, 87, relayed some familiar-sounding political advice: "Give 'em hell."

The national chairman said, "We were just talking up a storm and could have gone on forever."

Sex Bias

If it becomes an unshakable tradition that the treasurer of the United States is a woman, that is just as discriminatory as, say, always naming men to the Supreme Court, Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., contended Saturday in Washington.

Obey said in a statement that he heard from a male constituent who had wanted to be considered for the treasurer's job. The appointment went to Romana Banuelos- a successful businesswoman.

Female hormone shots

Feminist Gloria Steinem suggested Saturday President Nixon and Vice President Spiro Agenew might be given injections of female hormones to keep them calm in crisis situations.

"Female hormones are supposed to make one calm while male hormones make you excited and irritable," she said. "Some men have used this as an example of why women should not be in politics, but I disagree.

"It's clear to me the contrary is true. In fact, I'd like to see President Nixon and especially the vice president be given something to calm them while in office," she said.

She spoke before the annual meeting of the Florida Woman's Press Association.

This country is run by a small ruling class, she said, "one that is white and male. The women and the blacks have the same problem. We're second class citizens."

She said the Women's Liberation movement is ridiculed by males who love to make jokes of burning bras.

"But for the first half of man's 5,000 year history," she said, "women were worshipped. It's only been in the last half that patriarchy and racism have been dominant."

HOMEBODY SAM AND FRIEND
Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty, dubbed "Traveling Sam" by his critics, says his absenteeism has been "grossly exaggerated." He was gone only 52 days this year often on foreign trade missions for the Port of L.A., he said Saturday. Here, he trades smiles with French actress Janine Reynaud at the Berlin film festival last July.

Yul Weds

American film actor Yul Brynner married Jacqueline De Croisset, a French widow, in a private ceremony two days ago somewhere in Normandy", a friend of Brynner's said Saturday in Paris.

It was the third wedding for Brynner, the 51-year-old screen star and the second for his bride whose first husband, Philippe De Croisset, a newsman, died a few years ago. Brynner's marriages to Virginia Gilmore, an American and Doris Kleiner, a Chilean, ended in divorce.

Luci's a 'charge-hell gal now

"I'm a charge-hell-with - a-bucket-of-water kind of person," said Luci Johnson Nugent.

"I'm the kind of person who plays red-light, green-light with my children. When my son asks how to climb a tree, I put on my tennis shoes and go out and show him."

Lyndon B. Johnson's younger daughter, the 24-year old wife of Patrick J. Nugent, was talking in Austin, Tex. about herself and her life as a private person now that her father is no longer in the White House.

She works at being a noncelebrity. Arrange to meet her, and she insists on picking you up at your hotel.

"Do you mind talking here for a while?" Luci asked.

The words tumble out with a slight lisp which disappears as she settles into conversation. The talk jumps from an impersonal discussion of the merits of a college (she attends the University of Texas) degree to reflections on her life in the White House. "I did not adjust well at first."

Mention her children and the conversation is light, animated. Mention her parents and the answers come slower.

Saving of wilderness said thwarted by Nixon, solons

By GLADWIN HILL
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Conservation leaders charged Saturday that a program to preserve a small portion of the nation's wilderness for posterity was being thwarted by both the White House and Congress, which enacted the program.

They called for an all-out campaign to amend the nation's Wilderness Preservation Act of 1964 and to persuade President Nixon to issue an executive order protecting choice natural areas from exploitation until they could be considered for permanent sequestration.

One prominent conservationist, Rep. John Saylor, R-Pa., referring to the timber industry and other commercial interests, asserted that Nixon was holding up the order begotten to him.

THE DEMANDS were made at the 12th biennial wilderness conference of the Sierra Club, a leading conservation organization.

Under the wilderness act, Congress established a nucleus of some 9 million acres of public land to be kept in perpetuity unaltered by "the works of man" and designated a 10-year period for deciding on additional preserves out of a potential total of 66,440,000 acres.

The potential acreage is less than 3 per cent of the Nation's total area. Most of it is within national forests, national parks and federal fish and wildlife preserves.

"With two-thirds of the 10-year period elapsed, Congress has added only 33 areas totalling 1.2 million acres — only 2 per cent of a total acreage that might be in the system," Michal McCloskey, executive director of the Sierra Club, told about 800 persons attending the conference.

"Reviews should have been completed by now on 119 areas out of a total of 179 requiring review. Instead proposals have been forwarded to Congress on only 60 areas.

"We should now face the fact that neither the executive branch nor the Congress is really trying to make the wilderness act work," he continued.

OBSERVING that to get the original act passed, conservationists had to settle for the "agonizing procedure of piece-by-piece legislation," he said it was clearly unproductive and hhat it was now time to "try to change the rules of the game."

'Can Do' bar for Seabees can't, says city

OXNARD (UPI) — Across the street from the Navy's huge Seabees training base the neon tavern sign flashes the establishment's name—"Can Do."

But as an emporium for topless and bottomless entertainment, the city authorities say they can't do that.

The owners of Can Do face a jury trial Nov. 1. Municipal Court Judge Burt Henson Friday had denied a motion which would have dismissed the charges.

Attorneys for the tavern owners are challenging the city ordinance banning fleshy displays on the grounds that it is unconstitutional and that state laws permit such entertainment.

Sailors enlisted in the Seabees, the Navy's construction battalion, are known to frequent the tavern which has as its name the Seabees' illustrious motto.

Each day city building inspectors have visited the tavern in an effort to present the Can Do owners with a new citation.

Agnew to speak in Anaheim

Vice President Spiro Agnew and Gov. Reagan will address the 78th annual conference of the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Anaheim Monday.

The vice president is scheduled to speak at 11:30 a.m. at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Gov. Reagan will open the conference with an address at 10:30 a.m.

The meeting is expected to draw about 4,500 police chiefs from as many as 63 nations. It is expected to be the largest conference ever held by the association, which lists more than 8,000 members.

Others scheduled to speak are U.S. Customs Commissioner Miles J. Ambrose, Justice Department official Jerris Leonard, Washington, D.C., Police Chief Jerry Wilson and California Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger.

Boy killed in fall off oil derrick

A 13-year-old Norwalk boy died Saturday afternoon when he fell from an oil derrick on which he was playing near Telegraph Road and Pioneer Boulevard.

Keith Wayne Pittman, 12125 Norwalk Blvd., was pronounced dead on arrival at Norwalk Community Hospital, according to sheriff's deputies.

Ronald Carrico, 13, of Norwalk, told deputies he and the Pittman boy were playing together on the derrick at about 3 p.m. when Pittman fell.

Carrico said they had climbed to the top of the derrick and were on their way down when it happened. He found Pittman lying on the ground at the bottom of the derrick. Carrico told officers he heard nothing when the boy fell, he just found him lying on the ground and ran for help.

7 Guard Jeeps here are missing

If you see a convoy of seven National Guard Jeeps go by, call the police.

The olive drab vehicles are missing from a National Guard maintenance yard at 3500 E. Stearns St., investigators say.

The FBI and Long Beach police are investigating the jeep thefts, which occurred between Aug. 28 and Sept. 21, but they say they have no leads so far.

The jeep thefts were reported Friday, according to police officer William Braden.

Why so long a delay?

National Guard Col. Dean S., Davis told Officer Braden that he first believed the vehicles had been used by guardsman and left at other bases, but a check of Southland bases failed to turn them up.

Weather fits mold first fall weekend

Summer ended abruptly Saturday during this first fall weekend, and the weather is behaving as it should.

Overnight temperatures dropped to 56 degrees and the highs today and Monday are expected to reach only 73 degrees in Long Beach, according to the National Weather Service.

There will be no winds in the Long Beach area and the days are expected to be mostly sunny and the skies variably cloudy.

Blast sinks sailboat off Orange Co.

A 48-foot sailboat sank two-and-a-half miles off Huntington Beach Saturday afternoon after a gasoline explosion ripped a gaping hole in the hull and set the craft afire, according to the Coast Guard.

The lone passenger on the boat, George T. Buokther, 30, of Northridge, was pulled out of the water by the Coast Guard. He was uninjured.

The Huntington Beach Harbor patrol boat saw the explosion when it occurred at 3:15 p.m. The crew notified the Coast Guard and sent the Huntington Beach fire boat to aid the stricken vessel.

The fire was quickly extinguished and Buokther was found in the water with a life preserver.

The Coast Guard Cutter Divide attempted to take the boat into tow, but it sank.

Value of the boat, the Prelude, was estimated at $25,000.

Pedro family's $200,000 inheritance gone after spree

down payment on a house and the girls and I had all our teeth capped and I had my breasts lifted. And, oh yes, we bought ski equip- every weekend, and we traveled — we put 200,000 miles on one of the cars in a year . . . and we all saw a psychiatrist. We all got tickets to go back to Australia where they had lived for several years — but we didn't use them all. I invested $10,000 in the stock market and lost $4,000 of it . . . and we spent $5,000 on new furniture . . . a washer and dryer . . . small appliances . . ."

And she goes on and on.

She considers several of the buys "good still."

"My daughters (Jean, 26, and Mary, 21) and I will have good teeth until I die. We had our teeth capped — every one. That took two to three thousand dollars each," she says as an aside. "We didn't really have bad teeth, but the dentist in Newport said it would save us from having cavities and we'd have our own teeth for the rest of our lives. It was a ball. The dentist would laugh at us running in there with all this cash — we paid cash for everything. . . ."

When she first got the money, the blonde, San Pedro native told reporters she was going to buy a house.

"I COULD have bought a house for $30,000, but I sat there and thought about it and decided against it. I finally did buy a house, but I didn't pay cash for it — I just gave them a down payment. I since sold it for a small profit. . . ."

Anticipating the money for two long years brought her family together, she said.

"The children and I lived on practically nothing . . . my husband made good money, but he is a gambler — a legal gambler on the stock market — and there was never enough left to go around.

"When we found out about the money, it brought the family together . . . we seemed to change. It was the first time in our lives that we really worked and planned together. We became very close because we sat around and talked about how we were going to spend it for two years. But," she admits, "it kinda gets you down just waiting and waiting and being poor.

"AFTER it (the money) was gone we started fighting. They kept saying 'why didn't we spend it this way . . . why did you spent it that way' . . . but they were there to spend it and we all had fun."

The family did learn a few lessons, she admits:

"You can sure waste a lot of money on cars, and the stock market is a bad investment."

How did her friends take her instant wealth?

"I never lost a friend," she says with a smile. "I thought that when you got money you had to get new friends. It's not the case. And, would you believe, not one of them asked for any money or anything — they were just friends and still are."

BEFORE the windfall, Mrs. Gearin says, the children seemed to be "all headed for trouble". One of the boys, she claims, was saved from a two-year jail term because of the money. The boy, Leonard Jr., 24, is now in Australia in a small furniture business, started with money from the inheritance.

Another son, Fred, 18, is going to a vocational school to become an electronics engineer. Her two daughters are both in schools — Mary studying education at the College of the Siskiyous near Mt. Shasta, and Jean in real estate school.

"I tried to spread it (the money) evenly," Mrs. Gearin says frankly, "but I think Mary got the most. We considered her 'the smart one' so I gave her $6,000 to go to college. But she got an apartment and got some fancy furniture, threw some parties and I don't think has much left, either. But it sure made her a different person.

"IT MADE us all different," Mrs. Gearin says.

"The family needed this — it was our extradition from slavery. But all of a sudden when we realized we were broke, we decided there was a brand new world out there . . . we all got smart.

"We realize now the fun is over and we should all go to school and settle down. That's what we're doing. Even me," the newly enrolled teacher candidate says.

WOULD she do the same thing again — spend it all in less than two years?

"It probably would be smarter to go out and buy a few things — a fur coat and a Cadillac — and then invest the rest and live off the investment," she says pensively.

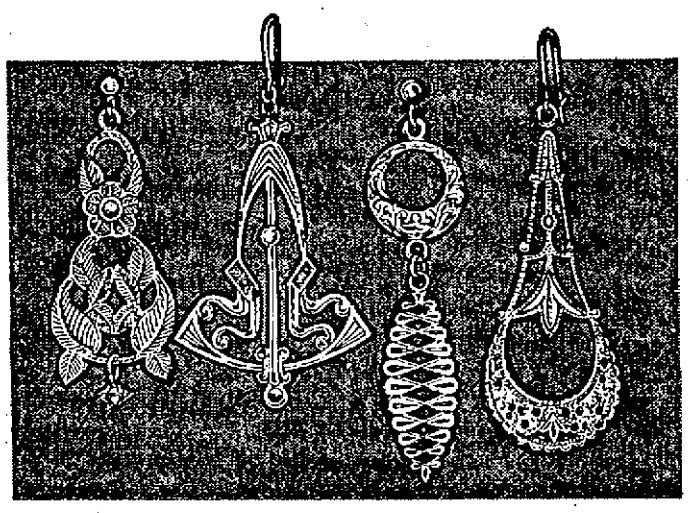

But would she?

"I'd do exactly the same thing I did — blow it."

Black leaders secretly map '72 strategy

JULIAN BOND
'Favorite-Son' Strategy

By AUSTIN SCOTT
Associated Press

NORTHLAKE, Ill. — Several dozen of the nation's most influential black politicians and political figures discussed 1972 election strategies in secret Saturday, behind security as tight as any all-black meeting since the 1967 Black Power Conference in Newark.

No participant could be found willing to discuss the agenda with reporters, even though portions of it had been leaked to the press early last week.

"I think they're really concerned with keeping the discussion as open and completely candid as possible," said one delegate. "I have never seen a more serious, more together group."

About 60 individuals were invited by Gary, Ind., Mayor Richard Hatcher, Georgia State Rep. Julian Bond, Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton and California State Assemblyman Willie Brown to discuss the most effective way black votes might be used.

Some of those who had arrived in time for the Friday night opening session included Vice Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta, Mayor William S. Hart of East Orange, N.J., state Sen. George Brown of Colorado, state Sen. Thomas Fortune of New York; the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago; Carl Holman, head of the Urban Coalition, and Roy Innis of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Others present were Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., chairman of the House "Black Caucus," and Rep. William Fauntroy, D-Washington, D.C.

The group took over the mezzanine meeting rooms and entire 14th floor of the 500-room O'Hareport Hotel, an $11.5-million venture alongside railroad yards in a seedy, industrial section of this Chicago suburb, 20 miles from downtown.

Arriving guests found their names were telephoned by the hotel staff to James Taylor, a personal security man for Hatcher, who decided whether they should be put on the 14th floor or elsewhere.

Guests who rode elevators to the 14th floor were met by muscular security guards, who refused entrance to anyone not a delegate. "This floor is off-limits," they kept saying.

Hotel employes scurried to steer other guests away from the circular stairway leading to the mezzanine before they could be turned back by the meeting's security force.

Delegates stopped talking to newsmen who some of them had known for years.

"Really, I can't say anything," said one. "They've really drawn a hard line against the press."

Items reported earlier to be on the agenda included a black "favorite son" strategy calculated to put a large number of independent black delegates into the 1972 Democratic National Convention. Other strategies reported under discussion included black participation, if any, in a fourth-party movement, and the feasibility of black vice presidential or presidential candidates.

Many of the delegates have said on other occasions that it is vitally important to the interest of black America to devise a strategy guaranteeing that black interests cannot be easily ignored by either major party next year.

Saturday's meeting is the third — and possibly not the last —in a series that began last May when Jackson called about 40 black politicians to a private Chicago meeting.

Dr. John Cashin, chairman of the predominantly black National Democratic Party of Alabama, which successfully seated some delegates at the Democratic National Convention in 1968, convened the second meeting last August in Mobile, Ala. It resulted in the formation of a Southern Black Caucus and a resolution to support no major presidential candiates at this point.

The favorite-son strategy has been advocated frequently by Bond.

In a number of states, he has argued, running well-known local black politicians as favorite-son presidential candidates would "invigorate black voters" at the same time that it puts blocs of independent black delegates into the Democratic National Convention.

The strategy would work, Bond said, in states where favorite-son candidates could win preferential primaries, or win important blocs of delegates in split-winner primaries or help turn out enough black voters to elect more independent delegates then would normally be chosen.

States he has specifically mentioned include Florida, Illinois, North Carolina, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Maryland and California.

O'Brien calls Nixon China trip 'a ploy'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien said Saturday night President Nixon's planned journey to Communist China is a ploy, "an old Republican trick," designed to get the minds of the people off problems at home.

O'Brien said the administrations economic policy is bankrupt.

"It's no wonder the President wants to run off to China," he said. "Faced with that kind of an economic mess, who wouldn't?

"It's an old Republican trick. If you're in enough trouble at home, find an issue abroad, try to get the people's minds off domestic problems."

O'Brien's speech was made at a St. Louis awards dinner honoring former President Harry S. Truman.

"Quite candidly," O'Brien said, "I believe we have the best opportunity in 40 years to defeat an incumbent president.

"There is every reason to believe Richard Nixon will be the first president since Herbert Hoover to seek re-election and fail."

O'Brien said Americans have seen a steady accumulation of domestic problems a challenge to the U.S. position of international leadership, and "an administration too bewildered or too incapable to act."

O'Brien said when there is a national problem requiring solution, Nixon "makes it perfectly clear that he recognizes the problem, maybe even announces big plans to combat it, and then does absolutely nothing.

In short, Mr. Nixon responds with what I have come to call a Nixolution," O'Brein said.

". . . There are Nixolutions for blacks, schoolchildren, the serviceman, the sick — and plenty of Nixolutions for Mr. Nixon's great silent majority to ponder.

". . . The day-to-day problems of the United States may go unheeded and unmet by our President," O'Brien said, "but just so we don't forget he's there, we can be sure, to be treated to an occasional television spectacular, bombshell announcements of foreign policy moves, and a terribly late, poorly planned, new economic program."

AIMS AT CALIFORNIA PRIMARY

Lindsay hits the trail west

United Press International

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay will test his presidential possibilities next week in a quick swing around the west, concentrating on the "make or break" primary state of California.

Although Lindsay has never said in so many words that he hopes to win the Democratic presidential nomination next year, few observers doubt that that is what he has in mind.

He has been building up a national image through television and frequent trips around the country ever since he became mayor in 1966.

Although nominally a Republican until last month, frequent association with Democratic causes and support for Democratic candidates paved the way for his party switch.

Lindsay's western tour begins today in Phoenix where he will address the state Democratic convention and talk informally with party leaders at a barbecue.

Dead-ernest presidential politicking will begin Monday in Los Angeles, where he will speak at a meeting of officials and confer with state leaders including California Democratic Chairman Charles Manatt.

An enthusistic political amateur named Ronald Sugarman founded a Lindsay-for-President Club in Los Angeles months ago. He probably will be at the airport to cheer tre mayor's arrival, but so far as is known there is no plan for the two men to meet.

On Tuesday, Lindsay goes on to San Francisco to meet bay area leaders and address the California League of Cities. The CLC speech, scheduled months in in advance, provided a specific occasion for the western tour.

Recent polls have indicated that California voters think well of Lindsay, and a primary victory next June in the nation's most populous state would be a considerable feather in his cap.

Jackson meets with Penusylvania chief

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., discussed his presidential ambitions with Gov. Milton J. Shapp Saturday but, as expected, won no endorsement.

"He and other candidates can feel free to come in and build whatever organization they desire, and test political trends," Shapp said. I'm uncommitted to any of the candidates, but will reserve the option to make a choice later."

McGovern sees $25 billion in industry pacts feeding all

Associated Press

Sen. George McGovern said Saturday the United States "could produce a decent job for every man and woman who wants to work" if $25-30 billion were diverted into contracts with industry to correct domestic problems.

Seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, McGovern talked to a Fresno airport rally on a swing through the San Joaquin Valley. He said the needed money could come from ending the Vietnam war, reducing U.S. forces in Western Europe and postponing or eliminating "some economically costly military frills like the anti-ballistic missile system that add no security."

McGovern said this would release $25-30 billion "if properly invested by intelligent leadership, the money could be used in contracting to private industry for new housing, antipollution programs, day care centers and health centers," he said.

McGovern proclaimed, to applause, "I'm sure this could produce a decent job for every man and woman who want work."

The South Dakota senaadded that one of the nation's highest goals should be elimination of malnutrition. He estimated this would cost $2.5 billion more than now is being spent to fight hunger.

"If we can spend $30 billion to make sure we are the first country to reach the moon, we can afford to spend $2.5 billion to make sure we are the first country to end hunger here on earth," McGovern said.

McGovern met two hours with farm labor leader Cesar Chavez Saturday morning near Bakersfield before attending a coffee-klatch ni that city.

Muskie raps Nixon on economy

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Me., accused President Nixon Saturday of failing to fulfill his economic promises.

Muskie told newsmen that the President's "economic policies are still wrong. They are not working . . . People won't accept an indefinite excuse . . . Nixon's plan seems to be to get us back to where he started in 1969 . . . He has not fulfilled his economic promises."

Asked about the possibility of a Negro vice presidential candidate next year, Muskie repeated his earlier statement that "I believe the American people are not prepared to support such a ticket."

Attica burial trouble linked to casket switch

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two inmates killed at Attica State Prison who were refused burial because of questioned identities were placed in the wrong caskets, the New York City medical examiner's office, said Saturday.

A third inmate whose identity was questioned by the clergyman who was to bury him turned out not to have died in the state police assault at the prison, but was a victim of pulmonary emphysema in the prison hospital three days before a state police raid. The identity of Frank Williams, 58, was questioned when no one at the funeral recognized him.

THE THREE inmates were among six Attica prisoners whose funeral was staged in a Brooklyn ghetto by militant black leaders. When the six caskets were taken to a Staten Island cemetery for burial, clergymen refused to bury them until their identities were made certain.

The incident at the cemetery was the second time within hours the identities were questioned. Earlier, a funeral procession for the men was stalled for more than two hours when the grandmother of one, Thomas Hicks, said the body in the coffin marked with Hicks' name was not her grandson.

The body of Thomas Hicks, according to Dr. Michael Baden, the assistant medical examiner, was placed in a casket marked Harold Thomas. Thomas' body was in Hicks' casket, but the grandmother did not view the second body.

The three bodies in question were removed to the New York City Medical examiner's office for positive identification. Three other inmates were buried at a cemetery in Staten Island.

The Rev. C. Herbert Oliver said two tags were found with the body identified as Harold Thomas, 41. One read, "black unknown." The other read, "Harold Thomas."

"I feel I cannot bury someone when I don't know who he is," Oliver said. "I feel that the authorities should exhaust all possibilities."

EARLIER in the afternoon, a cortege of six hearses bearing coffins draped with black nationalist and Puerto Rican flags moved two abreast through the streets of Bedford-Stuyvesant, a Brooklyn ghetto. Hundreds of residents gathered around the cortege. Some raised their fists in a black power salute, others wept openly.

The mourners dubbed the body of Hicks as the unknown soldier, and chanted "Rockefeller dirty dog," "Attica massacre" and "Attica remember."

2 BANKS BOMBED, LINKED TO ATTICA

Associated Press

Two late night bombings of Chase Manhattan Bank offices 3,000 miles apart were being investigated by police Saturday.

In Los Angeles, an explosion caused $15,000 damage late Friday night when it ripped through the 18th story office of the bank's international branch. In New York, a gasoline firebomb thrown at a Manhattan branch of the bank broke on the sidewalk and burned out harmlessly.

"We did it because of Rocky at Attica," an unidentified voice said in a telephone call to a wire service in New York. "Rocky" apparently referred to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, whose brother David is chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank. The governor backed the armed retaking of Attica Prison, partly seized by rioting convicts, which resulted in 42 deaths.

Millions of fish coat Fla. beaches

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Hours after a fish kill littered a 10-mile stretch of beaches along Scenic Highway, a much larger kill coated nearby Bass Hold Cove with a blanket of about three million menhaden, marine officials said Saturday.

The cause of death in the two latest kills was not immediately determined, but officials blamed years of pollution in the Escambia Bay and its feeder rivers for previous fish kills.

While the Bass Hold kill involved mostly young menhaden—trash fish used as bait, fertilizer and pet food—the earlier kill on Friday also included croakers, trout and mullet, all edible game fish.

7-man supreme court forces delay of cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court faces the start of a new term a week from Monday with a difficult docket and without two of its leading forces, Hugo L. Black and John M. Harlan.

This will be the first court in 35 years to sit without Black, who died early Saturday, the first in more than 16 without Harlan. The retirement of the two within the period of a week leaves only seven justices to deal with the biggest pileup of cases ever.

Almost no chance exists that their successors could be nominated by President Nixon and confirmed by the Senate by Oct. 4. As a result, several major disputes that were scheduled to be argued between Oct. 12 and Oct. 20 have been deferred until later in the session. These include four death-row appeals that test the constitutionality of capital punishment.

Justices may vote on a case only if they were on the bench for the oral argument. The seven who remain probably are divided over the death penalty and over less-than-unanimous jury verdicts and safeguards against self-incrimination, issues that also were postponed.

The two vacancies give Nixon an opportunity to try to swing the court to his "strict constructionist" viewpoint that principally involves a restrained judiciary and a reluctance to upset criminal convictions and legislative acts. His first two appointments, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Harry A. Blackmun, have proved to be the court's most conservative members.

The Burger-Blackmun nucleus should have little difficulty commanding a majority of five if like-minded jurists are selected to succeed Black and Harlan.

Black's departure Sept. 17 thinned the ranks of free-speech advocates and protectors of the right against self-incrimination. Harlan, while generally conservative, was suspicious of government eavesdropping and of police searches.

As the court stands now, the spectrum runs from Justice William O. Douglas on the left to Burger and Blackmun on the right. Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall tend to combine with Douglas. Shaded toward Burger and Blackmun, but not all the way, are Justices Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

With the retirement of Black, Douglas ranks first in seniority. He took his seat in 1939. Harlan's retirement Sept. 23 moves Brennan into second place. He has been on the bench since 1956.

2 dead, 5 hurt in 3 N.Y. shootouts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four New York policemen were attacked in three separate incidents Saturday. One patrolman and an assailant were killed and two patrolmen, two assailants and a bystander wounded.

The fourth patrolman escaped injury.

Housing Patrolman Arthur Pelo, 23, suffered a fatal head wound as he and his 25-year-old partner, Nicholas Capezza, approached a holdup suspect "with a Fu Manchu moustache" in the street near a Brooklyn housing project. The suspect whipped out a pistol and started shooting as the two officers drew near.

Capezza suffered a minor ankle wound, and a bystander was shot in the abdomen.

The patrolmen returned the gunman's fire, and a man answering his description was found a little later in the basement of a burned-out building near the scene of the shootout. He had been shot three times in the abdomen.

Pelo died in the Brookdale Hospital Center, where the unidentified bystander and the suspect also unidentified, were under treatment. Capezza was treated and released.

In another Brooklyn incident, Harry M. Knight, 37, was shot and killed by Patrolman Jerome Walker when he attacked Walker with a banister post.

In Manhattan, an alleged holdup man was shot three times by Patrolman Robert Broccoli one of two policemen who said they caught him in the act of robbing a Gypsy cab driver. They said he shot at Broccoli as the patrolmen approached.

The unidentified suspect, in critical condition, was admitted to Sydenham Hospital.

Trio slain by hunter identified

DOWNIEVILLE (AP) — The three men slain by a berserk hunter at a Yuba River campground have been identified by Sierra County Sheriff Sam Doyle as Russell K. Wong, 22, Wendel Lee and Daniel Young, both 21.

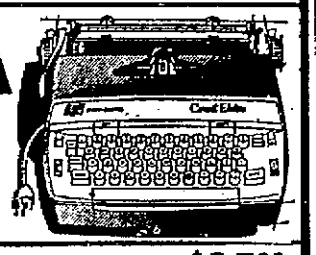

A 21-year-old San Francisco man is being held in the rifle slayings.

"We have him — Carter Yuen — in custody for investigation of murder," the sheriff said at a brief news conference Saturday.

The sheriff said "no comment" when asked if drugs were involved in the Friday slayings. A sheriff's deputy had said "there was evidence of use of narcotics" and "a lot of marijuana" was found at the youths' camp.

Ronald Gong, 14, was wounded in the attack. Doyle said all five, including Yuen, are of Chinese descent and from San Francisco.

OD stands for overdose—it means real trouble to doctors

"You really hate to go in there (the emergency room.) But you do—but first you gown up. For you know they're going to barf all over you. You and the walls. The nurses don't want to go in there either. They know they'll probably get slapped around. You go in with several guys; you need someone to hold them down. They get pretty violent sometimes. But you've got to go to work, because they might be dead in two hours if you don't. They also may be sitting up in bed after six hours—and they won't thank you one bit for what you've done for them."

—Emergency room physician

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

The problem is a person known as an OD.

The initials, to doctors, used to mean right eye — or officer of the day if you worked in a military hospital.

Now OD stands for overdose — drug overdose.

And OD is being written onto medical charts more and more in hospital emergency rooms in Long Beach.

"A year ago you'd expect to see an occasional OD," says Dr. Jerry Hughes, director of emergency room services at See. Mary's Hospital of Long Beach.

"Then about eight or nine months ago, a peak (of cases) began, and it doesn't seem to be tapering off."

At St. Mary's alone, emergency-room teams are treating 80 to 120 overdosed patients each month.

"There are other emergency rooms in this town too, Dr. Hughes notes. "I'd say the city is treating 200 to 300 ODs every month. And there probably are 50 on the street for every one we see."

Dr. Hughes says that only a small percentage of drug-overdose victims are persons attempting to commit suicide.

"The biggest offenders are young users trying to get a high.

"Most of them are 'downers' — persons using barbiturates. And the most popular drugs are 'reds' — scobarbital.

"Apparently daily life is so painful for some people, they have to be insulated from it. So they walk around at half-mast for days at a time, and they enjoy that."

They not only walk, but sometimes they drive.

The patient was only 20 years old and on barbs. He was brought to St. Mary's emergency room twice in one week, both times as a result of an automobile accident.

"We put 150 stitches in his face," recalls Dr. Jerry Hughes.

The very biggest problem right now, says Dr. Hughes, are the street reds.

These are not activist Communists — but rather secobarbital capsules manufactured by others than ethical pharmaceutical firms.

"A lot of them are being manufactured in Mexico, I think. The patients are brought in comatose, or semi-comatose. You don't know the number they've taken and you don't know the potency. And the trouble with street reds is that they vary in potency, so you have a problem even if you know how many they've taken.

"There are no specific antidotes for most of these drugs. Sometimes the patients require intensive care, they have to have assistance for respiration. The gag reflex becomes depressed, so they aspirate vomitus and they get aspiration pneumonia. We've had a couple of aspiration pneumonia cases recently.

"People are living with a misconception about drug overdosing. They think that all we have to do is to give someone a shot, and he'll be all right. That's not true.

"We have to treat vigorously to keep them alive. The only thing we have going for us is that most of the drugs they take are short-acting. That means we have to support them medically for only two to 24 hours."

If the OD does die, it probably will be respiratory failure that does him in, says Dr. Hughes.

Or withdrawal.

Withdrawal?

"Certainly. You hear all this talk about how rough heroin withdrawal is. Well, they (heroin users) don't die from it. But the chronic barbiturate abuser can."

And although barbiturates are thought to be sedative drugs, which they are of course, the OD victim doesn't act very sedated.

"They slap, kick and swear at the nurses," Dr. Hughes describes. "They may have convulsions. And here is when they may stop breathing.

Or they may lie there. A nurse walks by and the patient strikes out at her. Then the patient goes back to sleep.

A doctor prepares to pass a lavage tube into a patient. The patient suddenly opens his mouth and bites the doctor's finger with all the strength he can muster.

Another problem are the "uppers" — the patient on amphetamines, the so-called pep pills.

"A guy who has been strung out four or five days will come in and say he can't crash—can't get to sleep. He'll be malnourished and often dehydrated.

"Give me something so I can crash," the patient will insist.

"Some of them become psychotic —very paranoid," says Dr. Hughes,

BIGGER THAN BARBS is the problem of booze, says Dr. Hughes, who likes to put things in perspective.

"The alcohol problem makes the OD problem look like a Baptist Sunday School picnic.

"Ninety per cent of all crimes of violence invovle people who are drunk.

"Seventy per cent of all single-car accidents involve a driver who is drunk.

"Ninety-five per cent of all patients brought to the emergency room by the Police Department for treatment are persons who are drunk.

"Many persons mix barbs and alcohol.

Barbs and booze—each is a big problem. Put them together and you have a giant problem."

DR. HUGHES shows no hesitation in assessing the problem drug use and drug abuse.

Some of his observations:

"There are two features of barbiturate use that are always present: All users are liars — they tell you anything—and, secondly, there's a good chance they'll go back on the drug after you've finished treating them.

"Young people have little guidance. People are afraid to tell them they shouldn't do something.

"Discipline has to begin when a child is five years old. Otherwise kids will grow up wondering.

"A 15-year-old is not capable of making big decisions. How can someone who is not educated make an educated decision?

"The threat of nuclear war has nothing to do with what's happening. It's a poor excuse.

"The age range of our OD cases has been 12 to 82 years."

Doctor: "Do you want your child to grow up to be a pillhead?"

Patient, an 18-year-old female, in the emergency room, an OD: "No. Of course not."

Addicts face death

Beach Police Department narcotics squad "The victim gets no medical help and just simply sleeps it off."

What is the root of the problem?

Urban pressures. Peer pressures. Education pressures.

That's the summary of one psychiatrist.

"They all figure into it," he said. "Drugs are an escape hatch—an escape fom reality. Young people are taking drugs much as their elders take alcohol."

Drugs are cleaner. It takes a smaller quantity to become intoxicated. It seldom makes a person physically sick as does alcohol. There is little or no hangover problem.

However, the body chemistry gets rid of quantities of alcohol through the urine. Drugs remain in the body until they are completely used up.

And, they are more addicting than alcohol.

Why are drug overdose statistics on the rise?

Drugs are easier to get—in many instances easier for young people than buying a six-pack of beer.

We are living in a drug oriented society. The average family medicine chest is a McGee's closet of potentially addicting drugs.

We take a stimulant in the morning to get us moving; a depressant by noon to slow us down and a sleeping pill at night to put us to sleep.

"The damn doctors are too quick to dispense with drugs," said one state narcotics agent. "They seem to think peace of mind, happiness and calm is a pharmaceutical by-product."

MANY TIMES to uncap the pressure, a doctor will prescribe a mild sedative to help a young person cope with life. Here is an actual case history of one overdose victim that began on a doctor's prescription pad:

A college-age girl, high strung, rattled by parent pressure, peer counter-pressure and a class load that would befog the brain of a genius is examined by the family physician. He notes the nervous tension and prescribes a Valium — a mild sedative — one tablet three times a day.

It works for awhile, but a friend offers her a faster solution — reds, the street name for the M-M sized Seconal, a barbiturate.

She increases her dosage until she's up to 10 a day and higher than a kite. She is arrested for being under the influence. Her parents won't believe the police that she's addicted. After all, she's taking a prescription drug, they think.

She cools it until the heat is off. Her body chemistry—once used to 10 reds a day—now has washed itself clean of the drug. She gets pressured and pops 10 reds—the amount that made the world right before.

Her tolerance level has dropped. She ODs.

At an emergency hospital doctors pump her stomach and save her life. Police file a complaint. The parents are angry. Their daughter is not an addict, they say.

IT IS AN OLD story to police.

Law enforcement is ineffective in handling the drug addiction problem and most policemen admit it.

The community tells the police to arrest the pusher and see in this a cleanup of the problem.

"As long as someone is willing to buy there will always be a pusher," said Sgt. Hill. "We have to eliminate the demand."

Education, he believes, is the key, but there is too much confusion over how the education should be handled.

"Education must start in the home, be continued in the schools and the churches," he said. "The home, however, is the key."

For those already hooked, education must also coincide with effective law enforcement and rehabilitation "in that order," he said.

Rehabilitation centers fumble through one theory after another, lem — finding a way t let off steam but never reach the heart of the problem—finding a way to let off steam from today's pressure cooker existence.

There is little or no coordination between agencies — city, state, federal or private—in drug rehabilitation.

"Everybody has a program, so they get funds to try a new experiment. Many duplicate the work done somewhere else," Sgt. Gill said.

"Meanwhile the number of deaths from overdose continues to mount."

HOW SERIOUS is it?

A 12-year-old boy overdosed from heroin in Long Beach.

A 21-year-old Bellflower girl is found dead from an overdose on the garage floor of her apartment.

A 16-year-old runaway lies in a coma in Orange County Medical Center unidentified for days.

A 17-year-old boy is saved from death by an emergency tracheotomy after an overdose. Two days later he is back in the same hospital, the tube still in his throat. Diagnosis: drug overdose.

The list and the tragedy goes on and on.

Hawaii volcano spews lava 300 feet high

HILO, Hawaii (UPI) — On-again off-again Kilauea Volcano sent fountains of lava 100 feet into the air Saturday after a 10-hour pause following volcanic activity that sent lava soaring 300 feet.

The eruption on the island of Hawaii started Friday night with fountaining from a fissure that pushed the lava southward. It was the first time in 52 years that eruptive activity moved in the volcano's southwest rift zone.

Six killed as plane crashes on takeoff

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Six persons were killed Saturday when a twin-engine plane crashed moments after takeoff at General Mitchell Field.

The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department said the victims included three men and three women. Three of the persons were tentatively identified as Milwaukee-area residents. The names of the victims were not immediately available.

It was believed the plane was cleared for flight to Minneapolis.

Unemployed M.A.

I have earned a typewriting achievement certificate and an M.A. degree (master of accuracy) from Long Beach City College. Since I have small children, I would like to work at home. I live near California State College at Long Beach and I thought I might be able to type term papers for the students. Can ACTION LINE find out how I can obtain such work? H.S., Long Beach.

CSCLB maintains a list of qualified typists who want to do work for students. You can have your name placed on this list by contacting Betty Meacham in the college's student affairs office at 498-4972. You also could advertise in the school's newspaper, The Forty-Niner, by calling 597-0971. Another method of obtaining typing jobs is to post a notice on one of the school's bulletin boards. Most colleges have a similar referral service for typists. For more information, check with each school's student affairs office.

Low fat cheese

My husband is on a low cholesterol diet and is not supposed to have cheese unless it's made from skim milk. Other than uncreamed cottage cheese, I haven't been able to find out which cheeses are made from skim milk. Can you find out? Mrs. C.A.R., Los Alamitos.

Cottage cheese is the only one made from skim milk, but most cheeses are made from partially skimmed milk and have a low cholesterol level, according to Sara Cina with the Dairy Council of California. She said the following are made from partially skimmed milk: Edam, Gruyere, Limburger, one type of mozzarella (check the label), and Swiss. Gjetost is made from whey, the watery part of milk, and has no fat. Miss Cina is sending you a booklet called "Cheese" that lists kinds, origins, basic ingredients, and how to use and store cheese. Others can write for the free booklet to the Dairy Council of California, 3900 West Third St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90020.

Nixon talks to dock foes, sees pact soon

dent put forth his new economic policy last month.

Nixon, headed toward an historic meeting in Alaska with the emperor of Japan, said he still intends to go to China despite the current turmoil in that country.

In a briefing for Pacific Northwest news executives, the President also said he expects to confer with Communist Party Chief Mao Tse-tung during his planned visit to China as well as premier Chou en-lai.

He said China's internal turbulence has not interfered with planning for his trip, scheduled before next May 1, but said U.S. officials did not know exactly what was going on inside China and "it would be presumptuous for me to contend that we know."

NIXON FLEW from the nation's capital Saturday morning to Kalispell, Mont., where he dumped some concrete in the Big Libby Dam under construction. Then, in a driving rainstorm, he flew to Portland to stay overnight.

Today he will visit the Hanford, Wash., atomic plant and then go to Anchorage, Alaska, for a meeting with Emperor Hirohito — the first visit in history by a reigning Japanese emperor to foreign soil.

The first day of Nixon's two-day visit to four Pacific Northwest states was also marked by the first anti-war heckling he has encountered in several months.

A small, noisy, group of demonstrators tried to drown him out at the Portland Airport with cries of "Freeze Nixon, Not Wages" and chants against the war in Vietnam.

Others shouted at him when he entered the downtown Portland hotel. Police arrested three of a crowd of about 300 demonstrators who clustered around the hotel Saturday night, chanting and making obscene gestures toward Nixon's 7th floor suite.

Nixon also told the news executives:

—The U.S. and the Soviet Union will eventually reach an agreement to limit offensive and defensive strategic weapons because "in terms of strategic missiles, there is basically a balance between the United States and the Soviet Union, so that neither power is going to be able to maintain a clear enough superiority that it could launch a pre-emptive attack on the other."

—He has no plans to meet Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin even if the Russian leader extends his scheduled visit to Canada to include a stop in the United States.

—He is dissatisfied with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and has instructed Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton to "look a the whole bureaucracy with regard to the handling of Indian affairs and shake it up good."

—He will consider a woman for one of the two vacancies on the Supreme Court, but the most important qualification was that the appointees "share the general judicial philosophy and approach of the two men now on the court that I've appointed."

Nixon's visit with Hirohito at Anchorage late Sunday night — early Monday morning in the rest of the United States — is unprecedented for both countries.

The President and the emperor will mee in a giant hangar at Anchorage's sprawling Elmendorf Air Force Base, which will be thrown open to an expected crowd of thousands of Anchorage's 46,137 citizens.

Israel told to stop Jerusalem changes

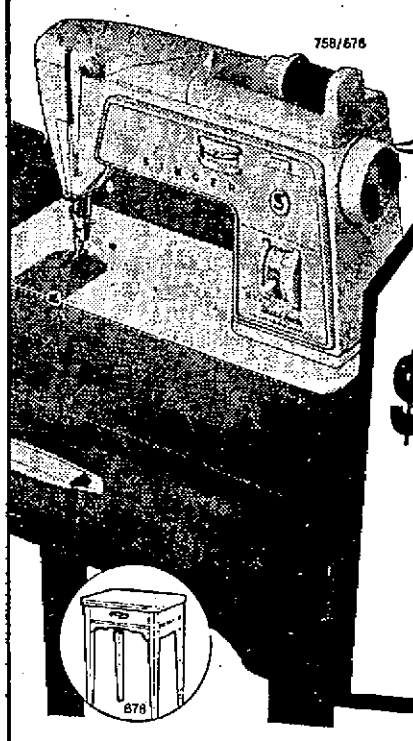

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Security Council issued a new demand Saturday that Israel halt changes in the status of the occupied Jordanian sector of Jerusalem. It asked Secretary-General Thant to report back on results in 60 days.

The resolution, adopted by a council vote of 14-0, was designed as a followup to two others adopted by the council in 1968 and 1969. They called upon Israel to rescind all measures taken to alter the status of Jerusalem since Israel occupied the whole of it in the 1967 Middle East war.

SEN. ALAN CRANSTON
"Set a Proper Example"

Panama Zone in testimony

By LOU CANNON
I.P-T Capitol Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Panama Canal Zone should be returned to the Republic of Panama, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., declared Saturday.

In testimony prepared for submission to a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Monday, Cranston said that the zone was not essential for the defense of the United States. The continued exercise of U.S. jurisdiction there, he contended, incites militants "who point to the Canal Zone as a colonialistic outrage, fenced apart from the horrible slums which neighbor alongside.

"We remain in the Canal Zone waiting for the next anti-American riots to occur," Cranston said. "If we are to behave as the greatest nation in the world, we must set a proper example and solve frictions between nations before . . . the guns are fired and blood is drawn."

Cranston said the United States should continue to own and operate the canal itself as "a world utility" and retain all rights to its defense.

The House Committee before which Cranston will testify has been conducting hearings on the possibility of a new U.S.-Panama treaty.

POW kin to back President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite growing frustration among its members, the largest group of Americans related to U.S. prisoners of war appears likely to reject calls for a tough antiwar policy in place of its traditional role of neutrality.

A showdown on the issue is expected next week at the second annual convention of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

Both factions predict that the league will choose to remain "nonpolitical" and that the decision will lead some members to quit, particularly those most dissatisfied with the administration's Vietnam policy.

FOR THEIR part, administration officials acknowledged that President Nixon is certain to get plenty of criticism, but they are confident that the majority of POW families will stand by the President and his strategy of gradual withdrawal.

Nevertheless, even league officials are now voicing disappointment with the administration's response — or nonresponse, as they see it — to the Viet Cong's July 1 offer to exchange prisoners if the United States agrees to withdraw all of its troops from South Vietnam by the end of 1971.

Red spy defected over love affair

LONDON, Sunday (UPI) — A love affair with a British woman led the defection of the senior Soviet KGB intelligence officer who disclosed large-scale Soviet espionage activities in Britain, two British newspapers said Sunday.

The Sunday Telegraph and the News of the World said the woman was with the defecter in a hideout under police guard.

"He told officials who questioned him for British intelligence that he had been influenced to seek sanctuary by his affair" with the woman, the Sunday Telegraph said.

According to the News of the World, "His final decision to come over (defect) was made as he and his lover talked while listening to a record of his favorite composer of his homeland, Shostakovich."

The newspapers gave no source for their versions of the defection, which led to Britain's ouster of 105 Soviet officials for alleged espionage activities.

British officials declined comment.

British security knew the Russian official — masquerading as a Soviet trade mission clerk—really was a spymaster and "that he loved the goods things of life . . . dining in fashionable restaurants, drinking in top clubs and pubs," News of the World said.

"All the signs were that he was mellowing under the influence of London. Then the woman came on the scene . . . British intelligence's first contact with the spymaster was made through her," it said.

The Russian, described as in his early 40s and separated from his wife, "stopped believing in the work he was doing . . . began seeing the oppresive effects of the Soviet system . . . bit by bit he started to come over. He began to pass limited information through the girl to our agents. Eventually, through her, he met them at a London restaurant," according to the newspaper.
restaurant," according to the newspaper.

British security had hoped the Russian would stay at his job and pass on steady reports of Soviet spying, it said, "but it was not to be. The spymaster wanted freedom."

News of the World said the defector has a son in the Soviet Union and a daughter at a British school. It said since his defection the daughter changed schools for fear of a kidnap reprisal.

Russians angry, deny spy charge

LONDON (AP) — The Russians reacted angrily Saturday to charges they were operating a massive spy network in Britain as Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home flew to the United Nations and an almost certain confrontation with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Sir Alec claims Gromyko ignored his protests that led up to the expulsion Friday of 105 Soviet diplomats and other officials, based on documents the Foreign Office said came from a senior agent of the KGB, the Soviet secret police, who defected to London.

SMILING, Sir Alec refused to go further with newsmen at London airport on the charge that the officer "brought with him certain information and documents, including plans for infiltration or agents for the purpose of sabotage."

British officials said the Soviet underground activities ranged from trying to sabotage the British-French supersonic airliner Concorde to exploiting the crisis in Northern Ireland.

In Moscow, a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman said he was "personally surprised and indignant," but the official news agency Tass went further and charged the British Foreign Office with "the fabrication of deliberately false accusations."

"THE British Foreign Office . . . asserts without adducing any proof, without any grounds whatsoever, that a number of staff members of the U.S.S.R. Embassy and other Soviet institutions in London are allegedly engaged in activity incompatible with their official functions," Tass declared.

Tass then asserted the "right-wing British newspapers are trying to outdo one another in creating in the country an atmosphere of anti-Sovietism, in fanning up a 'spy scare' and in slanderous inventions with regard to the workers of Soviet institutions in London."

The "anti-Soviet hysteria" and the "false accusations," Tass continued, "can be explained by none other than a desire of British conservative circles to hamper at all costs the process of detente that began to show in Europe and to poison the political climate on the continent by arousing suspiciousness and animosity."

"IT IS difficult to regard such actions in any other way but as a relapse of cold war," Tass concluded.

The mystery man — dubbed by the British press as Comrade X—went over to the West weeks or months ago. He is now under heavy guard in the English countryside.

Authoritative sources said the Soviet Embassy made a request to interview the agent shortly after his defection, but he snubbed them.

The Soviet people have not been told of the defection, which is being heralded in the British press as the most important since World War II.

One Soviet official in London told reporters: "We have been ordered to stay silent."

THE British government informed allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of the decision to expel 90 Soviet officials within two weeks and ban 15 others now out of the country from returning.

Diplomatic sources and British newspapers predicted wide repercussions in the West about the KGB agent's revelations.

"His help will prove invaluable in efforts to crack the complex Soviet spy network in Britain and other NATO nations, particularly American and West Germany," said the Daily Sun.

Officials at Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, reported Saturday night that all 140 seats on the first flight to Moscow, leaving London Monday, were reserved, indicating that the expelled Russians may begin quitting Britain well before the two-week deadline.

The airline gave no details of who booked the seats for the 3½-hour direct flight aboard the Ilyushin IL62 jet.

Warehouse fire damage $50,000

A greater alarm fire Saturday night caused $50,000 damage to a south Los Angeles warehouse used for storing foam rubber, authorities reported.

Firemen said the warehouse was thought to be owned by the Western Synthetic Felt Co. Smoke from the 50-x200-foot structure, at 825 E. 61st St., could be seen throughout the Los Angeles basin.

Soviet leader flew unexpectedly to Budapest after visiting Tito

Brezhnev, Tito sign pact, but no mention of China

BELGRADE (UPI) — Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union announced Saturday they had agreed to intensify cooperation in both foreign policy and the emonomic field.

A joint statement issued following the visit of Leonid I. Brezhnev said the Soviet Communist party leader and President Tito agreed that this cooperation would be felt in relations between Communist parties of both countries and their governments.

Yugoslav sources said this was a point which Brezhnev emphasized during three days of talks in Yugoslavia and which Tito tried to water down, for fear it would compromise Yugoslavia's hard-won independence from the Kremlin.

In return, the statement said, Brezhnev reaffirmed Moscow's guarantee of Yugoslavia's right to control its internal affairs and "positively assessed" its status as a nonaligned nation outside the Soviet bloc.

Brezhnev slipped quietly into neighboring Hungary Saturday on the beginning of a tour to brief Soviet bloc nations on the outcome of the talks with Tito.

The Yugoslav sources said the government, which still does not trust Soviet goodwill, wants to keep the "cooperation" to a minimum. The statement did not make clear just how extensive it would be.

The statement called for "the intensification of cooperation between the League of Communists of Yugoslavia and the Soviet Communist party, and Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union, in the interest of their efforts to build socialism and communism, to safeguard peace and international security."

The wording indicated that this passage referred mostly to foreign policy — an area where Tito has always tried to go his own way. But there was no mention of China, indicating Brezhnev had failed to enlist Yugoslav aid against Peking.

The statement went on to "emphasize that the two sides are confident that there are great possibilities for the expansion and intensification of economic and scientific-technical cooperation," it specifically mentioned trade, cooperation in production, designs and in research work.

An intergovernmental committee for economic and scientific cooperation, it said, would guide this cooperation.

The statement affirmed Yugoslav independence directly by saying that "methods of building socialism which reflect experiences and specifics of development of individual countries are the affair of the people and working class in individual countries."

Brezhnev was seen off at Belgrade airport earlier Saturday with a brass band and a kiss from President Tito, his host for three days of talks. The Bulgarian government announced it will give the Soviet Communist party general secretary a full ceremonial welcome when he arrives in Sofia today.

But Brezhnev's arrival in Budapest was almost a secret operation. There was no prior announcement that he was coming, and the fact that he had come "for a short friendly visit" was not even announced officially until he had been here nearly two hours.

U.N. delays debate on U.S. in Korea

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly voted Saturday to defer until next year debate on the proposed withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea.

The vote was 60-28 to leave the question for the 1972 assembly agenda, with 22 abstentions.

Facts You Should Know About Opals

By Arch Shinder
of LAWSON'S JEWELERS
Downtown Long Beach Only

OPAL, one of the most ancient of all gemstones, is the birthstone for the month of October. For those who follow the stars, the Opal is so popular it not only serves as the jewel for those born under the influence of Libra, the Scales, but also Cancer, the Crab, from June 22 to July 1st.

Opal is the gemstone of good fortune. In fact, it is far more preferable than a crystal ball for fortune tellers. It is claimed that by gazing into an Opal one can predict the future! This is due to the fact that an Opal includes all the colors of the rainbow — red, green, blue, purple, yellow, etc., and the interplay of these colors to present to the viewer a complete mirage of colors. If one wears an Opal ring, you possess a view into the future.

Opal has been called by the ancients "the captive rainbow." An Opal, it is said, can turn away anger, the wearer be urbane and courteous, and is the symbol of hope.

The name Opal derives from the Sanskrit term "UPALA" which meant precious stone. This is just an example of how, historically, Opals have always been considered a precious gem that will bring hope and good fortune to its possessor.

Queen Victoria thought so highly of Opals that each of her daughters was given an Opal on her wedding day.

In Roman days, a famous senator so prized his Opal ring that he chose exile and loss of all his possessions rather than to surrender the Opal ring to Marc Anthony. Who knows, perhaps if Marc Anthony had gained possession of that Opal ring he would have been triumphant and successful! Instead, deprived of an Opal, he met disaster.

We are fortunate to have the largest selection of Opals in this area.

If you desire further information, please contact us at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Avenue, Downtown Long Beach only and we will be most happy to answer your questions.

Rogers: U.N. will seat 2 Chinas by close vote

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Secretary of State William P. Rogers left the United Nations Saturday predicting victory — if only by a close vote — in the fight to seat two Chinas in the world body.

"I think the momentum is in our favor," Rogers told newsmen. "We think we'll win, but the vote could be close."

Friday the United States moved to bar Nationalist China's ouster while admitting Peking won a 65-47 General Assembly procedural vote to put the item on the agenda. But many U.N. diplomats figure that when the showdown comes next month, enough nations who favored debating the item will vote against it to send it down to defeat.

Rogers made it plain that he disagreed with this assessment as he interrupted his U.N. stay to join President Nixon for Nixon's meeting today in Alaska with Japan's Emperor Hirohito.

The secretary of state plans to return about Oct. I for a stay of 10 days, in which he expects to meet around 65 foreign ministers attending the General Assembly opening.

His main private parley so far has been with Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko. The two focused on possibilities for East-West negotiations on European security and mutual force cuts, a matter Nixon intends to pursue further with Gromyko during their scheduled White House session next Wednesday.

In a brief news conference after a courtesy call on U.N. Secretary-General U Thant and the new General Assembly President, Adam Melik, Rogers also said that the U.S. effort to promote a Mideast settlement, starting with an Egyptian-Israeli accord on opening the Suez Canal, "is certainly not dead — it's quite alive." Rogers said Israel and Egypt have asked the United States to continue its peace seeking role.

4 U.S. physicians meet China official

HONG KONG (UPI) — Four American physicians, including heart specialist Paul Dudley White, Saturday met with Kuo Mo-jo, vice chairman of the National People's Congress in Peking, the New China News Agency reported.

Leading members of Chinese medical organizations also were at the meeting, the Agency said. The other American doctors, and their wives, were Samuel Rosen, Edmund Grey Dimond and Victor W. Sidel.

Panel to study Congress urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., Saturday proposed creation of a 15-member blue-ribbon citizen's committee to study Congress and recommend ways of making it more effective.

The former vice president said in a state ment Congress must make changes in organization and role to meet its growing responsibilities, especially in the national-security field.

U.S. DECLASSIFIES EVIDENCE

Cuba 'sub base' data bared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The intelligence evidence of a possible Soviet submarine base in Cuba last year was a moored submarine tender, two barracks, a soccer field, basketball courts and possible swimming area, a House subcommittee reported Saturday.

U.S. intelligence officers told congressmen at the time, in heavily censored testimony released Saturday, that it could have been a rest-and-recreation facility for Soviet sailors rather than a base.

Only an intelligence briefing on the possible Soviet submarine facility in Cienfuegos Harbour was released by the House inter-American affairs subcommittee after what Chairman Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., called a year-long "tug-of-war" with the Nixon administration.

The administration refused to brief the subcommittee on diplomatic moves in the U.S.-Soviet confrontation until after it announced the Soviets had abandoned the facility. This briefing remains classified.

Defense Intelligence Agency colonels told the subcommittee last Sept. 30 that the submarine tender's presence and the rapid construction activity "appears intended to provide the Soviets with an increased capability to support the naval operations in the Caribbean area, including those of submarines."

But they also emphasized that they did not know the Soviets' intentions. They said it was possible the Soviets are conducting a mobility exercise or checking their ability to establish "a field — or a hasty-type installation."

Asked by Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., how the barracks could be explained if the Soviets were not building a base, Col. John Bridge, chief of DIA's Soviet-area office, replied:

"Well, a possible explanation, sir, would be that it was a facility for rest and recreation of crews of Soviet naval vessels that came into the harbor. We have no indication that this has actually been done that this is — I want to be careful about this — this is a possibility."

They said the rapid construction, on Alcatraz Island in Cienfuegos Harbor between mid-August and mid-September, included six smaller buildings besides the two wooden barracks and sports fields and repair of a small pier possibly for use for swimming.

President Nixon's communications directors, Herbert Klein, announced Nov. 3 the Soviets had abandoned the facility after the Administration applied "strong but quiet diplomacy."

Klein said then that there was "no question but that they tried to build a submarine base.

British soldiers shoot to quell riot in Ulster

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British soldiers fired rubber bullets into a crowd of rock-throwing Catholic youths Saturday at the end of a day of Catholic civil rights demonstrations and prayers for peace in Northern Ireland.

Before the demonstrations got under way a bomb exploded in a hotel in northern Belfast, shattering windows and walls. There were no reports of injuries in the explosion.

About 40 British soldiers charged into a group of youths in the bogside district of Londonderry. The soldiers fired rubber bullets into the crowd when one of the youths hurled a bomb packed with nails at the advancing troop.

In Belfast, demonstrations were held at the Long Kesh Internment Camp, where the Ulster government is detaining persons suspected of membership in the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

GEN. SAM C. PHILLIPS
Receives High Award

Langley honor for general

An Air Force general will be the 14th person in history to be awarded a highly-prized honor from the Smithsonian Institution.

Lt. Gen. Sam C. Phillips, commander of the Air Force's Space and Missile Systems Organization (SAMSO) in El Segundo will receive the Institute's Langley Medal today in public ceremonies in Washington, D.C.

Previous recipients of the medal were Wilbur and Orville Wright, 1909; Glenn H. Curtiss and Gustave Eiffel, 1913; Charles A. Lindbergh, 1927; Charles Matthew Manley (posthumously), 1929; Adm. Richard E. Byrd, 1929; Joseph S. Ames, 1935; Jerome Hunsaker, 1955; Robert H. Goddard (posthumously), 1960; Hugh Latimer Dryden, 1962; Alan B. Shepard Jr., 1964, and Dr. Wernher Von Braun, 1967.

THE LANGLEY Medal was established in memory of Dr. Samuel Pierpont Langley, secretary of the Smithsonian Institute from 1887 to 1906, who did early research on the physics of flight and who built flyable aircraft models as early as 1896.

Established in 1909 by the Smithsonian's board of regents, the Langley Medal has been awarded only 13 times for "especially meritorious investigations in connections with the sciences of aeronautics and astronautics."

Gen. Phillips will be honored for the contributions he made while director of NASA's Apollo Manned Space Flight Program from 1964 to 1969.

The ceremonies scheduled for 5 p.m. in front of the original Smithsonian Buildings in Washington will commemorate the 125th anniversary of the organization.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger will be the main speaker and James E. Webb, former administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) will present the medal.

Texas plans trade office in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The state of Texas, whose foreign trade totaled $1.5 billion last year, will open a permanent trade promotion office in Mexico City next Friday similar to the one Mexico has in Dallas.

Gov. Preston Smith, state legislators and businessmen will be on hand for the inauguration of the office at the Hotel Maria Isabel-Sheraton.

The announcement was made by James H. Havey, director of international commerce for the State of Texas.

Havey, who arrived last Wednesday in Mexico City to oversee preparations for the event, said Texas is now an industrial power with a foreign trade volume comparable to that of several nations.

"Mexican industrialists save freight costs and receive goods more rapidly if they buy in Texas," Havey said.

"Our office will serve Mexican businessmen by putting them in contact with potential customers in Texas.

POPE PAUL Says "No"

Catholic bishops to meet

By PATRICK O'KEEFE

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Should the Roman Catholic Church allow married priests? What action should the Church take to combat poverty, racism, war, and gross disparity between rich and poor nations?

These questions form the basis for debate at the third World Synod of Bishops, opening Thursday. The Synod—which has an advisory, not legislative, role — is slated to last through October.

The session promises to be explosive.

Restiveness among the clergy has been percolating since the ecumenical council Vatican II. Many express frustration over alleged foot-dragging by the Vatican and bishops to effect reforms the council legislated. Many have shed their Roman collars to marry, including a handful of bishops.

POPE PAUL, just turned 74, has repeatedly said "no" to pleas to permit priests to marry and continue their ministry.

The 209 synod delegates, from some 150 countries, also may discuss such items as priestly participation in protests and demonstrations, and possibly even in guerrilla movements aimed at toppling oppressive rulers. They also may ask whether priests should have a stronger voice in the nomination of bishops and in ruling local churches.

The "social justice" topic could lead to even sharper debate. The Vatican-prepared program lashes the "great powers" for competition to dominate the world. It also attacks all forms of economic, social and racial discrimination.

Pope Paul has denounced the apartheid policies of South Africa and Rhodesia, the alleged repression of clergy in Brazil, the conflicts in Vietnam, the Middle East and Northern Ireland. These items are expected to be revived in the synod.

ONE POTENTIAL wrangling point is over how much time to allot each of the two topics: the priesthood and social justice.

Bishops from North America and Europe may be keener on tackling the priesthood—especially Bernard Cardinal Alfrink of Holland and Leo Joseph Cardinal Suenens of Belgium.

A slight majority of delegates will be from areas where social justice has greater urgency than the priesthood — the Third World nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America, the eastern European-Communist nations, and Northern Ireland.

Controversy could also erupt over the Vatican's presentation of a proposed fundamental law, or constitution, for the Catholic Church. The current draft, largely the work of conservatives in the Roman Curia, appears to aim at restoring the unity and stability the Church knew before the Ecumenict council.

LIBERAL critics have blasted the draft as overstressing the authority of the Pope and bishops and freezing theology and structures. Some Church sources say the Vatican has begun work on a fresh draft.

'Everything we did went wrong' in Vietnam

By TERENCE SMITH
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A section of the Pentagon's study of the Vietnam war that focuses on U.S.-South Vietnamese political relations in the 1963-67 period concludes that, in seeking to apply political leverage to bring about a stable government in Saigon, "Everything we did went wrong."

The section, which was briefly touched on in the series on the Pentagon study in the New York Times, presents a detailed picture of a problem that still confronts the United States: How to influence the South Vietnamese government.

The 160-page section constitutes one volume in the 7,000-page history of the war, which was commissioned by Robert S. McNamara in 1967 when he was secretary of defense and was completed in 1968.

Entitled "U.S.-GVN Relations, 1963-67," the section shows that the Johnson administration grappled with many of the same problems that are bedeviling the Nixon administration, which has tried unsuccessfully to achieve at least the appearance of a contest in the presidential election scheduled for next Sunday.

While the current administration's policies and approaches to the problems may differ, the parallels with the past are striking.

This section of the Pentagon history, though containing no major revelations of fact, is one of the most analytical of the 47-volume history. The anonymous authors often express outspoken and pungently phrased opinions. Critical of much of the American policy of the 1963-67 period, they come down hard on what they hold to be specific failures.

Other major points include the following:

—The United States prized governmental stability in Saigon above all else during the period and pursued it, the study says, "like the Holy Grail." In the name of stability, the United States supported "one military strongman after another" because, in the final analysis, "it saw no alternative but to back them."

—The South Vietnamese leaders capitalized on that attitude, the study says, and repeatedly defied American wishes on the assumption "that the United States had concluded it had no choice but to go along."

—The U.S. military command in Saigon, particularly its chief, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, played what the study describes as "an important, mostly hidden role" in the political relations between the two governments during the period. As a result of close association with the South Vietnamese military, the command and Westmoreland assumed "a latent diplomatic role" by squelching coups and helping to put down military challenges to the government.

The U.S.'s failure to apply effective leverage on Saigon by withholding military or economic assistance was the result of a consensus among American officials that the Vietnamese were too sensitive for such pressures to work."

The Pentagon history was written by a group of 36 government and private specialists over a period of 18 months. The authors, who drew their material from the written records of the State and Defense Departments, lacked access to the White House file on the period and were prohibited from interviewing the principal decision-makers.

Last spring, most of the study, including the political section, was made available to the New York Times. Large segments of its contents were disclosed in a series of nine installments published in the Times in June and July. The series focused primarily on the military aspects of the war and the decision-making process in Washington rather than on governmental relations.

Many of the personalities in the news from Saigon today are the same as those who figured in the Pentagon history in the earlier period.

President Nguyen Van Thieu, who was elected in 1967 from a field of 11, pushed through a special election law this year to limit the field and is now unopposed.

Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, who as premier in 1967 was more prominent than Thieu but ultimately accepted second place on the ticket, dropped out this year, charging that the election was rigged.

Gen. Duong Van Minh, who was in power in 1964 but was barred from the 1967 race, also dropped out this year, accusing Thieu of rigging the election.

Ellsworth Bunker was the newly appointed ambassador in Saigon in 1967 and tried, then as now, to coax the South Vietnamese into holding an election that would be favorably received abroad. The role he played in 1967 is cited in the Pentagon history as a successful instance of American backstage activityand, thus, is an exception to the cases in which "everything we tried went wrong."

By the time Bunker arrived in Saigon in April, 1967, the study notes, the prenomination maneuvering was already intense between Ky, then premier, and Thieu, who was serving in the largely ceremonial office of chief of state.

"The United States mission was increasingly wor-

Dr. John Cashin, c arried that the Thieu-Ky competition would threaten the indispensible unity of the military," the Pentagon history says.

At Washington's request, the new ambassador moved to reconcile the differnces between the two men.

"Basically, Ambassador Bunker believed in an indirect approach," the study says. "His ploy was to hold an informal luncheon to which the two principals were invited." He counseled them both on the need to maintain the unity of the armed forces, but said that "in the end, they would have to find their own solution."

At the end of June, the two candidates appeared jointly before an extraordinary session of the Armed Forces Council, composed of the top 50 military officers.

"Thieu and Ky both performed histrionics," the study says, in making their cases before their peers. At the end of the 48-hour session, Thieu emerged on top and Ky—to the surprise of many—agreed to run for the vice presidency on the same ticket.

"The mission sighed in relief" at this, the Pentagon history reports, "and everyone agreed that Bunker's approach had worked."

"With only a few hitches, the campaigning proceeded so as to satisfy American observers that it was acceptably fair," the study concludes. "The Thieu-Ky victory was a surprise only in its smaller-than-expected plurality (35 per cent of the votes)."

The narrative part of the study opens on Jan. 1, 1964, two months after the Ngo Dinh Diem by a group of officers replaced by General Minh. In painstaking detail, it describes the American efforts to cope with the rapid succession of governments in 1964 and 1965, Ky's rise to power, the bloody months of the Buddhist struggle movement in 1966 and the 1967 elections.

Throughout the report, the United States is portrayed as needling, prodding and cajoling Saigon into taking politically unpopular steps to improve its performance against the Viet Cong.

Innumerable emissarie from Washington went to Saigon to urge such stept as the expansion of the South Vietnamese army, suppression of corruption, revitalization of the economy, devaluation of the piaster, streamlining of the bureaucracy—all with an eye toward promoting more effective government.

The South Vietnamese are portrayed in the study as ever willing to agree to such reforms, but seldom prepared to deliver on their promises.

"When the United States offered more aid," the study says, "The Saigon government accepted it without improving; they promised to mobilize, but failed to speed up the slow buildup of their forces.

"When the United States offered a firm recommitment to encourage them, including possible later bombing of North Vietnam, the Vietnamese government tried to pressure us to do it sooner.

"When the U.S. endorsed

Ky, Big Minh split on anti-Thieu tactics

New York Times Service

SAIGON — In a day of sporadic and small-scale violence by opponents of President Nguyen Van Thieu's sole candidacy in the Oct. 3 presidential elections, there were many signs of a serious split between his most important political foes, Gen. Duong Van Minh and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky.

"He wants us to bring him his victory on a platter," one of Ky's aides said Saturday night of Minh when the general refused to attend a large gathering of the political opposition at the vice president's downtown guest house.

The day's demonstrations, which were mostly desultory, began outside Minh's Saigon residence Saturday morning. A group of about half a dozen disabled veterans who are Ky supporters hung a banner over the driveway calling upon Minh to speak out against the one-man election.

The general has remained silent for most of the period since Aug. 20, when he withdrew from the presidential election campaign on the ground that it was rigged. Vice President Ky was first manipulated out of the running by the president and later declined a last-minute chance to run on the same grounds as Minh.

Ky has called upon the president to step down or let someone else organize new elections, and the South Vietnamese Senate passed a resolution last Wednesday calling for the same thing.

Minh did not receive the veterans Saturday because he was out of town visiting his mother. A veteran who was asked if his action meant that he disliked all. He's a good man. We were sent to come here and do this."

The head of the Vietnam Veterans Organization, Dinh Truong Thu, is a protege of Vice President Ky's.

In the antigovernment demonstrations Saturday, small bands of students, whose allegiance has been closer to Minh than to Ky, roamed through a market area near the An Quang Buddhist pagoda and set fire to four American cars. They have been directing violence against American property recently because, as one of Ky's aides said Saturday, "It's the Americans who make it possible for Thieu to go on this way."

The students say they have gone over to guerrilla tactics following a large confrontation ith the police a week ago in which hundreds of students were arrested. Ky's aides Saturday night expressed satisfaction with the switch. The firebombings Saturday produced an electrified crowd of hundreds of curious bystanders, who were dispersed by the tear gas grenades thrown by policemen. However, the people appeared to take a nonpolitical stand as a result of the brief violence.

Large demonstrations had been predicted by opposition activists in the northern cities of Da Nang and Hue Saturday, but according to a high-ranking American official in Da Nang, "There were absolutely no incidents here, and in Hue all was quite too."

U.S. jets bomb N. Viet again

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. fighter-bombers struck into North Vietnam for the fifth day Saturday in the most prolonged series of air attacks on the north since bombing was halted nearly three years ago.

Communist forces in turn stepped up rocket and mortar attacks in South Vietnam and Cambodia, hitting at least four American bases, including two airfields.

In Cambodia, mortar fire destroyed large quantity of aviation fuel stored at Neak Luong, the Mekong River ferry crossing 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh.

U.S. Air Force jets hit truck convoys moving from North Vietnam through the Mu Gia Pass into the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos Saturday when they came under fire from guns a mile across the border.

Pentagon study

Gen. Nguyen Khan," the report continues, referring to the officer who seized power from Ninh on Jan. 30, 1964, "he overplayed his hand, provoked mob violence and had to back down to a weaker position than before . . . During this period, the United States was already starting to think about doing the job ourselves if our Vietnamese ally did not perform."

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor was the U.S. ambassador to Saigon from 1964 to 1965, when the big American buildup began. He arrived in South Vietnam in the summer of 1964, just in time to witness the rapid-fire series of coups and countercoups that assumed, in the words of the study, "comic-opera proportions."

Altogether there were six major changes of government and two unsuccessful coup during an 18-month period.

Taylor is portrayed in the study as frequently arguing with Khanh and as even suggesting at one point that he should resign the premiership for the good of South Vietnam.

The seemingly endless instability infuriated Washington, where opposition to further American involvement was beginning to grow. At one point the State Department cabled Saigon: "The picture of petty bickering among the Vietnamese leaders has created an appalling impression abroad."

The study notes that throughout the political convulsions the United States was faced with the same dilemma: How to appear neutral and still guarantee the desired outcome.

"State's guidance to Taylor on political matters was that the United States hand should not be too obvious in the government shuffling," the authors wrote. "But in general, the policy was to limit change and limit civilian influence."

During this period and even later, the Pentagon authors say, Westmoreland was a focal figure in the political machinations. The account notes that on two occasions he personally intervened to prevent Ky, who was then head of the Air Force, from bombing sections of Saigon that had been seized by rival groups.

On a third occasion, the study says, he blocked Ky from staging a coup of his own by threatening to withhold military support from the government the Air Force chief hoped to set up in November 1964.

The Pentagon report portrays Westmoreland as being unfailingly solicitous of the South Vietnamese military and unwilling to use his influence to bring about the dismissal of corrupt and inefficient commanders for fear of offending the Vietnamese.

The general's strength, the Pentagon study's authors note, lay in the fact that he had at his command more combat troops than the entire South Vietnamese Army, some 400 square miles of bases and near-total discretion over the distribution of vast amounts of military assistance funds. He had control, the account says, over "the things that mattered the most to the South Vietnamese."

Perhaps the severest test of Washington-Saigon relations took place in the spring and summer of 1966, when the Buddhist struggle movement paralyzed governmental activity in Saigon for four months and produced a state of civil war in the northern provinces.

The insurrection was triggered when Ky decided to get rid of Gen. Nguyen Chang Thi, the energetic and popular commander of the military region covering the five northernmost provinces. Pitched battles were fought in the streets of Hue and Da Nang between troops loyal to the premiere and those supporting Thi.

At one point, without consulting the embassy, Ky sent several battalions of South Vietnamese rangers in American aircraft to quell the dissidents. "State's first reaction," the study says, "was unrestrained fury." Secretary of State Dean Rusk cabled the embassy:

"This may require rough talk, but the United States cannot accept this insane bickering. . . . Do your best in the next few hours. Intolerable that Ky should move against Da Nang without consulting us. Urgent now to insist that fighting stop."

In this instance the "rough talk" actually involved a threat of U.S. force, the study notes. Referring to the Marine commander, it said:

"General Walt heard of a possible Vietnamese Air Force attack on dissident Vietnamese units in their compounds. He threatened to use United States jets to shoot them down if they tried . . . If such an attack was planned, the threat succeeded."

At Washington's direction, Henry Cabot Lodge, who had succeeded Taylor as ambassador, eventually was able to reconcile the differences between the prmire and Thi, who premier and Thi, who went into exile on July 31, 1966.

The Pentagon study portrays Lodge as almost fatherly in his support of the South Vietnamese leaders with whom he worked. Lodge, the study says, advised Ky on a host of subjects, from what to include in a new constitution to how he should present it to the people.

In 1967 the United States concentrated its efforts on insuring the success of both the presidential election and the constituent assembly elections, which were held a few weeks later. The American objective in both, the study says, "was a democratic government in form; if we could not have reality, we would start with appearances."

The State Department's message to the ambassador on the proper United States posture during the consituent elections said:

"The United States mission should seek to exert maximum influence . . . at the same time realizing that a key odjective is to avoid anti-Americanism becoming a major issue.

"We shall be accused of interference in any event, but it is vitally important not to give potential anti-American elements or the press or outside observers any clear handle to hit us with.

"The elections should be conducted so as to gain a maximum improvement in the image of the Saigon government in the United States and internationally."

Conservationists can win a few, too

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

Okay, we can win a few too.

For that matter of fact conservationists have won a couple of pretty important victories recently, pointing the way to some even more important possibilities.

It may not seem like good news that the Los Angeles Basin had its first health warning for smog last week, but that was a victory.

Almost a year ago state and county health officers proposed a health warning system. Heart patients and respiratory patients should be warned when smog levels went up, they said. Both kinds of patients are hard hit by smog, and some of them can die in smog attacks.

Earlier this month the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors adopted a smog health warning system. Naturally enough a warning producing smog came along in short order. The warning was only for the Pasadena area, but in the future such warnings will undoubtedly include downtown Los Angeles and Long Beach.

GILBERT BAILEY

The warnings won't stop smog, but they may make the public a little more aware of the very real dangers of air pollution, and the warnings may save lives of the ill.

It took almost a year to get action, but action was taken. A word of thanks to the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors may be in order.

The board took another action recently which deserves some commendation from a conservationist point of view. They ordered opened seven access ways to the Malibu beach. The vote was three to two, and the public response to the question just may have swung the key vote.

In addition the supervisors voting against the opening, in particular Burton Chace of Long Beach, are very interested in acquiring beach property for public use, another very good idea.

The public had a lot to do with both these votes. A lot of people had their say, both pro and con.

Somewhat the same story took place in the State Legislature last week. The Assembly with no votes to spare approved coastline protection legislation, as it happened the best bill before either house.

The bill number is AB 1471, by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, and it sets up a statewide coastal commission with regional commissions underneath it. The bill is now headed for the State Senate, and an uncertain fate, unless public support is overwhelming.

Any conservation legislation has a lot of enemies, many of whom are willing to spend a lot of time and money in the effort to defeat such bills.

Your state senator is interested in finding out how you feel. If you don't care, it is very likely he won't care. That's what has happened in the past, particularly in Southern California.

A couple of Nader's Raiders the other night listed their pick of the villains in the State Legislature. A good many of them came from right around here, not only Orange County, but also Los Angeles County.

(In some areas Nader's Raiders seem a little off base, so repitition of names they used without some backup documentation really wouldn't be fair.)

It is fair to say that a lack of concern about environmental issues by Southern California legislators results directly from a lack of concern on the part of the voters.

There is only one way to make a Democracy, or a Republic if that has better sound, work, and that's by the people who make it up going to work.

It can and has worked and the victories are significant. More victories are possible, if the voters are interested.

Schools' Dr. Kraft to lecture

Dr. Arthur Kraft, senior psychologist of the Long Beach Unified School District, will present a series of six weekly lectures beginning Monday on "Bridging the Generation Gap." Interested adults may register at any meeting of the series which meets Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Bancroft Junior High School Auditorium, 5301 East Centralia Street. There is no admission charge.

The lecture series is designed to help parents and children improve communication with one another. Dr. Kraft will stress ways to solve daily problems with reason instead of resorting to open hostility and damaged feelings.

His weekly topics are as follows: September 27 — "Promoting Your Child's Maturity," October 4 — "Three Ways of Dealing With Conflict," October 11 — "Tuning in on What's Really Happening," October 18 — "Finding the Hidden Problem," November 1 — "Coming On Straight," and November 8 — "Resolving Conflict Constructively."

DR. ARTHUR KRAFT
Starts Lecture Series

The lecture series is being offered by the Long Beach Unified School District School for Adults-Evening High School as part of its "Evenings in Education" programs. All programs are free and open to the public.

OX5 Southland wing slates reunion

The Southern California Wing, OX5 Club of America, will hold its reunion dinner at the Miramer Hotel, Ocean Ave. and Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica on Oct. 1. Dinner will be served at 8 p.m. with a social hour preceding.

Guest speaker will be Cliff Henderson who directed the National Air Races in the 1930's. He also created the Bendix Transcontinental Air Race and the Thompson Closed Course Air Race. Many famous air race pilots and early aviation personalities plan to attend. A rare film of the 1930 National Air Race will be shown.

The club, organized in 1955, derives its name from the Curtis OX5 engine which was installed in many training planes used in World War I and in barnstorming planes used in the 1920s. The organization has a membership of 9,000, the largest group of aviation pioneers in the world. Membership of the Southern California Wing is 900.

Russ embezzle ring smashed

MOSCOW (UPI) — A court in Soviet Kazakhstan has sentenced 52 persons to prison terms of up to 15 years for embezzling $106,500 from a canning factory, according to an official report that reached Moscow Saturday.

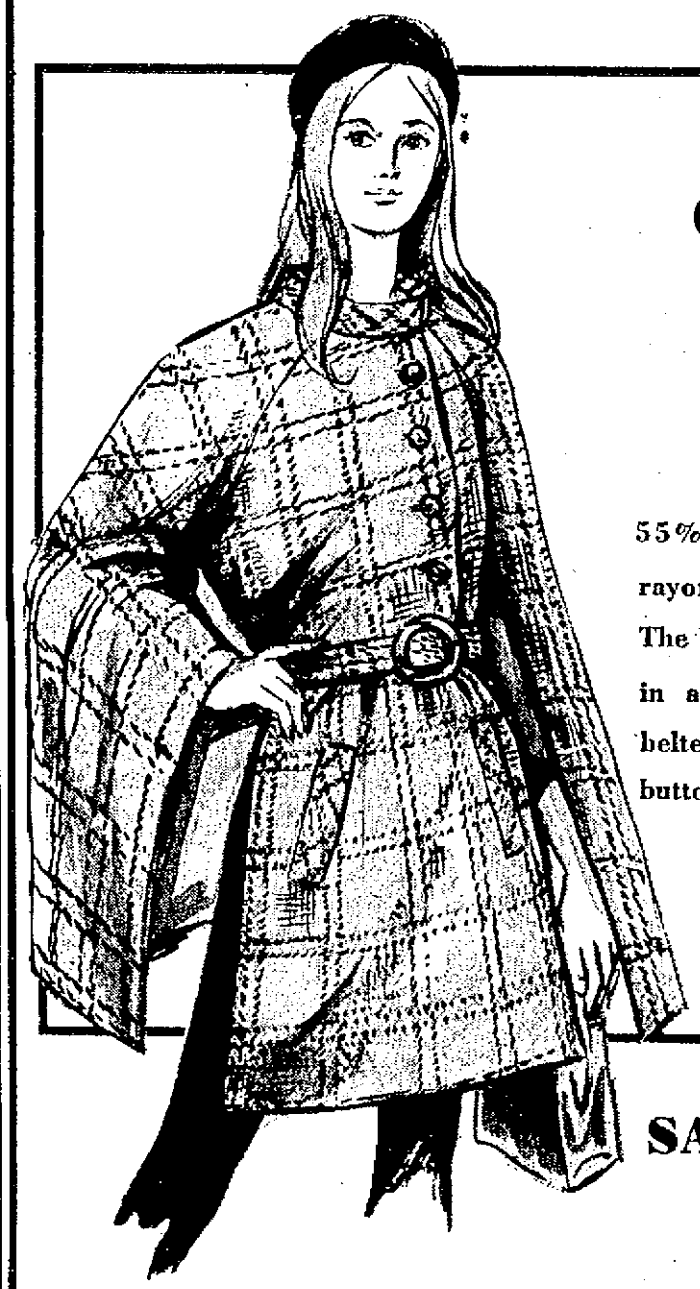

The official Kazakhstanskaya Pravda newspaper said the group, headed by a former factory director, embezzled the money over a three-year ptriod from the Alma Ata fruit and vegetable canning factory.

BICYCLES GROWING MORE POPULAR

Thousands wheeling free and clean in Southland

CAMPUS PARKING — 1971 STYLE

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

That old love affair between Southern Californians and the internal combustion engine may be growing cold. Increasingly, Southland residents are turning to bicycles for transportation.

Signs of the bicycle's new popularity abound:

More bikes have already been licensed in Long Beach this year (about 8,000) than were licensed in all of 1970.

Some bike shops report a 200 per cent increase in sales in the past year and a half.

Legislators in Sacramento and supervisors in Los Angeles and Orange Counties are looking for ways to finance building of bicycle paths.

In March, a thousand bicyclists pedaled through Los Angeles in a rally called by Concerned Bicycle Riders for the Environment.

Local cyclists prefer legpower to mechanical horsepower because bicycling is cheap, provides exercise, and doesn't pollute the air.

"It ties in with the ecology," says Rocky MacInnis, who commutes eight miles daily between his Long Beach home and the telephone company office where he works. "When you're driving you don't really notice it, but those cars make some very irritating fumes."

"It's cleaner than driving," says Dr. Philip Megdall, a dentist who lives in the Belmont Shore section of Long Beach. "I've ridden all my life. It's good exercise, and it beats the traffic. You know, I'd like to see them take Second St. and barricade it like here (Bayshore Ave. beside Alamitos Bay); just turn it over to bicycles and pedestrians."

Environmental concern isn't the only reason motorists are becoming cyclists. Some find relaxation on a bike saddle. "It's mentally relaxing," says Mrs. Shirley Still of Long Beach. "I try to ride a couple of miles each day." Mrs. Still, her husband, and some of their nine children often take bicycle rides together for recreation.

"It's more relaxing than driving," Rocky MacInnis says. "I work in an office, where you get keyed up all the time. By the time I get home on the bike, I feel better."

Relaxing as cycling may be, economy was what prompted MacInnis to start commuting by bike. By not driving a car, he saves $7 monthly in parking fees.

Economics also started John Garrett's bicycle commuting. "My car costs too much to get fixed, so I just ride the bike," he says.

Garrett has found another advantage of bicycling. He met friend Regi Mosser while they were both cycling. This supports Mrs. Mosser's statement that bike riders "have time to meet people," and "see things you don't see driving.

Though bikes are inexpensive to run, non-polluting, and provide exercise, the cyclist's path isn't always smooth.

Mrs. Still recalls the time she was working at the Navy drydocks and riding a bike. She was 17 at the time, and when she first pedaled through the yard she was met by wolf whistles en masse. "I fell off the bike when the fellows whistled, it was so embarrassing. There went the papers from the personnel office all over the ground."

Angie Newman, a Wilson High School student, reports a more stinging salutation she received recently. "I was riding my bike when this car with a bunch of guys drove by. One of them spanked me when they went past."

More serious bicycle mishaps occur, too. Traffic Officer G. J. LaPay says collisions often result when a car turning from a side street has a head-on confrontation with a bicycle being ridden against traffic. "We're writing tickets for wrong-way bike riding or running a stop light," he warns. "All the rules of the road that apply to cars apply to bicycles."

Automobiles aren't the bicycle's only enemy. The narrow-grated storm drain lies in wait to snare errant bike tires. A young man who prefers to remain anonymous tells this story:

"I'd just started commuting with the bike. I was riding along Seventh St. When I came to some parked cars coming up on my left. I swerved the bike back into the gutter and dropped the front wheel through the grating. I went over the handlebars and landed on my chin. It took five stitches to close up the gash. Since then I've been particularly observant for storm drains."

"Still," he says, soft-pedaling the hazards of bike riding, "I feel a lot safer on the bike than in a car. And much healthier."

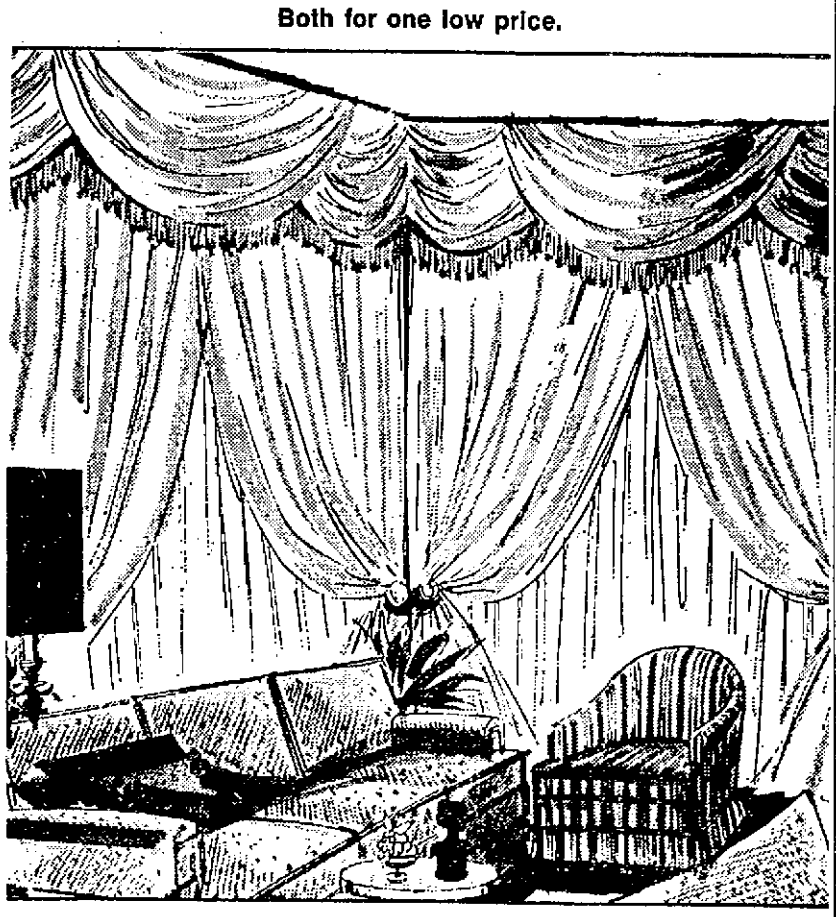

India pirates kill 6 in river raid

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — A band of river pirates raided a cargo sampan on the swollen Ganges, bound passengers and crew hand and foot and threw them overboard, survivors reported Saturday.

Officials in Bihar state reported that six persons were feared drowned in the incident Thursday.

Store finds drug game a bummer; they're burned

MIAMI (UPI) — Promising Playboy Bunnies would be there "turn you on" executives of a local department store were prepared for brisk sales of "Feds 'n' Heads," a drug-age rented board game.

What Jordan Marsh officials got instead was a flood of protests that prompted them to remove the games from their shelves and stash them in the storeroom.

"The adverse reaction came as a total surprise," said Jordan Marsh promotion officer James Capodieci. "It began the minute our switchboard opened."

Fearing an anticipated sales boom would turn into a colossal bust, Jordan Marsh executives canceled the appearance by the Playboy Bunnies, and wondered if they could get their money back from the game's producer, a subsidiary of Playboy Enterprises. The games were to have sold for $8 each.

Instructions call for the players to roll dice, advancing their mark around the board to collect a "lid of grass" (ounce of marijuana). They then try to get back to their "pad" without falling victim to "ripoffs, bummers, burns and busts."

If a player lands on a space with another player, he is penalized five ounces of grass. If the player lands on a penalty space, he may draw a card telling him:

—You are ousted and must become an agent informer in order to save your miserable hide. You lose five ounces of dope and all your friends.

Among those calling the store to protest the game was Hy Rothstein, a consultant to the Dade County public schools.

"I called and told them the game undermined everything we were trying to achieve in drug education," he said. "I also told them I did not think the game was in good taste." Another angry customer, Phil Snyder of Fort Lauderdale, said: "We've got enough problems with the kids without a game like this."

$40 million in heroin found in car on pier

NEW YORK (AP) — Customs officials said Saturday their agents seized $40 million worth of heroin and arrested three men on smuggling charges in one of the three largest heroin hauls ever made in New York.

The 200 pounds of heroin was stashed in 161 packages in a late-model American-made car shipped Wednesday from Italy aboard the liner Rafaelo, a customs spokesman said.

The record seizure was 246 pounds taken in 1968.

Last Sunday, in a similar case, another 200 pounds of heroin worth an estimated $40 million on the street was seized here from a foreign-made sports car shipped on the British liner Queen Elizabeth 2. Five persons were arrested in that case.

Customs officials said they were checking for possible links between these cases and others in which cars were used for smuggling drugs. "Over the last five months we've found drugs hidden in cars in San Juan, Spain and Elizabeth, N.J." a spokesman said.

Authorities said, however, the most recent arrests were the first involving the use of an American-made car for alleged drug smuggling.

They said the drug was hidden inside the upholstery and under floor panels in a car belonging to one of those arrested, Guiseppe Giacomazzo, 35, Queens, N.Y., a passenger on the Italian liner. The drug was discovered in a routine pierside check after the car was unloaded from the ship, authorities added.

Arrested with Giacomazzo on attempted drug smuggling charges were Lorenzo D'Aloisio, 33, and Frank Rappa, 30, both of Queens. Authorities said Rappa told them he operate a pizza parlor in Hopelawn, N. J.

The three were picked up Friday night in various parts of the city. The car was placed under surveillance after the alleged discovery of the heroin and agents tailed the three men until the arrests were made.

Louisiana official guilty of perjury

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion was convicted by a federal jury Saturday on five counts of perjury.

The conviction stemmed from a federal grand jury indictment which said he lied under oath in 1969 when he said he did not own stock and did not have an economic interest in Louisiana Loan and Thrift Corp.

"I feel wonderful," a grim-faced Gremillion said minutes after the jury returned the verdict.

He added, "I still haven't done anything wrong. Yes, I'm surprised but I doubt that this is going to hurt my campaign. That's up to the public."

Gremillion is seeking a fifth consecutive term in office.

"One little setback doesn't hurt a career. I've had many setbacks," the state attorney general said.

Mrs. Gremillion covered her eyes with her left hand as soon as the court clerk read "guilty" on the first of the five counts.

At the request of the defense, the jury was polled. A unanimous verdict was required.

The defense attorney said the conviction would be appealed.

U.S. District Court Judge Fred J. Cassibry allowed Gremillion to remain out of jail on his own recognizance.

Gremillion faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $2,000 fine on each count. Earlier he was acquitted on charges of fraud and conspiracy in connection with the now-defunct firm.

30,000 at London rally urge war on pornography

LONDON (AP) — Thirty thousand persons Saturday rallied in Trafalgar Square to declare war on pornography and "moral pollution."

The mass gathering called for purity, love and family life and drowned out detractors with loud shouts of "Hallelujah."

The banner-waving crowd urged the government, churches and mass media to help clean up British morals.

Leaders of the "Festival of Light" said they wanted new censorship laws, laws to control sex education in schools and government action to stem "the vile commerce in cruelty, perversion and loveless sex."

A letter expressing the good wishes of Prince Charles, 22-year-old hier to the British throne was read at the rally.

About 200 members of the Gay Liberation Front, a homosexual movement, infiltrated the crowd and shouted abuse. They were ignored or drowned out by singing.

Other hecklers, some dressed a nuns, retreated after requests by police.

Police said 27 persons were arrested and charged with insulting behavior.

"This has been a sock in the eye for the permissive society," one clergyman said.

A police inspector commented: "It is the most cheerful and patient demonstration I've ever seen in London."

At the close of the speeches, festival groups headed for Hyde Park and a concert of pop and gospel music by American singer Mahalia Jackson.

U.S. again to investigate Nevada casino skimming

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — A special federal grand jury convenes Monday to investigate hidden casino interests and possible skimming by gambling resort owners.

Skimming is a gambling term used for raking money off the top in the casino counting rooms before reporting profits for tax purposes.

Government officials have refused to reveal which gambling interests would be investigated. It also was unclear whether the thrust of the probe was directed toward former or present ownership of casinos.

A federal grand jury investigated skimming here in 1967 and returned seven indictments after six month. But the defendants either won dismissal of charges or the court accepted pleas of "nolo contendre" and fined the defendants.

A total of 12 persons was summoned to appear in U.S. District Court Friday for jury duty and 23 grand jurors were selected at random. Federal Judge Roger Foley dismissed eight prospective jurors because they were connected with gambling in some way.

"Because of the nature of the investigation . . . this court has determined that no Nevada gaming licensee, no shareholder, officer or employe of any hotel or casino should serve on this special grand jury," said Judge Foley. He said it might threaten the secrecy or affect the integrity of the grand jury deliberations.

"It is not that this court questions the honesty and integrity of such persons, but such persons would have a conflict of interest between their duty as grand jurors on the one hand and their interest in the gambling business on the other," said the court.

SAILORS ARE BLAMED

Fireboat crews dodge boozing bottle-bombers

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Crews manning Long Beach Fireboat No. 2 are getting more than a little weary of being the target of booze-drinking bottle-bombers.

They have reported more than 40 bottles smashing with explosive force within the fireboat station complex directly beneath the Desmond Bridge arching 162 feet overhead.

Fire Capt. Lee Adams, doing some detective work, concludes that since most of the bottles are tossed off the north side of the bridge, they are thrown away by sailors returning from liberty and heading back to duty at Long Beach Naval Station.

"The north lane heads toward the station. The south lane heads away from the station. Few bottles are tossed over the south side," Capt. Adams said.

The bottles have landed on car hoods, the station roof and adjacent paved areas, scattering glass fragment in all directions.

"Fortunately, as far as personnel are concerned, the bottles have all been near misses so far," the captain said.

The Harbor Department has installed a short length of chain link fencing directly above the station along the north edge of the bridge. But the fence proved to be out of the line of fire of the botle tossers.

"Bottles tossed from a moving car follow a curved trajectory that ends right here," Capt. Adams said pointing to the area of the fireboat dock.

Capt. Adams and other members of the five-man fireboat crew suggest a solution to the bottles barrages.

"If a guy buying a bottle had to put up a deposit equal to the price of the booze, perhaps he would return the bottle instead of taking it out of circulation by bombing us," Capt. Adams said with a wry smile.

A department engineering aide says the deparment intends to purchuse between 200 and 300 feet of chain link fence and install it so that a thrown bottle will not carry into the area of the waterfront fire station.

He estimated the cost at between $3,000 to $5,000.

The bottle-bombing hazard is similar to that experienced by longshoremen working beneath the Vincent Thomas Bridge on Terminal Island.

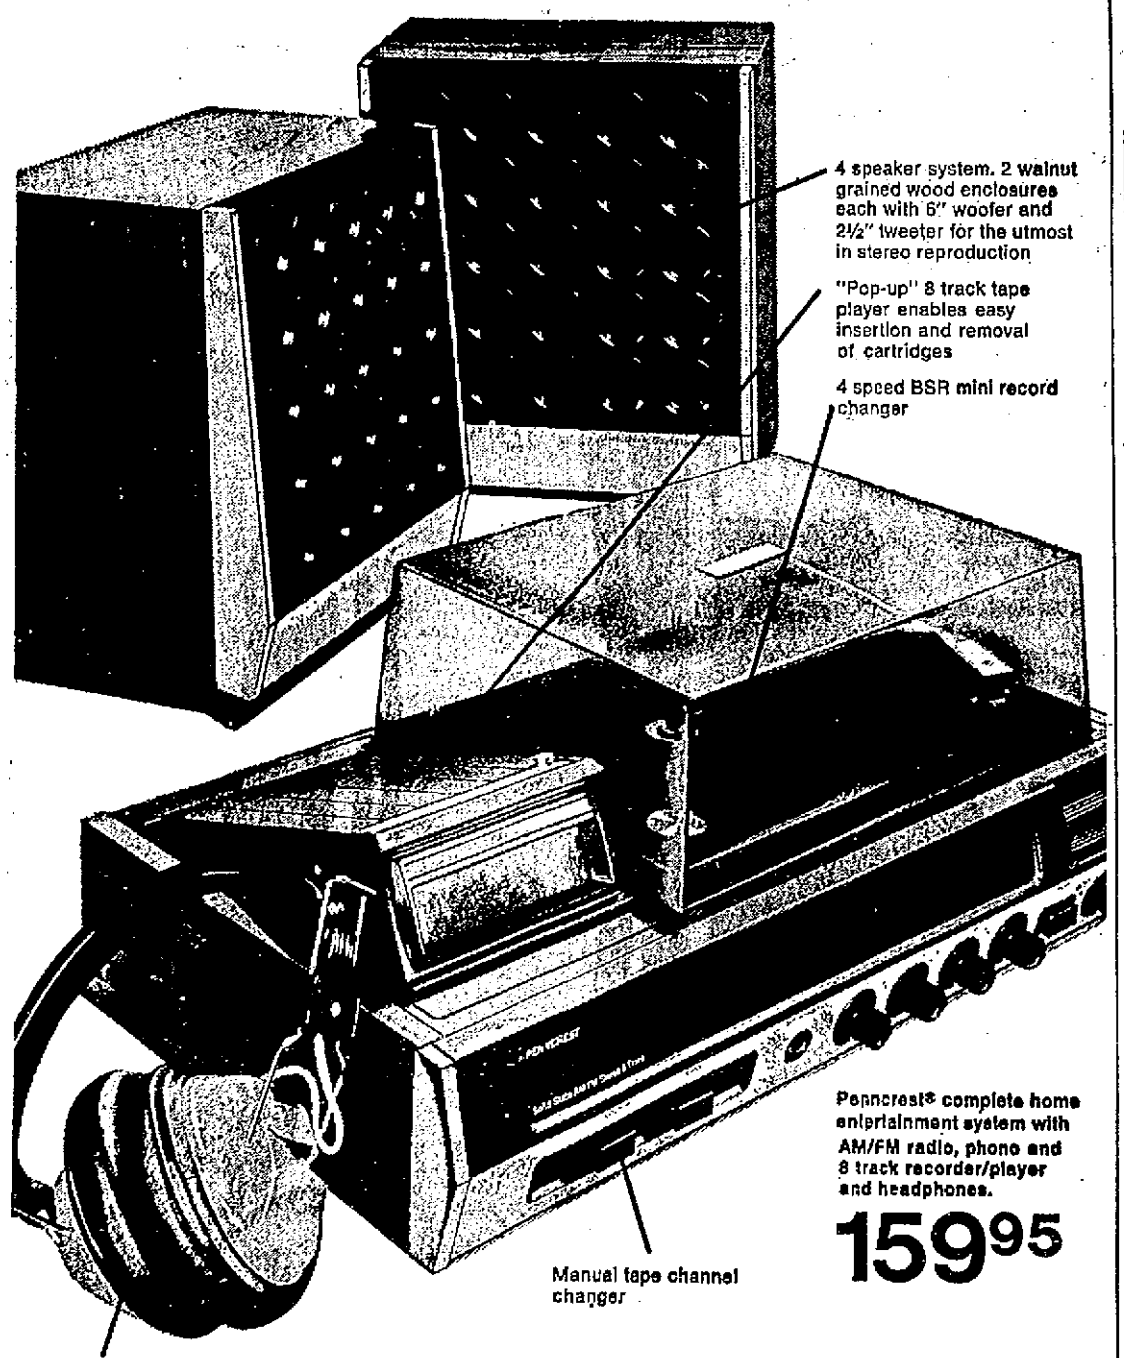

The longshoremen refused to handle cargo on ships tied up beneath the span until protective netting was installed. The California Toll Bridge Authority spent $37,000 installing more than 1,200 feet of chain link netting.

WHAT HAPPENED TO ALL THE KIDS?

School enrollments drop sharply in L.B., Southland

By RALPH HINMAN JR
Education Editor

Where did all the youngsters go?

It's a question without an answer that Long Beach school officials — and their colleagues throughout the Southland — are painfully pondering these days.

Enrollments sharply are down here and in 11 other major Southern California school districts informally polled last week.

There are serious implications for money-strapped districts — and for teachers who, for the first time since World War II no longer are in demand.

State aid dollars often are pegged to ADA — average daily attendance increasing or decreasing with changes in enrollment totals. And except for a handful of specialties, teachers today are often a surplus on an already-pinched job market.

In Long Beach, where opening day totals Sept. 1 dipped 1,000-plus below projected figures, the decline continued through Wednesday, the last day for which full statistics are available.

At midweek there were 66,406 enrolled, contrasted with 68,840 on the same school day last fall. Immediately effected were 30 teachers without enough students to fill their "conservatively staffed" classrooms, officials say.

But with juggling and reshuffling, each of these tenured faculty members were found other assignments or schools.

Statistically, LBUSD enrollments dropped slightly over 3 per cent from last year. This district was not alone, however.

A sampling taken by local schoolmen of 11 other large districts showed decreases ranging from 3 to 5 per cent. The local drop thus is considered "typical."

When classes reopened Sept. 13 there were some 62,256 kindergarten-ers - through - 12th - graders answering "here" at 75 school facilities. Expected that day were about 64,726 pupils who, had they actually materialized, would have been about 1,200 short of last year's first-day figure.

Even Long Beach City College, which had expected to reach new enrollment peaks this year, was down about 1,771 on Thursday, in comparison with the same 1970 school date.

Attending the college's two major and many extension campuses last week were 26,396 students; on the 9th school day in 1971 there were 28,167.

Officials report increases for the liberal arts campus' day and night classes and at the business and technology campus' day session.

Almost every public K-12th grade school in Long Beach, in every geographic section of the sprawling unified school district, lost enrollment.

Nowhere was this tred more true than in the central city or westside, in schools educating goodly numbers of minority pupils or those receiving special compensatory education funds from state or federal government.

In the 20 elementary - junior-senior high schools within this category, there was a net loss. Between them they gained 123 students but lost 611, for a net decrease of 488.

The only significant gain was at Washington Junior High, up 58 from 760 to 818, and at Burnett Elementary, with 35 added to last year's 549.

Heavy losers in the educational category were Muir Elementry, down 94 from 1,252 to 1,158; Jefferson Junior High, down 53, from 1,181 to 1,128; Franklin JHS, down 63, from 770 to 707; Roosevelt Elementary, minus 72, from 796 to 724; Lincoln, down 84 from 837 to 753. Official figures obviously disprove a rumor current heard around the city — that outlying, basically white, middle-class schools are losing pupils while center city facilities increasingly bulge at the seams with new enrollees.

General declines had been predicted primarily because of smaller birthrates just before 1966 economic conditions, reputedly forcing numerous families to migrate elsewhere and the Southlander's traditional penchant for changing residences. No responsible authoritiey presently is willing to predict what will happen in coming years in this critical area.

Birthrates hit their lowest level locally in 1966, but began climbing slowly though steadily in every year since.

Here a listing of figures from other district schools, with the first figure recorded on Wednesday the second on Sept. 23, 1970:

MEDICAL MOBILITY

Flying interns train for rural practices

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — To about 15 interns and residents at St. Joseph's hospital here, an altimeter is becoming almost as familiar as a stetheoscope in a program to put the family doctor back in the small community.

The young doctors, many of whom hope to go into family practice in rural areas, are taking flight training in a volunteer, non-credit course while completing their medical education at Creighton University's teaching hospital.

"It's a flying club, so to speak," said Dr. Michael Haller, head of Creighton's family practice program and organizer of the project.

"Students pay a minimal amount to belong to the club and then sell their interest to the next students."

HALLER SAID to his knowledge Creighton was the only medical school to have such a course.

The primary purpose of the program, he said, is to get students interested in practicing in rural areas.

"We hope that if they're more mobile, they will be more likely to settle in a rural community without feeling so isolated," Haller said. "Doctors are more likely to enjoy rural practice if they can have the best of the urban community also."

One major concern of physicians considering family practice is their isolation from institutions where they can keep up on medical advances or take postgraduate courses, Haller said.

THE SOLUTION advanced at Creighton is a plane and a pilot's license. With those two, cities as far as 500 miles away come within two or three hours flying time, Haller said.

Dr. Fred Pettid, a resident who already has a pilot's license, said his need for postgraduate courses was one of the reasons he got his license.

"Omaha does not have adequate postgraduate courses, so most of us have to go someplace else," he said. He mentioned Minneapolis, Denver and Kansas City.

Pettid said the mobility also could convince a flying physician's wife that a social outlet would still be available if the doctor had a practice in a rural community.

There are also advantages for the specialist, who could set up once-a-week office hours in smaller communities where his particular service was not needed constantly.

Congress' secrecy at issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The new chairman of the House "freedom of information" subcommittee has taken a stand that may not endear him to his colleagues. He thinks Congress ought to be as free of secrets as it wants the government to be.

Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa., did not blare out his position, he did not even volunteer it. It came in response to a reporter's question and was expressed in a soft, somewhat hesitating voice.

WHAT HE suggested was that the legislative branch of the federal government be covered by the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act, the same as the executive branch.

The proposition may seem logical to outsiders but to lawmakers it is literally unthinkable. Congress specifically exempted itself when it drafted and approved the bill in 1966 and the odds are heavily against Moorhead if he ever tries to put his theory into practice.

For Moorhead that would be nothing new. Though he is not personally combative — shy would be a better word — the 48-year-old lawmaker has a way of now and then getting in battles with congressional powerhouses.

Back in 1969 he calmly remarked on a television interview that some members of Congress had dealt so long with the Pentagon and its contractors that they no longer could see their faults. The late Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, was outraged. He virtually ordered Moorhead to appear before his committee and back up his charge.

MOORHEAD, who at the time was carrying on a campaign against the Air Force's C5 transport, accepted the offer. Rivers backed down.

In that same year Moorhead infuriated another powerful defender of the military, Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif. With information prepared by his staff, Moorhead surprised and annoyed Holifield by utilizing a hearing of Holifield's government operations subcommittee to raise some embarrassing questions about the C5 with Air Force witnesses.

"Bill is a lot tougher than he appears," says one congressional friend.

FUNNIES

SPLIT

READING, England (UPI) — Berkshire council official Herbert Edy could not help the woman who complained to him that the bikini bottom she bought had split.

Edy said he decided it was the woman's judgment that was at fault, not the manufacturer.

"She was rather too ambitious, and she was responsible for stretching her purchases too far, he said.

HOUNDS

CHORLTON, England (UPI) — Top hunting hounds are in the doghouse after being outfoxed.

Fifty of the hounds disappeared over the Staffordshire countryside. Bert Maiden, the man in charge of the dogs said: "The trouble was there were two foxes.

"They ran off in opposite directions. Half the hounds went after one fox and the rest after the other. It was half an hour before we realized they were missing.

CLUE

CHESTER, England (UPI) — A half-eaten apple led to the capture of two burglary suspects.

Police took the plaster casts of the teeth of the two men, John M. McLean, 26 and Robert N. Beesley, 32, and found the marks matched those in an apple found in a victim's house, a court was told.

The two pleaded guilty to six offenses of burglary.

SECRET

LONDON (UPI) — Actress June Zelazowski did not give her age to a policeman who had stopped her for speeding because she thought it might harm her career.

The actress' attorney told an appeals hearing she might be called upon to play parts of younger women and disclosure of her age could prevent her selection.

A magistrates court had fined her $7.40 but the appeals committee decided to discharge the case after hearing she had now disclosed the age through her lawyer.

The actress did not give her age in the open court hearing.

RE-ENTRY

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — A state penitentiary inmate on a furlough to Seattle decided rather than go out over the wall he'd come in over the wall-by parachute.

The unidentified inmate told prison officials he was aiming for the minimum-security area but landed in a garden instead, barely missing the prison water tower and some tall trees.

Supt. Bobby Rhay said he asked the inmate why he chose such a dangerous method of re-entry.

"Why not?" the inmate replied.

Prison officials said the inmate would not be punished, but hoped his re-entry method would not set a style for furlough return.

Disneyland due to open in Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Seconds after 10 a.m. neyt Friday the first paying customer will push through the turnstile at Walt Disney World, a $400-million monument to the man who believed the fantasies of children can also be fun for adults.

Florida probably never will be the same again, at least in the pattern of its tourists trade, but no one is sure what to expect.

It has been almost a decade since the late Walt Disney and his associates began secretly buying 27,000 acres of scrubby marshland in Central Florida and carving from it the largest recreation project ever undertaken by free enterprise.

LOCAL residents are expecting a virtual blizzard of tourist dollars for those in the motel and restaurant business, monumental traffic jams, and a general business boom to help them forget the cutbacks in the space program at nearby Cape Kennedy.

Opening day visitors won't get to see everything. October is the "shakedown" period in which the 7,000 costumed employes are to perfect their roles. Disney has intentionally staggered the opening of many of the attractions leading up to a televised spectacular near the end of the month.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

THIRD and last of this dept.'s "moving columns" has to be about stripping the office where this pillar has been composed for many years. Like the house, there's some trauma involved here, too.

The collection that has built up here is unbelievable.

It ranges from a small calibre rifle bullet which Norm Masterson picked up on Pine Ave. 15 years ago to a lovely gold-framed desert scene presented to me by Dr. Logan Jackson a decade ago.

It includes piles of letters, notes, memoranda, reports, books. I have some pangs of conscience when I come onto things I intended to write or do something about, but never quite got around to it. Some readers, I reflect, must have wondered what happened to some of these items they gave or left with me. Too late now, but I'm appreciative.

THE same problem nags me here as at home — what to keep, what to throw.

One bunch of items going to the round file: bound reports of all sorts of investigations and studies. My office, like the shelves at places like City Hall, has been a collection point for such things.

There's a mania here for making studies and written reports. Sometimes, experts hired to cover a subject previously studied seem to do little more than re-write an earlier report. For a good fee, of course.

Nobody seems to want to see any of these. Everybody who is interested has one. So out they go.

SOME years ago Harry Karns, now with the Detroit News, as a fellow staffer here did a column for me during an absence.

He needed an eraser or some such item and looked in my middle desk drawer. What he found there startled him and gave him the column, though no eraser was located.

A good idea deserves a repeat, and here are some of the items I now find in the same drawer:

The aforementioned bullet, which was never explained.

An assortment of dry ballpoint pens.

A brass desk plate from the old Chicago Globe.

A score of keys which fit locks retired or forgotten.

A red lapel pin inscribed "Friends of Fred Wilson." Remember the raggedy bike man, now deceased, whom some of us got out of Camarillo?

Two packets of pills for some forgotten ailment.

A painted wooden lapel tag bearing the inscription: "Colorado Springs Picnic, Long Beach, Cal., March 7th, 1903."

EGAD, what things one collects. Karns made a whole readable column out of it, so I'll finish out the list of items in my middle drawer:

The mimeographed criminal record of Eldridge Cleaver.

A copy of the Long Beach traffic ordinance.

Six of the annual rosters of the Long Beach Kiwanis Club, with members' pictures, mine showing something has happened to me in 20 years.

A sliver of paint from the Queen Mary.

A box of crayons.

A large lapel button reading: I GAVE to the IRS.

A piece of celluloid with some mysterious numbers on it.

A 3-cent US stamp bearing the likeness of Joseph Pulitzer.

The 1966 City College football schedule.

An assortment of rulers, a rusty screwdriver, bottle opener, typographical style books, paper clips, column heading engravings, photos of old friends, old Christmas cards.

And an expense voucher I signed and forgot to turn in, eight years old. Should I . . . nope, I guess I had better not try it.

That's pretty much the inventory of Epley's desk drawer.

'Science fiction' innovations

DC-10 like a trip into the future

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Airline passengers boarding the new McDonnell Douglas DC-10 trijet for the first time may get the idea they have booked passage on some giant space ship of the future.

Airborne innovations out of the pages of a science fiction television script are immediately evident. Doors magically disappear into the ceiling, elevators glide noiselessly between decks, pushbutton panels perform instant cabin comfort miracles.

On the spacious flight deck, there is a definite resemblance to Captain Kirk's TV Starship. Surrounded by digital computers and electronic screens flashing images in color, the pilot adjusts his throne-like armchair to his precise personal preference by dialing the proper number combination into a three-way electric-powered control system.

In addition to standard radar navigation aids, the instrument panel display includes scopes for an all-weather automatic landing system. One small screen visualizes the runway ahead regardless of visibility, projects a green landing area pattern and predicts the exact landing point according to aircraft performance with an X of a different color.

This Douglas-designed instrument, selected last week by an international panel of scientists as one of the world's most significant new products of 1971, continues to operate after touchdown, telling the pilot how many feet of rollout are required to brake the plane to a halt.

THE THREE-MAN crew can check on the electronic representation of the outside world by looking at the real one through the largest bay window viewing panels in the jetliner business.

The view through the oversized cabin windows of the two huge fanjet engines slung under the wings is also reminiscent of the mighty Star Trek space thrusters. There is neither visible nor audible evidence of the 120,000 pounds of thrust the DC-10 can generate with its two wing-mounted power plants and an identical third engine in the tail.

Cruising at 35,000 feet on a recent test flight over the Arizona desert, the eighth DC-10 off the Long Beach assembly line maintained its speed of nearly 600 miles an hour with barely a murmur of engine noise or vibration in the cabin.

Douglas engineers attempting to check sound levels with sensitive recording equipment finally gave up and let a group of press observers on the flight resume roaming the double aisles of the three passenger sections of the wide cabin.

The only noticeable engine sound was a slight buzzing when the plane climbed or accelerated. The noise was hardly louder than that made by the electric motors used to lower the landing gear. The big engines emitted no smoke at any time during the three-hour flight.

IN SPITE OF the first impression, the space-age DC-10 design features have nothing to do with show business, Douglas spokesmen explained. Each one, down to the tiny, non-whistling ventilating nozzles in the back of every passenger seat, in some way contributes to improved safety, comfort or environmental compatability.

In the cockpit, the array of computerized instruments lowers the crew's work load and the fancy seats minimize fatigue on long fights.

The two elevators amidship transport food and cabin service personnel between the lowe deck galley and the passenger compartments. The basement kitchen saves space on the main deck for more leg and elbow room.

The prolific pushbuttons built into the armrests of the seats and cabin bulkheads do everything from adjusting the wide seats and hidden spotlights in the eight-foot high ceiling to whisking loose articles of clothing out of sight in overhead storage closets, saving more room on deck.

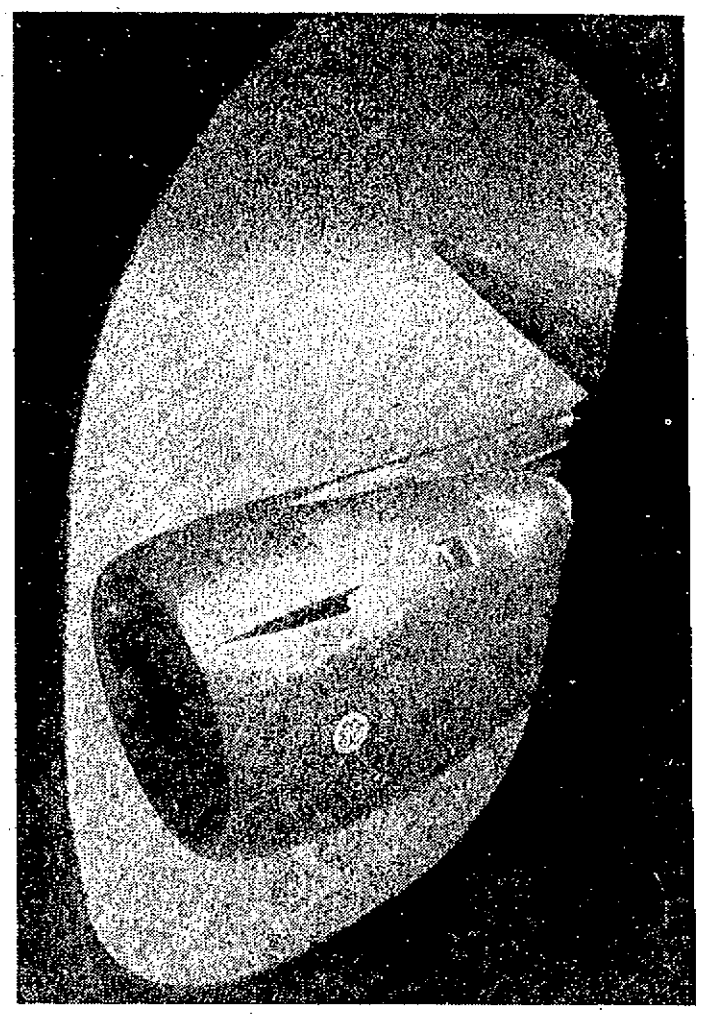

Because the extra-wide DC-10 entrance doors slide up on tracks at the touch of a button, stewardesses do not need help to wrestle them open on windy days. They operate electrically or on bottled air pressure in case of a power failure, with a safety device to prevent opening unless the plane is on the ground.

THE DC-10 USED in the press demonstration is the only one in the Douglas flight development fleet with a full airline seating arrangement, adjustable to accommodate up to 345 passengers. It is the aircraft which was flown from Long Beach to the Paris Air Show this summer, with a nonstop segment from the St. Louis, Mo., headquarters of McDonnell Douglas Corp.

The first two DC-10s in service, operated by American Airlines and United Air Lines, have flown approxmiately 1,000 hours. American took delivery of its second trijet last month, and United is scheduled to receive its second on Monday.

Next of the 19 world airlines which have ordered DC-10s to receive the Douglas trijet will be National Air Lines, scheduled for November.

Douglas officials reported they expect to deliver a total of 12 DC-10s by the end of the year, worth about $200 million.

A VIEW THROUGH a cabin window of the DC-10 Trijet afforded a sight of one of the plane's big fanjet engines, which generate 120,000 pounds of thrust. Passengers often liken it to one of the huge engines in television's science-fiction drama, "Star-Trek."

Hearing on offshore airport delayed; bill being amended

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

The scheduled Tuesday hearing on a proposal to create an agency to study feasibility of an offshore airport in Southern California has been continued to the first week of October, according to Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, author of the proposal.

The delay by the Senate Committee on Local Government was caused by a crowded committee agenda and numerous request from individuals and organizations wishing to offer testimony on Cullen's bill, AB 2777.

Cullen also announced a bill amendment this week to change language "which led many citizens to believe the agency would be authorized to begin construction of an air terminal."

He said his amendment "directs the agency to prepare a study of the long-term development and construction of the Southern California Air Terminal (SCAT) to be located in San Pedro Bay."

A new section has been added which reads, "Notwithstanding the above provisions this act shall not become operative if the Southern California Regional Aviation Systems Study of the Southern California Association of Governments recommends that no further study of an ocean air terminal should be made."

Cullen said major opposition to AB 2777 has centered on the results of this two-year study by SCAG which is expected to be released sometime after the first of the year.

"Should this report recommend further detailed studies of an ocean air terminal, and enabling legislation has not been enacted this session," said Cullen, "it would be at least two years before a state planning agency could be authorized to apply for the Federal Aviation funds needed to complete such a long-range study. This would in effect delay the employment of 56,000 Californians for another two years."

Talk set by balloonist

Don Picard, a hot-air balloonist, is to speak at a joint dinner meeting of the Orange County Bar Association and the Long Beach-Orange County chapter, California Society of CPA's at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Airporter Inn, Newport Beach.

DOGGED RIGHT TO JAIL

This is how S. African cookies crumble in L.B.

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

On the surface it was a very thoughtful, kind and sweet gesture.

A grandson, his wife and baby in Kragga Kamma, South Africa sending a five-pound box of home baked cookies "to the best grandma and grandpa in the world for your silver wedding."

Inside the silver envelope was the thoughtful message "Dear Grandma and Grandpa. A happy anniversary and the best to both of you, may your happiness continue to keep growing all life through! Lots of love and kissing from us all, Linda, Jack and baby."

THE PACKAGE was addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Swarts c-o Sloss, 1243 Upper E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach, 90803, California, U.S.A. Unsolicited gift from David G, Olsen, 106 3rd, Kragga Kamma, S.A."

There were 18 gayly colored South African stamps on the cookie tin and it traveled air mail the 7,500 miles from the sender to New York City, N.Y., posthaste.

There, as a mere formality, it was taken to the customs building.

A police dog, its tail wagging, leisurely sniffed row after row of parcels — none as thoughtful as the silver anniversary parcel heading for Long Beach.

Suddenly the dog stopped and so did it's tail.

Customs officers checked the package.

Inside the package was a layer of homemade cookies but underneath were four bricks of potent marijuana weighing almost five pounds.

When it traveled it's final 2,475 miles to Long Beach it was under constant observation.

A mail carrier delivered the parcel to 1243 E. Ocean, upper apartment.

They reported hearing Deborah Sloss, 22, an insuance biller in a doctor's office say ". . . it's here. The package from South Africa is here."

They then reported a companion, Sammi A. Montaine, 21, of 129 Stanford Lane, Seal Beach, a clerk, secretary in another doctor's office as happily inquiring ". . . can we smoke some now?"

And, they added, she asked Miss Sloss if she could buy two lids and received the answer that she could.

The officers waited while Miss Montaine called a friend and reported the young women discussed the unusual quality of the marijuana and said Miss Sloss agreed to sell Miss Montaine and her friend a half a brick for $100.

BEFORE THE friend, Fred J. Nicholl, 24, of 1751 Loma Ave., a teacher in Rosemead, showed up the officers arrested Miss Sloss and charged her with possession of marijuana for sale and offering it for sale and Miss Montaine with possession of marijuana. Nicholl was booked for possession when he arrived.

Miss Sloss was released under $6,250 bail and will appear in Municipal Court Monday for arraignment. Nicholl and Miss Montaine were released on bail of $1,875 each and will appear Tuesday for arraignment.

Uniforms worn by 2 parking checkers hit

The Association for Los Angeles Deputies has complained to County Supervisor Warren Dorn that two persons employed as parking checkers by Lakewood and Bellflower are wearing sheriff's uniforms.

The two are members of the sheriff's reserve, said an ALAD spokesman. Nevertheless, he added, "we believe these civilians should be equipped with clothing appropriate to their station so as not to mislead the general public."

Copies of the letter, dated Sept. 23, were sent to the city managers of both communities.

Grocers don't give credit anymore

By TODD FINEBERG
Staff Writer

Don't bother to flash your Master Charge or BankAmericard at your corner grocer — he probably won't accept them.

Most Long Beach neighborhood grocers don't extend credit of any kind. The weekly billing system that was a way of life in depression times is no more, despite today's high unemployment and tight economic pinch.

When the Great Depression swept America in the 1930s, grocers extended credit to well-known customers living in a stable neighborhood in the market area. The system of weekly billing was not new, however — it dated back at least before World War I, said longtime Long Beach resident Henry Powell.

"As kids when we went to the store for groceries we never carried any money with us," Powell recalled. "The grocers just put it on a tab—they knew our parents. When our father came in and paid the bill at the end of the week they always gave him a big bag of candy for us."

Elsie Lalonde runs an old-style corner store at Third street and Maine avenue — probably the kind Henry Powell remembers from his youth. But her little store seems to be a lonely island among small grocers who refuse to run a credit business.

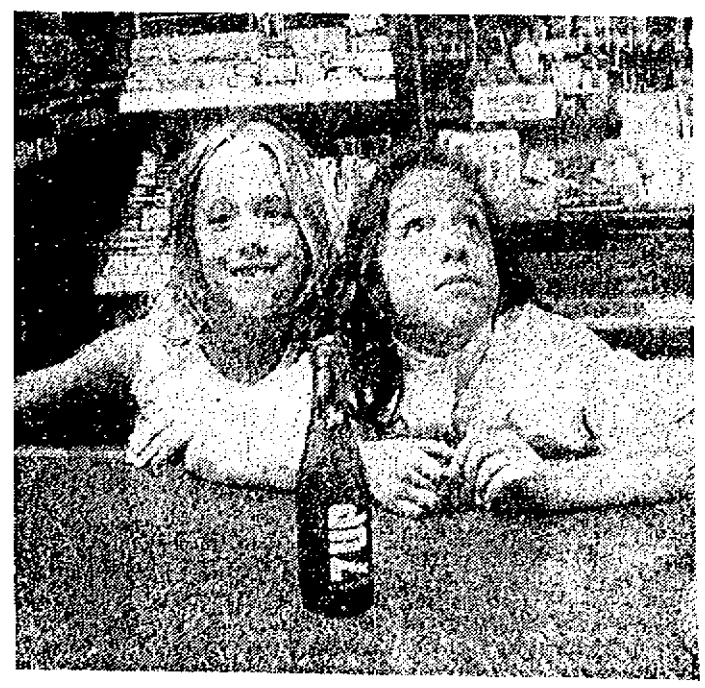

She keeps a card file on credit accounts based on agreed payment dates, but she has no formal weekly billing system like the grocers of the depression period.

But even the compassionate Elsie LaLonde has misgivings about the modern day consumer:

"People don't pay their bills the way they used to. You have to be particular. They could be here today and gone tomorrow—especially in this area."

The market's neighborhood has a transient population but she thinks her credit policy pays.

"You lose on some but you make it up in the long run—probably in good will."

Seeing America up close

Supermarkets, an aircraft manufacturing plant and the Queen Mary might seem an odd combination of tourist attractions, but it was an instructive and enjoyable one for some recent visitors to Long Beach.

The 153 visitors came from Germany, Austria and the Netherlands as part of the American Host Program, a venture that has so far been small in size but large in influence.

THE PROGRAM WAS started in 1961 by two schoolteachers who had spent eight months studying the school systems of Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria and Italy.

In the process, Tom Murphy, a native of Ellwood City, Pa, and his wife, Frances, who was born and grew up in Long Beach, became concerned about the grossly erroneous ideas many foreign educators had about life in the United States.

The Murphys wrote to friends in the United States to ask if they would be willing to have European teachers as guests in their homes for a few weeks. As a result, 100 Eurocopean eduentors were put in touch with possible hosts in America. Sixty paid visits to the United States in the next year.

THAT WAS THE beginning. Since then, more than 2,500 teachers from abroad have visited American families. The largest number — 790 — came from West Germany. Great Britain sent 651 visitors, Holland 512, France 300 and Sweden 295. Smaller numbers came from Denmark, Belgium and Norway.

The Murphys expanded the program — all without any attempt to obtain government funds — to provide seminars on American literature, history, politics and education as such schools as Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey, Williams College and California State College at San Jose. American corporations and foundations picked up most of the tab, and church, civic and service groups recruited host families.

In Long Beach, the visit was arranged by John Barrett, a past president of the Chamber of Commerce, with the support and encouragement of present chamber officials.

THE LONG BEACH visitors were not teachers but businessmen and journalists. Some brought their wives also. The group toured the McDonnellDouglas plant, visited the Queen Mary and took a harbor boat tour. And since a number of the visitors are members of a cooperative that operates supermarkets throughout Europe, they also paid a call on four supermarkets.

Probably the most useful part of the visit, however, was the contact with Long Beach families in their homes.

That provided the intimate meeting with Americans that many foreign visitors don't get. Both the visitors and the host families found the experience enriching.

Those who participated — visitors and hosts alike — deserve community gratitude. This International City should seek out more such opportunities to tell its story — and the story of America — to friends from overseas.

Learning to line up

EDITOR:

Cal State Long Beach students are having their usual problems as the new semester gets under way. The bookstore appears to be totally inadequate. I personally counted at 9 a.m. Sept. 21 over 200 students waiting to gain entrance. By 3:30 p.m. the number had diminished little, if any.

Redondo Beach JOSEPH F. SMOUSE

Navy's good neighbor

EDITOR:

As one whose home adjoins the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station, I favor continued use of this facility for the purpose it was intended.

Throughout the past ten years, I have found the Navy to be a very good neighbor. As a taxpayer, I am always glad to see economy in government and I am sure the cessation of Navy operations was thoughtfully considered.

During the Pueblo incident, this station was put on a full-time active duty basis. Another headline like the Pueblo and we could need this facility again. It should be retained by the government for whatever military use can be allotted to it.

Los Alamitos THOMAS W. REDFIELD

Who's at sea?

EDITOR:

Mr. Epley says, in obvious surprise, "Nothing is noncontroversial. For a while everybody seemed agreed that an offshore airport would be the answer to the air transport problem . . Now a big drive is abuilding against the idea . . . It's hard to keep up with the shifts in prevailing views."

There's been no shift of view. It's just that most of us thought the idea of an airport plunked down atop our ocean too ridiculous to be seriously entertained by anyone.

Can fired U.S. employe win open hearing?

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Nixon has permitted the Air Force to maneuver him into support of the effort to fire A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the man who uncovered the massive cost overruns in the C-5A air transport contract with Lockheed.

The Justice Department has filed an appeal from an order by United States District Court Judge William Bryant that the use of closed hearings in the Fitzgerald case is "unconstitutional" and a violation of "due process" to which the cost analyst is entitled.

Clark Mollenhoff

Until Judge Bryant entered his order, the Nixon Administration and Civil Service Commission Chairman Robert Hampton could claim they weren't espousing the Air Force thesis that the burden of proof was on Fitzgerald to prove he is entitled to a public hearing.

Only a few weeks ago, Chairman Hampton indicated Judge Bryant's decision wouldn't be appealed. However, he has now authorized the appeal of the order which said the Civil Service Commission is "permanently enjoined from holding hearings closed to the press and the public in the appeal to plaintiff Fitzgerald."

Fitzgerald is the former Air Force cost analyst who in 1968 revealed to Senator William Proxmire's subcommittee on economy in government that there was a $2 billion cost overrun on the C-5A Galaxy jet transport plane. He was dismissed by the Air Force a few months later.

The Air Force has denied there was any connection between Fitzgerald's testimony before Proxmire's committee and the decision to drop him. The millitary officials say Fitzgerald's job was eliminated in an economy reshuffling.

The problems for the White House over the Fitzgerald dismissal are sure to multiply once there is a clear understanding that the White House backs the appeal based on the Air Force thesis that closed hearings do not violate due process and are not unconstitutional.

There is no claim by the Air Force that the national security would be endangered by open hearings.

The Air Force is also seeking to hide the story that its spokesmen scampered all over Washington explaining there were some highly questionable activities on the part of Fitzgerald that was the real reason he was being fired. They hinted darkly at some "conflict of interest" on Fitzgerald's part.

The problem of the cost overruns involved actions taken in the last months of the Johnson administration. There was no reason for either President Nixon or Defense Secretary Melvin Laird to get involved.

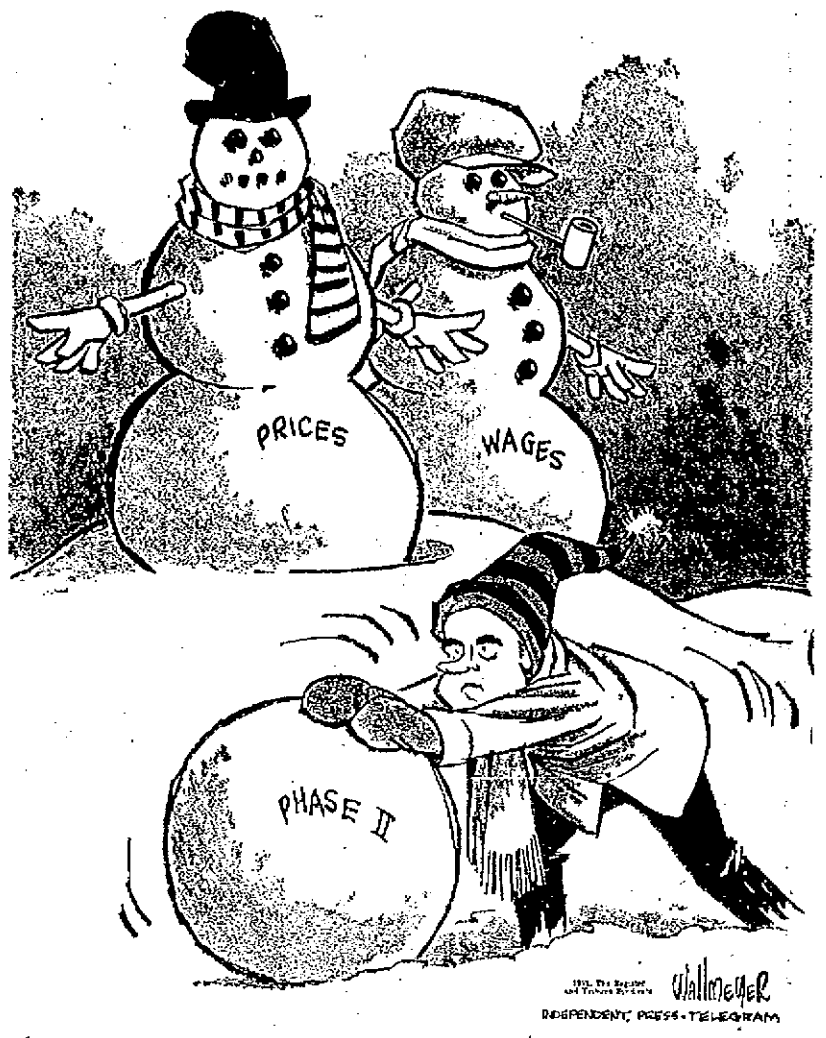

Yet, over a period of the last three years, the Nixon administration has permitted itself to be pulled deeper into the Fitzgerald matter by Air Force Secretary Robert Seamans Jr. and the legal offices of both the Air Force and Civil Service Commission.

While the Air Force takes the position that Fitzgerald's job was abolished, Fitzgerald claims he is simply being fired because he "told the truth." He is trying to get his job back through civil service procedures.

Fitzgerald contends the Air Force wants a closed hearing to avoid exposure to its "smear campaign" against him.

Fitzgerald argues that closed hearings are provided for in the law solely as "a protection for the employe" and not as a protection for the government, Only national security grounds could be used by the Air Force in insisting that its witnesses appear in closed session.

Fitzgerald went through several days of closed hearings before taking his case before Judge Bryant in June. Judge Bryant ruled "this closed hearing is unconstitutional and, if allowed to proceed, would result in a fundamental right forever lost to him (Fitzgerald)."

Making points offstage

The political holding companies of America, in the persons of a number of Democratic candidates, are setting up negotiable vote escrows for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy whether they intend to or not, whether they like it or not.

Thus politics makes stalking horses of several on the Democratic roster, notably Sen. George McGovern, of South Dakota, and Sen. Birch Bayh, of Indiana. Former subalterns of the several Kennedys have attached in numbers to the McGovern and Bayh presidential campaigns.

Avant garde types through history who have put all their eggheads into one reform basket, have been contemporarily snickered at, ridiculed and jostled out of contention. Some live to see their radical ideas become the nation's stoutly defended code.

And so the Hubert Humphrey of 25 years ago fighting for civil rights finally earns a demerit badge for prescience but no 1968 or 1972 points. There's no retroactive adulation, only a remembrance of a guy who wasn't savvy enough to know his idea's time had not come back in 1948.

A MONUMENTAL example is the once-pinko idea of dealing with Mainland China. Under President Nixon's aegis it becomes respectable. But you won't find any attaboy vouchers deposited to the accounts of Democrats who stumped for it years ago.

Similarly, George McGovern's flat declaration here Friday that he would immediately grant amnesty to Vietnam war draft dodgers if he became president is probably enough to lock him at dead still in the polls. Because generally it's only the young and vulnerable who really mean it when they say they despise war.

Few among the public, and hardly any presidential candidates, really want or will accept complete honesty in a political campaign. For example, Sen. Edmund Muskie's rejection of a black running mate because this country would vote the ticket down in November, 1972. Honesty is premature in this nation's '70s. But you won't have to look hard to find him called a fool.

Muskie was honest and he was right. And he miscalculated.

SEN. FRED HARRIS of Oklahoma has about as much chance of catching fire as a presidential candidate (he made his official announcement Friday) as Norman Thomas ever did. Harris says his will be a populist campaign. Redistribution of wealth is a keystone. What he means is a better distribution of income and power but it's bound to be head as anticapitalistic mischief.

So you see candidates like these amassing blocs of support. You see thousands of students at Cal State Long Beach whistling, cheering and applauding George McGovern —the biggest response they registered— when he made his statement on amnesty.

Through all of the "new direction, new priority" rhetoric of the candidates you see the thread of the pitch that had Sen. Robert F. Kennedy riding very high indeed. In other words, you see a lot of wagons in the yard, all filled with the best goodies the preeminent Democratic philosophers can devise. And yet there's no star to hitch the wagons to.

WHAT YOU MAY have in next year's primaries are a lot of these rhetorics colliding and all sounding pretty much the same. Rather than the acid tests which these contenders deem them, the primaries may turn out to be parochial victories, flat and unconvincing and ho-hum.

Then you have Ted Kennedy waiting in the wings, an ideal stand-in for a good share of the tenets all the drones have been propounding for a year and a half. And possibly, completely outside that supporting flock, a Sen. Henry Jackson from the Far West to balance the ticket.

Lawyers, judges battle Hayes plan for courts

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, has established a remarkable track record in his five years in the State Legislature.

He has successfully sponsored several pieces of major legislation, his divorce reform law probably being the most notable. He has encountered heavy opposition to a number of his bills, but his intelligence, industry, and intuitive political skills have enabled him to get most of the ones he really wanted through the Legislature.

Now, however, he is carrying a package of bills which probably faces more heavyweight opposition than any other measure or group of measures he has introduced.

The Hayes bills — AB 1400, 1401, 2743, and Assembly Constitutional Amendment 45 — would drastically restructure California's court system. There is virtual unanimity of agreement that the system is in need of major repairs; the disagreement is in how those repairs should be effected.

Hayes, an attorney, has proposed combining all of the state's courts into what he calls "a single trial court or general jurisdiction called the superior court."

Municipal court judges would automatically become judges of the superior court, and justice court judges would be called magistrates.

The State Judicial Council would administer the system, and would have authority to move judges around to meet work load demands. All fines, forfeitures, and filing fees would go into a state court fund, and the state would handle all financing.

The loss by county and local governments of revenues from fines and forfeitures would be more than made up by the expenses for judges and courtrooms, Hayes says.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post has estimated that property taxpayers' bills would be reduced by some $60 million yearly.

Hayes' package cleared the Assembly July 22 by a 56-17 vote, and is set for a special 8 p.m. hearing by the Senate Judiciary Committee Oct. 5.

The heavyweight opposition the package has acquired so far include the chief justice of the State Supreme Court, the Judicial Council, and the state bar.

"There is virtually no specific criticism," Hayes says. "The matter has been studied to death, and during the two years I was chairman of the Assembly Judiciary Committee the committee thoroughly reviewed this proposal and asked the Judicial Council to do the same.

"The council did nothing but delay. Now, this year, when I would stand for the feet-dragging no longer, I pushed the legislation through two Assembly committees and the floor of the Assembly. The Judicial Council did not utter a word of opposition.

"But when the measures reached the Senate, the Judicial Council hastily contracted with a consulting firm to tack on a study of this subject to a study of another subject nearly completed."

"Los Angeles Superior Court judges passed a resolution in February opposing unification of the trial court system of California one month before I introduced the legislation," he said. "They acted to oppose before any evidence was before them.

"If they are deciding cases this way, those judges should be removed."

Hayes, thoroughly angry, issued a six-page statement last week in which he vented his spleen against the package's opponents.

It was undiplomatic and uncharacteristic of him, but the blast should serve to force critics of his bills to make their opposition specific when the measures are heard by the Senate committee a week from Tuesday.

If court administrators feel the Hayes package is not the answer, they should say why, and if they can justify their opposition and present constructive proposals of their own, the bills can still serve as vehicles for the changes which are so obviously needed and needed quickly.

Hayes, of course, would have to be convinced of the merits of any proposed changes, as would the members of Sen. Alfred H. Song's judiciary committee.

Log jams and other causes for delays in criminal and civil court matters are undermining confidence in the judicial process. It is difficult to see how confidence in the legislative process can be enhanced by further delay in finding a remedy for the courts' ills.

Uh . . . what BRAND of canned vichyssoise?

'Life in Harlem is the very stuff of romance'

Samuel I. Hayakawa

Basically Albert Murray is a literary man, dedicated to "the dramatic sense of life" rather than the abstractions and categories of the social sciences. What disturbs him profoundly is the extent to which leading intellectuals of our times, both black and white, have been led astray by social science theories which are in his view at best superficial, and at their worst intellectualized expressions of racial condescension or outright racism.

For example, Murray charges in "The Omni-Americans: New Perspectives on Black Experience and American Culture" (Outerbridge & Dienstfrey, 1970; distributed by E. P. Dutton) that the social scientist "substitutes academic subject matter for culture. He then misrepresents deficiencies in formal technical training as cultural deprivation, a very neat trick indeed."

CERTAINLY THE American Negro subculture has many identifiable features of its own — its language, its humor, its music and dance, its gracious courtesy, and above all, as Murray says, its high sense of style. If people are well versed in all these aspects of culture but not in academic subject matter, is it proper or scientific to call them, whether in pity or condescension, "culturally deprived"?

Yet, says Murray, many, including even Negro spokesmen and black militants, accept the "folklore of white supremacy and the fakelore of black pathology . . . Even the most smugly chauvinistic black spokesmen . . . refer to themselves as being fear-ridden, emasculated, and without self-respect."

Books like "Black Rage," by William Grier and Price Cobbs, and "Dark Ghetto," by Kenneth B. Clark, although written by blacks, "presents a point of view which is essentially white, (insisting) that slavery and oppression have reduced Negroes to such a tangle of pathology that all black American behavior is in effect only a pathetic manifestation of black cowardice, self-hatred, escapism and destructiveness . . . Almost every chapter of 'Dark Ghetto' . . . represents Negroes as substandard human beings who subsist in a sick community. Its image of Harlem is, in effect, that of an urban pit writhing with derelicts."

ALBERT MURRAY'S indictment of modern Negro writers — except Ralph Ellison — is fierce. Richard Wright, for example, gave an extremely distorted view of Chicago: "Those seriously interested in the actual texture of life in the Chicago of Bigger Thomas . . . would do well to supplement reading 'Native Son with a dozen or so recordings of Earl Hines' great Grand Terrace orchestra . . . Despite the fact that the musician has long occupied the position of supreme artist for .U.S. Negroes. Wright almost always wrote as if he were totally unrelated to what Count Basie, Jimmie Lunceford, Fats Waller, Lionel Hampton . . . were saying about black experience during his day."

Because James Baldwin, says Murray, "has relied more and more on the abstract categories of social research and less and less on the poetic insights of the creative artist," he has in his work "degraded U.S. Negro life to the level of the subhuman in the very process of pleading the Negro's humanity . . . Life in Harlem is the very stuff of romance and fiction, even as was life in Chaucer's England, Cervantes' Spain, Rabelais' France . . . But what Baldwin writes about is not really life in Harlem. He writes about the economic . . . and material plight of Harlem. But far from writing in terms of a U.S. Negro tradition, he confuses everything with Jewish tradition and writes about life in a black ghetto! . . . He often writes as if he were really a black, brown or beige New York Jewish intellectual of immigrant parents."

MURRAY CONCEDES that there is truth in the terrible things that black writers say about Negro life in America. The picture of black despair, however, is far from being the whole truth. The U.S. Negro is above all a special kind of American, and what he contributes to the culture uniquely is a sense of style:

"Style is not only insight but disposition and gesture . . . It's a way of sizing up the world, and so, ultimately and above all else, a mode and medium of survival . . . What makes man human is style. Hence the crucial significance of art in the study of human behavior.

"But then perhaps only works of fiction on the scale of Tolstoy, Joyce and Thomas Mann can truly do justice to the enduring humanity of U.S. Negroes, people who, for instance, can say of their oppressors, 'Yeah, we got our troubles all right. But still and all, if white folks could be black for just one Saturday night they wouldn't never want to be white folks no more!' "

Why can't we read more good news?

The current complaint about newspapers goes something like this: "All you do is print the bad news; why can't we have more good news?"

To this charge, I would make reply that if editors printed only the bland and sanitized versions of the news our critics say they want, who would read us?

As for "good news" and "bad news," we publish a goodly ration of the former which somehow goes largely unnoticed by critical readers who enjoy instructing the editor.

"BAD NEWS," being in ample supply owing to the fact that we live in an uncivilized world of war, uncontrollable passions and the mendacity of public and private men, tends to overwhelm "good news" by its very volume alone.

Beyond that, the newspaper is rightly the conscience of the community — ferreting out wrongdoing and incompetence in public affairs while building constructively through well reasoned and "plain talk" commentary.

We likewise honor the opinions of our readers, listen to what they have to say and endeavor, if possible, to redress their grievances.

Some have attacked us for sensationalism when newspapers of the Knight group were winning a dozen Pulitzer prizes, or because we fight against injustice, audit the government at all levels and denounce plunderings by the privileged as well as by the poor.

WHAT REALLY MUST concern the editors of today is how well they are able to distinguish between the important and the unimportant news. Equally compelling is the ability to interpret the news fairly, accurately and perceptively.

As you ladies and gentleman know so well, the name of the game in Washington and in every state and local community is to raise serious doubts about the credibility of the press.

In large part, the aspersions cast upon us by the vice president and other disgruntled public officials are calculated to make us unbelievable to the general public. We should, I think, accept such criticism philosophically while endeavoring to set the record straight at all times.

An editor, who must or should take vigorous editorial positions on the great issues of the day, is not meant to be loved. If he seeks affection and popularity, he should be in public relations. Newspapermen who formulate policy must base their conclusions upon the facts at hand. The unvarnished truth is frequently unpleasant reading since it so often differs from the reader's preconceived notions of what the truth should be.

AT TIMES, I fear, elements of communication — popularly known as the press media — provide through their own lack of commitment and perception, some inexcusable transgressions upon the code of truth and accuracy. In these instances, criticism is certainly merited and cannot be dismissed with lofty disdain from the ivory tower.

JOHN S. KNIGHT

Editorial chairman, Knight Newspapers

The press — both print and electronic — is not without fault but in its relentless pursuit of the truth, it stands today as the best protector of your precious freedoms.

IT HAS BEEN suggested that I might make a few observations about the state of the nation, as it looks from here.

I find it sorely troubled, if not dismaying.

We are still not disentangled from the Indochina war.

The economy is lagging; too many people willing and able to work are still unemployed.

Our imbalance of trade continues to mount, the first such trade deficit since 1893.

The federal budget shortfall, first forecast at a $11.6 billion for the current fiscal year, is now expected to reach $29 billion, a record since World War II.

The nation is currently being torn by the busing controversy and a maze of conflicting court decisions and contradictory administration pronouncements.

NOTE: A large percentage of high government officials and members of Congress send their children to private schools. This list includes the attorney general, who has the responsibility for enforcing Supreme Court desegregation decisions, and Sen. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, who dolefully explains that Washington public schools do not provide acceptable educational opportunities for his children.

A Republican President and the Democratic Congress are feuding more than usual, with 1972 just around the corner and re-election quite obviously in mind.

AM I SAYING that everything is completely hopeless? Well, not quite.

The country was moved, except for George Meany and Mr. Nixon's political rivals, to a sense of unity by his wage-price freeze of Aug. 15.

And it can work, provided the Cost of Living Council does not grant too many exceptions and the Congress does not emasculate Nixon's plan.

Although a critic of many of the President's policies, I have in recent months given him good marks on foreign policy. Our quiet diplomacy in the Middle East has kept Israel and the Arabs talking, rather than going to war.

The proposed visit to China finally concedes that 800 million other people do exist, and will be a factor in whatever solutions can be attained to further world order.

Mr. Nixon's unpredictability, both with the China move and his economic proposals have temporarily thrown his opponents off balance. I speculate that a third blockbuster — appropriately timed — may come in an announcement that some agreements have been reached with Hanoi as to ending the war and getting our prisoners released.

Such a pronouncement would leave his opposition gasping for air, and devoid of issues.

WITHIN THE LAST few days, one of our editors voiced the fear that in my recent praise of the President, I might be painting myself into a corner well before the 1972 election.

I advised him that I saw no danger.

Why? Well, if you will pardon my immodesty, I think I am wise enough to avoid such a mistake. Also wary, agile and unpredictable — to use a few adjectives.

The point you may be missing is that I have a long record of opposing Nixon on substantive issues. The war, Cambodia, accelerated depreciation, two Supreme Court nominees, economic inaction prior to the wage-price freeze — to mention a few.

I have lately praised Nixon for the China journey and his belated economic moves. Tomorrow or the day after tomorrow, I may be belaboring him again.

And let's look at Nixon's opposition:

Hubert Humphrey: Cold tea.

Birch Bayh: Incredibly shallow.

Fred Harris: A populist and a bush-league Humphrey.

John Lindsay: Not in the hunt.

Teddy Kennedy: Charismatic but unsteady. On his record, how well equipped for the Presidency is he?

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington: A good man, but with a long record of hawkish inclinations, friend of the Pentagon, supporter of the war. Can the Democrats afford to pick him?

Sen. George McGovern: Right on the war (finally), and described by Stewart Alsop as an isolationist-populist. He fails to stir the populace.

Ed Muskie: Possibly the best of the lot. Has trouble arriving at positions at this stage. Outwardly calm, but has a short fuse. An honest man. Will he shelve convictions for political advantage? Most candidates do. We will wait and see.

Nixon has done well on foreign policy. Had he acted promptly on Vietnam after assuming office, no one could defeat him in 1972. But then the President doesn't listen to me, except when he hungers for a good breakfast and an 80-minute chat with someone he knew in the informal and sometimes dismal days of long ago.

So don't worry, I told our editor. I can always make an end run when required.

L.A.C. Says

By L.A. COLLINS SR.

How much profit do you think justified?

Just how much profit do the 7.5 million business enterprises in this country make? Some 500,000 are corporations. The others are partnerships or individually owned enterprises.

The great majority of these units employ only a few people; in many the proprietor is the entire staff. But they are all what is known as private enterprise. They are the instruments that make it possible for 75 million people in this country to be highly paid workers. It is therefore important that the workers in these establishments understand the need for profit and appreciate how essential new capital is.

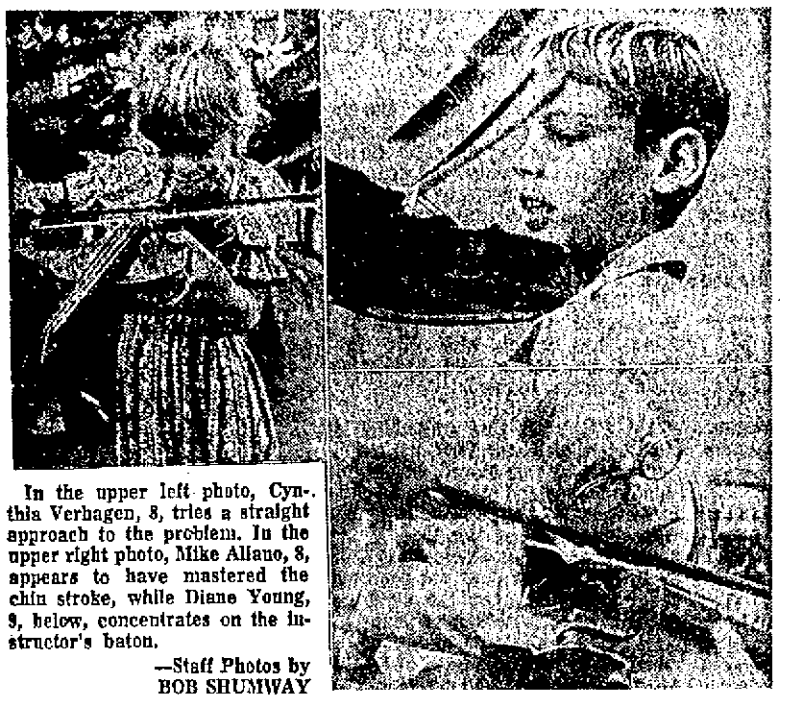

SOME YEARS AGO we asked a group of union negotiators how much they thought a business was entitled to make as a profit. The answers ranged from 10 per cent to 30 per cent on the investment or on the sale of its products. When we told them the profits were actually less than 5 per cent they would not believe us, but the cold fact is that the great majority of workers are employed in enterprises that do not net 5 per cent either on capital invested or on the annual volume of business done.

The great meat-packing business is one example. That industry is fortunate if it makes one cent of each dollar it handles during a given year. It makes as high as 5 per cent or 6 per cent on the value of its stock when times are good. That is because it turns over its capital so fast it can do so on the small margin. But there is very little leeway for unnecessary expenditures. Wages, increased freight rates or new additions cannot be financed without affecting the price of the foods handled by the packers. If the entire profit of the meat packers were to be wiped out it would affect the price of meat by less than one per cent — one penny for each dollar of sales.

Much this same pattern is found in all food processing and distributing companies. The retail food markets operate on a total net profit of slightly more than one cent of each dollar they take in. Here again large profits are made by turning over the capital many times a year. But this calls for expert handling of all phases of marketing. The profits have little effect on food prices. But profits are essential if buyers are to get the constantly improved service they find in food markets.

LARGER MARGINS of profit are found in manufacturing industries. But the turnover of capital is much slower. The cost of expanding facilities is much greater. The need of new capital is constant. It is therefore essential that steel, shipping, mining and other industries pay reasonable interest to investors for use of their savings. The average dividends paid on all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange are less than 5 per cent of the market value. The average earnings of stocks are less than 8 per cent of market value. That means that corporations paying 5 per cent dividends — or interest on investments — have less than 3 cents from each dollar of sales to pay for expansion, which means protection of present jobs and preparing for future jobs.

These are factors workers should understand. Profits are their safeguard. An employer who does not make a profit is not likely to employ people very long. That is a cold fact that should be remembered as unions demand more money from industries that have no profits they can pay out and still be solvent. The pat answer is to raise prices. That is the road to destruction. It means inflation and destruction of the value of the dollar. We are about at a point where present profits will be hard to maintain in a highly competitive market.

New Lakewood program

Fiddling for fun

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

There is no junior Jasha Heifetz at Betsy Ross Elementary School in Lakewood, but 35 fourth graders are becoming accomplished violinists this week, able to play the accompaniment to "Three Blind Mice."

The youngsters are participating in a new program inaugurated this fall by the Bellflower School District. Fourth graders throughout the district are taught to play the violin at half-hour sessions for four days. If any wish to continue lessons, they can register for the school's instrumental music program.

They like to hug and touch musical instruments and have fun listening to the sounds," said Dr. Charlotte Stevenson, district gram innovator.

"The second purpose," she said, "is to recruit children for the music program. So many parents are reluctant to rent or buy an instrument until they know whether their child likes it or not, but most kids never get close enough to an instrument to find out."

Violins are being used in the class because the school district has enough to go round, but only a limited supply of wind instruments.

The children's response to the class has been favorable.

"One boy told me he was going to miss school, so he wouldn't have to play the violin," said Dr. Stevenson. "At the end of the fourth lesson, he said proudly he was going to play like Beethovan."

But Compton man still faces trial

Judge praises self-defense in court

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

A Compton man won a judge's praise for his skill in defending himself on two bad check charges, but the jurist still ordered him to face Long Beach Superior Court trial on the two felonies.

Leroy Frank Holmen, who has been in the forefront of the campaign to free former Teamsters Union boss Jimmy Hoffa from federal prison, is accused of cashing two $200 checks with intent to defraud the Bank of America.

Holmen, 44, also known as Robert E. Morgan, of 1611 E. Alondra Blvd., was permitted by Municipal Court Judge Elsworth M. Beam to represent himself in a lengthy preliminary hearing.

At issue is the status of Holman's checking account after ex-Mayor Frank E. Leal of Cerritos cashed a

LEROY HOLMEN
Defends Self

$1,000 check and a "hold" was placed on the account, according to an assistant cashier's notes.

The cashier, Gary Ernst, presented the notes in court, outlining his research on an invoiced series of transactions around mid-June, including the two checks that led to the charges against Holmen.

The defendant, a six-footer weighing about 250 pounds, called no defense witnesses, but closely cross-examined Ernst and other employes of three bank branches who were called the Deputy District Attorney John W. Bax.

At one point Holmen told Judge Beam money "was actualy in this account" to cover the two checks.

Ernst's notes, an exhibit in the case, indicate that when former Mayor Leal presented his check at a Bank of America branch in Artesia June 14, employe Rose Marie Wilson telephoned the North Long Beach branch to check the status of the account Holmen had there.

She told Leal the balance would not cover the check. Leal then made a $60 deposit into Holmen's account, raising the balance sufficiently, and cashed his check.

Rose Marie Wilson, who was not a witness, then called back to North Long Beach and placed a "hold" on the account. Wilma Irene Laudenback, teller at the Long Beach Cherry Avenue-Poppy Street branch, testified Holmen in person presented the $200 checks to her on the afternoon of June 15 and 16.

On cross-examination by Holmen, she testified that one of those checks was dated June 15 and perforations cut through it showed it was paid out June 21, while the other was dated May 16 and the perforations indicated payment June 27.

Mrs. Laudenback said that normally "perforations are stamped the day a check come in and are processed by the computer."

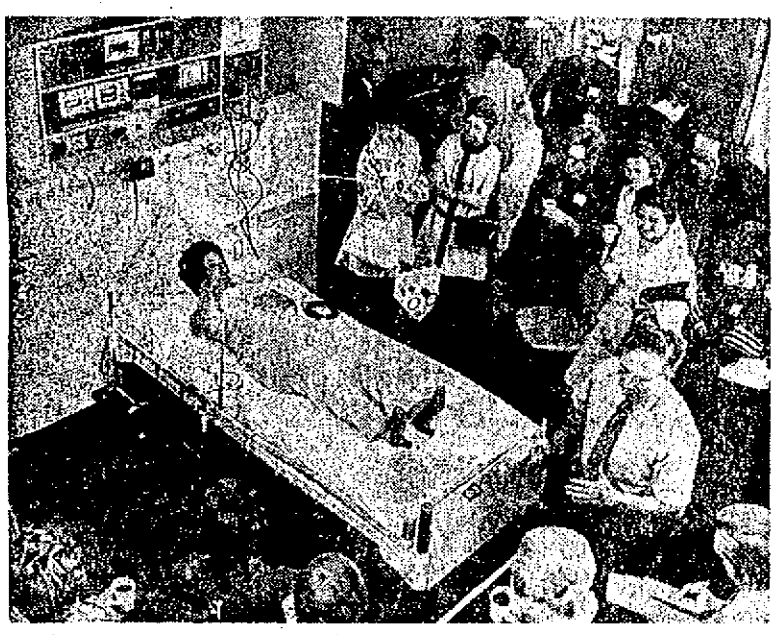

Before accepting the $200 checks, the witness said, she called North Long Beach branch, where employe Corinne Swisher checked the status sheet of Holmen's account and reported it contained sufficient funds each time.

Miss Swisher testified that she is so much shorter than other girls working in the bank that she had to stretch to study status sheets on a counter top.

She testified she made a mistake in her reading, having her hand spread out and her thumb over an "H" for hold on the sheet.

In cross-examination, Holmen led her through close study of a series of status sheets and an explanation of how they are imprinted by computer, but checked visually and amended by hand if the machine work needs correction.

Judge Beam ordered the defendant to appear for Superior Court arraignment Oct. 6 before Judge Beach Vasey, allowing him to remain free under $1,875 bond.

A DEMONSTRATION OF A SPACE AGE CORONARY BED
At Aerospace Medicine Spin-off Symposium Saturday

Space age spin-offs a boon to earth's medical problems

By LOU GODFREY
Staff Writer

What is a spin-off?

Technically, a spin-off might be the result of the application of aerospace technology to earthbound problems.

Actually, a spin-off can be the exotic medical technique or device that save or extends lives. That was the topic of the Aerospace Medicine Spin-off Symposium held Saturday at the Long Beach Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow Rd.

The day-long symposium was devoted to discussion and display of medical techniques and equipment that have been developed as a result of aerospace research directed toward putting men on the moon.

Southern California physicians and medical researchers reviewed for the audience of doctors and nurses the latest developments in life-saving techniques that have become possible as a result of space hardware spin-offs.

Some of those developments are surprising.

One of the early problems space researchers faced was the effects of weightlessness. To solve the problems, the condition of zero gravity had to first be simulated on earth by complicated mechanical techniques.

Those techniques are now being re-examined as potentially useful in physical therapy and rehabilitation. Bodies can be suspended by water, cables or air, and beneficial therapeutic results can be evaluated.

Environmental- and life-support systems used in the Apollo spacecraft, such as air purification and contaminant removal processes, are being reviewed for potential use in cases where patients must be isolated and maintained in sterile surroundings.

Vehicles developed as moonwalkers have been modified for use by patients who otherwise might be confined to a bed or wheelchair.

Monitor systems used to evaluate the physical condition of astronauts in flight are now being used in hospitals, enabling fewer medical personnel to provide better care for more patients.

Dr. Temkin and Phillips are now working on an X-ray machine that will rotate 360 degrees around a hospital bed.

Recreation Calendar

Sept. 26-Oct. 2, 1971

SUNDAY

10-5 p.m.—Learn about ecology on the self-guided nature-trails — El Dorado Nature Center.

12-5 p.m.—See the circle races at the Long Beach Marina Stadium.

1 p.m.—Recreational swimming is now available at the Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool and Silverado Pool (also 2 p.m. at Belmont Plaza.)

MONDAY

1&12 p.m.—Decorate your own cake at El Dorado Park—8 weeks, fee $5.00.

3 p.m.—Mommy and Me tiny tot swimming lesson—Silverado Pool (also 12:30 p.m. at Belmont Plaza.)

TUESDAY

9:30-1:30 p.m.—Basketry and textile painting workshop at Bixby Park (11 weeks for $3.00).

12:30-2:30 p.m.—Learn how to Knit in an 8 week course at El Dorado Park (Fee $3.00).

4:30 p.m.—Recreational swimming for all at Poly High School.

7 p.m.—Water safety instructor course will be offered at Millikan High School.

7 p.m.—Learn how to play the guitar at Wardlow Park (Fee $6.00).

WEDNESDAY

9:30-1:30 p.m.—Adult craft workshops are now open at California Recreation Center, El Dorado Park and Admiral Kidd Park (11 weeks, Fee $2.00).

10-12 p.m.—Learn how to crochet at Wardlow Park (8 weeks, Fee $5.00.)

7-9 p.m.—Make 'Back to School' clothes for your children by sewing with stretch material at Wardlow Park (8 weeks—Fee $7.50) (also Bixby Park on Thursday.)

7 p.m.—Recreational swimming for all at Millikan High Pool (also Belmont Plaza Pool.)

7 p.m.—If you own a guitar why not take lessons at Heartwell Park (Fee $6.00).

'Iron Paul' recalls depression times

NEW YORK — Paul Lipson — "Iron Paul," they call him — clumps and roars around the stage at the Broadway Theater, long-bearded and in noisy boots, making history in the marathon musical, "Fiddler on the Roof" and it's hard to believe that Tevye and I both went to Ohio State University.

And especially that a mere youth like me was there ahead of him.

"Yeah, depression time ... 1935 to '39 ... Jerry Lawrence and Eileen Heckart were there ... I couldn't afford college. But, my rabbi in Pittsfield, Mass., Henry Kaplan, was going to Columbus to take over Hillel Foundation."

"Iron Paul" — they call him that because he's done more than 3,000 performances in the show in various roles and missed only one — and I discussed this at 4 in the afternoon at a new Chinese restaurant, the International. He's a Chinese food maniac.

"HOW ABOUT those northern Chinese noodles? Aren't they wonderful and fattening?" he slurps, as he makes the chopsticks sing.

"And so, since I had no money, my rabbi took me as director of social activities and I directed the Hillel Players. But every summer a bunch of us guys would go to the Catskills in New York and work as waiters and actors. We learned our craft."

Lipson, 57 now, a bachelor (yet ever so believable as the unreasonable father Tevye) has made "Fiddler" his life since 1964 when he signed on as Zero Mostel's understudy with a tiny part besides.

"How many Tevyes now?" He puts down the chopsticks, brings out a small diary. "As of last night, 1,648 everywhere. On Broadway, 735."

Brushing back the beard, contemplating the egg-and-shrimps and sesame rolls, he says he was 10 years out of college with his social administration degree before he was a real actor, fraternizing with Horace McMahon and Ralph Bellamy while in "Detective Story." One of his many jobs was teaching Sunday School at Rodeph Shotom at about $15 a Sunday, specializing in history and current events.

"IRON PAUL" went on as Tevye even before the show opened in New York. Zero got sick in Washington. "I went on six times — without a rehearsal ..."

After Zero came Luther Adler, Herschel Bernardi and Harry Goz with Lipson as understudy, standby or playing Avram, the bookseller or Lazar the butcher ... all over the country. In Las Vegas in July 1968, producer Hal Prince said so long to Theodore Bikel and told Paul, "It's all yours." Paul played 14 times a week there, two shows a night.

Then on Jan. 19, 1970, he took over as Tevye in New York, having already played it about 60 times in New York. In April 1970, he found even he wasn't made of iron.

"I got up one Saturday morning and found my throat was gone. I missed the matinee. My understudy Jerry Jarrett went on. By night I was able to do the show."

He took one night off to go to Hollywood to do a commercial. Though he's played Tevye now more than anybody, he said as he stroked his beard, "I think Carol Channing beat me in number of performances in 'Hello, Dolly!' on Broadway."

A checkup showed Carol with 653 to his 735.

"But she didn't miss any," he said. "They should call her Iron Carol."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Jack Carter was disappointed with his trip to Paris: "They brag about sidewalk cafes, with tables and chairs on the street. We have that here — but we call it 'getting evicted.'"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: There are two ways to handle women — and both of them are wrong.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "When someone tells you, "I'll think it over and let you know' — you already know." — Olin Miller.

EARL'S PEARLS? Leonard L. Levinson's "Complete Book of Pickles and Relishes" describes dill pickles: "They're good alone — or with somebody."

Current events are so grim that Taffy Tuttle can't decide whether to watch the 6 o'clock news and not be able to eat, or the 11 o'clock news and not be able to sleep. THAT'S EARL, BROTHER.

UNSMOOTH SAILING

Marvin Cloyd shines in ribald 'Plaza Suite' role in Bellflower

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

Marvin Cloyd's fans — and they are legion among Long Beach-area theatergoers — hereby are warned their final chance to catch this versatile fellow promeating through the "Plaza Suite" will be next weekend at Bellflower Theater Arts Association's comfortable playhouse.

"PLAZA SUITE"
By Neil Simon
Directed by John Williams
Designed by Chuck Foreman and Williams
Cast

Marvin Cloyd portrays different roles in each act. Act I, "Visitor from Mamaroneck," Betty Motsinger, Gery Van Antwerp, George Spelvin, Barbara Ymuzinski. Act II, "Visitor from Hollywood," Barbara Crocker, Spelvin. Act III, "Visitor from Forest Hills," Ann Leverett, Jana Young, Van Antwerp.

Final performances Friday-Saturday, 8:30 p.m., 16518 Adenmoor Ave., Bellflower.

It would, indeed, be a shame to miss the show, which reunites Cloyd with such luminaries of L.B. Community Playhouse and Civic Light Opera as Betty Motsinger, Barbara Crooker and Ann Leverett.

Marvin, looking fit after his recent illness turns in a virtuoso performance as the always-ribald male lead in the three one-act plays which comprise the opus.

As an overview of the whole, director John Williams' mounting must be classed with the best yet done by the Bellflower group. Beyond obviously strong leads, he has an excellent supporting cast briskly at work.

The Jack Stanaland Theater, BTAA's home base since a year or so ago, utilizes a proscenium which I think lends itself more satisfactorily to the Neil Simon work than an in-the-round. Suite 719 of the New York hotel must show both a living and bedroom, and these can be more sharply delineated on a traditional stage.

Sammy Davis Jr.: 'Very close to dying'

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Sammy Davis Jr. was discharged Saturday night from a hospital and said, "I was very close to dying."

The 45-year-old entertainer, admitted Sept. 18 to Sunrise Hospital for treatment of an enlarged and misaligned liver, said he would take advice doctors gave him a year ago to slow down his career.

World effort seen to save ecology

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A global attack on interrelated problems of environmental pollution, poverty and the population explosion is vital, Columbia University law professor Richard N. Gardner said Saturday night in the city of Orange.

Gardner, for 20 years active in the United States and formerly assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs, warned that "we are in danger of creating an incredible disharmony in nature, which could ultimately degrade and enslave us."

"I used to believe that the threat of nuclear war would be the major factor pushing mankind toward a more rational world order," he said. "I now think the most powerful impulse will come from the urgent necessity of transnational measures to protect the global environment."

He said he pins his hopes on eventual solution of problems of environmental pollution on a conference of leaders of 130 nations at Stockholm next June — the first meeting of its kind.

Gardner is serving the U.S. secretariat as senior adviser preparing the Stockholm Conference on the Environment.

Gardner said he expects the world organization's approach to the problem to produce salient advances:

—A declaration of the importance of the human environment and recognition that its problems must be solved on the international level;

—An action plan to gain more knowledge through research and study, and evaluation of the findings; and possibly the establishment of a World Heritage Foundation to administer treaties each nation must make to guarantee protection of its environment;

—International machinery to receive reports from each nation on its environmental protection progress, mediate disputes, and coordinate transnational plans;

—Broadening of the U.N. policy on the environment through creation of environmental agencies and ministries in the many nations, plus cultivation of "public impact" and scientific stimulation;

—A "new commitment" to human solidarity through acceptance of the facts that there is only one earth, that what one nation does to defile the environment affects many others, and that its despoilation transcends polemic and ideological theories.

"There is no choice . . . but to engage all nations . . . at the political level where firm commitments to national action can be made.

Gardner said that "the U.N. system of agencies, with all its weaknesses, is still the only system available for this purpose."

3 hours of thrills due at Torrance air show

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Three full hours of aerial skills and thrills will highlight both days of Torrance Municipal Airport's second annual barnstorming spectacular next Saturday and Sunday.

Sky divers, precision aerobatics in power and sailplanes, wing-walkers, gyrocopters, antique and home-built experimental plane will alternate in two different shows each day 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m.

AMONG the top flight performers who will autograph progams after show times are champion aerobatic artists Art Scholl, Bob Herendeen, Skip Volk, Dean Englehardt and Jim Lasley.

Bob Hoover will demonstrate precision maneuvers and his one-wheel landing technique in a Shrike Commander. Famed Czech pilot Mira Slovak will ruplicate powered aerobatics in a sailplane.

Wing walker John Kazian will perform incredible air calisthenics with the help of pilot Joe C. Hughes help of pilot Joe C. Hghs and his open-cockpit Super Stearman biplane. Roy Sprague, in the guise of "Clem Boozenstein," will present his popular aerial comedy act.

Ken Brock, who recenly completed the first transcontinental flight in a one-man Bensen gyrocopter from Long Beach to Kitty Hawk, N.C., will buzz the field in his tiny home-built craft.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for juniors. No charge for children under six if accompained by adults. Sponsors of the show are the Torrance Area Chamber of Commerce and the city.

Lakewood Day set at L.A. fair

Lakewood Day at the Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona will be celebrated Wednesday, the Lakewood Chamber of Commerce announced.

A special bus carrying residents to the fair that day will leave from the Lakewood Center at 10 a.m.

The city's booth at the fair, given an ecology theme by its designer, Todd Bennitt, placed second in its category in recent judging.

VFW preparing battle for loans, cemeteries

An aggressive legislative campaign for veterans of the nation's wars is being waged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, State Commander Fidel Martinez Jr. of Oakland reported Saturday at Buena Park.

He and Mrs. Margie Hawkins of San Francisco, state auxiliary president, were guests of Buena Park's VFW for a two-day visit to the county district.

A parade of handicapped units and Little League teams followed an honor guard of Boy Scout troops.

Martinez said that the nation's VFW's have banded together to petition Congress to establish new national cemeteries in all states. The California cemetery would be at Port Chicago.

Martinez said that national cemeteries are full in all states excepting New Mexico, Colorado, and Oregon.

The major California legislative goal is AB 172, to raise the Cal Vet farm-and-home-loan at $25,000, an increase of $5,000. It would remain at five per cent interest.

Passage "looks favorable," Martinez told fellow veterans.

The VFW is growing in membership, although few Vietnam War veterans are joining. To Martinez, this is "normal," because he said they "have to find themselves; they are young and adventurous and haven't settled down."

Mrs. Hawkins outlined the auxiliary's goal as "service, not social" and as a back-up to the VVW program.

She said it does much work in hospitals but is extremely proud of the VFW-Auxiliary National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich., for widows, orphans and the disabled.

Together, the VFW and the Auxiliary have a rehabilitation program, including drug abuse and youth acitivites programs.

$430 in tools taken

Tools worth $430 were stolen from the unlocked garage of Frank H. Sumi, 5419 E. Anaheim Road, Long Beach police said Saturday.

The 8-week-old puppy at the Long Beach animal shelter pictured by the Independent, Press-Telegram Wednesday is among the missing.

The puppy, a light brown and white, mixed male not yet named, was given a home by 17-year-old Debbie Fortune of 1818 Knoxville Ave. the day after the photograph appeared.

A friend of Debbie's, Sharon Quarn, 17, of 1961 Knoxville, was to feed it.

Saturday, however, Sharon found the gate to the yard open and the puppy missing.

USS TRUXTUN RUNS 8,000 MILES AT 30 KNOTS

L.B.-based ship logs historic voyage

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

A Long Beach ship has logged one of the longest nonstop, high-speed voyages in naval history.

The nuclear frigate USS Truxtun averaged 30 knots (34½ miles an hour) on an 8,000-mile run deep into the Indian Ocean.

Capt. Robert S. Smith's ship returned home Aug. 17 from deployment and also holds the distinction of being the first nuclear surface ship to moor in a Japanese port — Yokosuka.

THE NAVY has just made the July details public.

"We were scheduled to go from Subic Bay, Philippines, to Perth, Australia, en route home from our Vietnam deployment," Capt. Smith said.

"But I had a surprise for the crew after we left Subic. What made it nice was that we still ended up in Perth after carrying out this important mission," the captain said.

He took Truxtun through the strategic Straits of Malacca, separating Singapore-Malaysia from Indonesia and linking the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

"THEN WE really turned up our speed for the Maldives, a group of atolls 400 miles southwest of Ceylon," Capt. Smith said.

Then the Truxtun went southwest, crossing the equator and swung around the Seychelles, an island series 1,000 miles east of Kenya in Africa.

"We would have had a better average if we had not slowed down for crossing the equator ceremonies," the captain said.

Then the ship turned east and went around Diego Garcia, 1,200 miles south of India.

At Diego Garcia the Navy is building its first Indian Ocean base, called an "austere communications facility," under a pact with the British.

The Seabees have completed an 8,000-foot runway and C130 Hercules cargo planes from Thailand have been landing on it.

"We poured it on from Diego Garcia to Perth," the captain said, "and what a time everybody had there."

Why the long, high speed run?

THE CAPTAIN said it demonstrated the quick reaction time for nuclear surface ships and also showed America's willingness to operate her warships in the Indian Ocean and show the flag.

While making the run Truxtun was able to gather oceanographic, hydrographic, meteorological and Diego Garcia radio transmission data from instruments aboard.

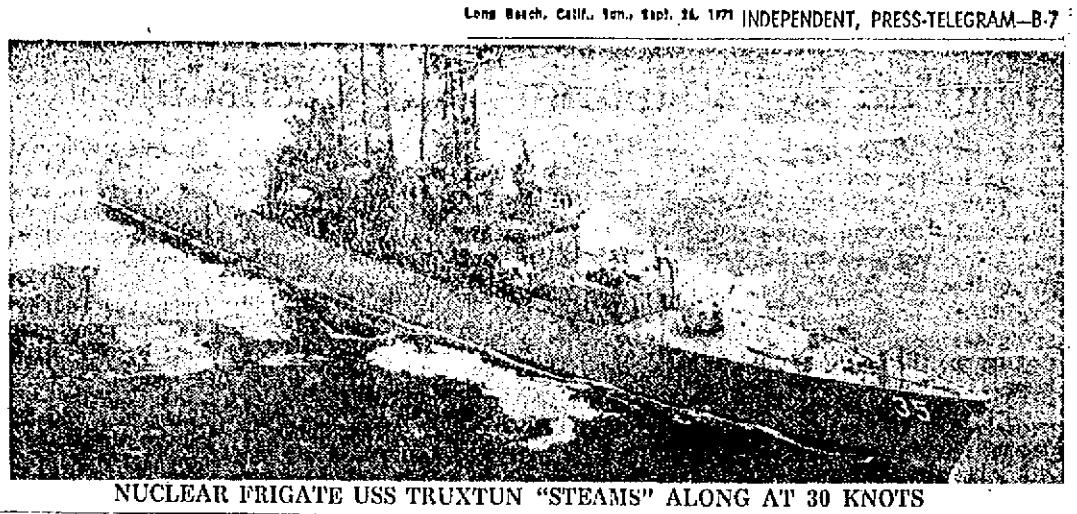

The captain said the ship saw one Russian destroyer escort and an oiler while going through the Straits of Malacca.

The Russians have a permanent 20-ship squadron in the Indian Ocean while the U.S. keeps two ancient destroyers and a converted seaplane tender in the Persian Gulf.

WHEN Long Beach's other nuclear frigate USS Bainbridge made a run into the Indian Ocean nearly two years ago it was challenged by a Russian destroyer leader.

Truxtun was commissioned May 27, 1967, in Camden, N.J.

Capt. Smith is a former executive officer and earlier damage control assistant on the nuclear cruiser Long Beach and also chief engineer on the nuclear carrier Enterprise.

Reserve unit to stay at Alamitos

Regardless of the ultimate disposition of the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station, the Long Beach Naval Reserve Training Center which occupies building 21 on the station will continue to function, according to Capt. L. F. Danz, commanding officer.

The center accommodates a large number of active reservists in various units which include surface divisions, construction forces, security groups and officer's schools.

Army opens scholarships for nursing

One of the Army's most competitive scholarship programs is open for applications.

It is for nurses — male and female.

High school seniors or recent graduates under 23 having high scholastic standing may apply.

On commission of the four-year program in conjunction with the University of Maryland, candidates are commissioned a first lieutenant in when Army Nurse Corps with a three-year obligation.

Applicants for WRAIN (Walter Reed Army Institute of Nursing) must complete the College Entrance Examination at a testing agency or their high school. Results go to the Army surgeon general's office.

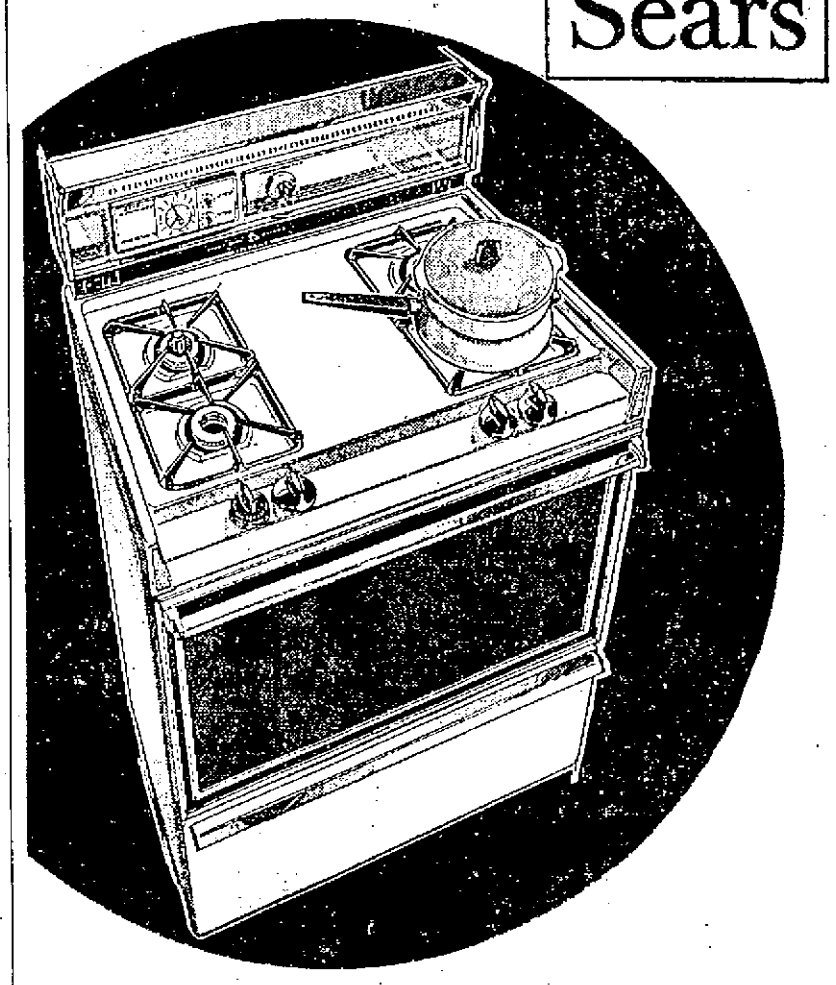

Those selected spend two years in an approved and regionally accredited college or university of their choice — then to Maryland.

While in school candidates receive pay and allowances of E-3 (now over $300 a month) plus tuition.

Sgt. Jerry Seward at 3913 Long Beach Blvd. or Sgt. Paul Pochler at 220 Long Beach Blvd., both Southland Army recruiters.

Application requirements must be completed by Jan. 15.

Far East discussion on lecture schedule

The Long Beach City College lectures and forums program expands this week with three new admission-free series set for presentation.

Of interest to flying enthusiasts are the "Essentials for the Private Pilot' lectures scheduled for Tuesday evenings at the Business and Technology Campus gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. The talks concerning air traffic in the Los Angeles Basin will be presented by aviation authorities.

On September 28, Earl J. Ryan, FAA evaluation and proficiency development officer, will speak. Fred Kelly, FAA air traffic control specialist, will discuss in-flight weather evaluation on October 5. Woodrow Staman, aviation district accident prevention specialist, will cover keys to safe flight on October 12. Basic instrument procedures will be examined by George A. Armstrong, LBCC aeronautics instructor, on October 19.

THE FOCUS shifts to the Orient for two series on Asian countries scheduled for Boyd High School Auditorium on four consecutive Wednesdays. Dr. Giles T. Brown, author of the award-winning book, "Ships That Sail No More," will lecture on "The Inscrutable Far East," Sept. 29, Oct. 6, 13, and 20 at 7:30 p.m. His subjects will be: "Dynamic Japan," "Taiwan and Its Future," "Hong Kong Threatened," and "Thailand, An Uncertain Ally."

Brown is the dean of graduate studies and professor of history at California State College, Fullerton.

In afternoon talks starting at 2 p.m., John McCook Roots will speak on "Mainland China" in a four-part series. Roots, son of the former Episcopal Bishop of Hankow, a treaty port 600 miles inland of Shanghai, was born in the heartland of Asia. His lectures on Sept. 29, Oct. 6, 13, and 20 are timed to precede the U.S. presidential visits with Premier Chou En-lai and and Red Chinese party leader Mao Tze Tung.

ROOTS, A FOREIGN correspondent and author, will discuss China before 1949, the People's Republic of China, Chinese relations with Russia and Japan, and Sino-American relationships.

Orville R. Foster will give the second of four illustrated weekly lectures at Bancroft Junior High School Auditorium on "The Wonderful World of Organ Music." The time is 7:30 p.m. Foster will talk on ballads and love songs.

The LBCC lectures and forums program is open to the public without charge. Interested person may attend all lectures or any selected portions by registering at lecture sites when attending.

A program of ten series totaling 40 lectures is being presented at various Long Beach locations as a community service.

Other series to commence soon are: The Securities Market, Analyzing America, Western Europe, the Ocean Depths, Health for Senior Citizens, and the British Isles.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: The main stress around a minimum of resources, and to this year is on your ability to organize keep matters simple. Relations with your mate (and your public image as well) seem to require constant attention. Today's natives have intense, usually little challenged, personnal energy and a strong love of home.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Pursuing your own healthy self-interest helps keep the peace. It's the side issues that stir excitement.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): First things first — pay as little attention to passing events as possible. There will be plenty of time to review later.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Early morning is late enough to make corrections, change of course if you still can. Defer any final decision.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Take the time to look over what others do, particularly any active competitors. Your own projects will fare better.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Be easy-in your dealings, especially with younger people. You haven't got the whole story. Forgive rudeness and temperament.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All you can accept of what you thought you wanted of responsibility happens now. Draw a line; limit your burden to reality.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gently does it where long-standing issues are resolved. You've been thru these problems before and can do better this time. Evening hours promise deep rewards in study, creative thought.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Properly and possessions attract attention, and changing values are suggested — accept nothing on the basis of today's estimates. Sleep over any doubts.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Anything you find within easy reach is not quite the best approach. If nothing better offers, stay with yesterday's formula.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make no pledges; accept no added responsibility yet. Your deeper intuition needs time and space to resolve issues.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tension tends to rise but shouldn't be allowed to upset your rhythm of steady routine. New alerts are not to be considered.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Go along with the tide, expecting no great advances, giving up nothing beyond prior commitments.

WHO SAYS A MAN OVER 40 CAN'T MAKE MONEY?
Don't you believe it! We can show you records of scores of men who are earning $600 to $1200 a month. Just as important, the company they work for is a solid, substantial, local company with a 50-year history of integrity and success. You will be thoroughly trained to present a needed, appreciated service right here in Southern California. No travel. No investment. No experience necessary. All you need is a car and the willingness to follow our training program. Your maturity is an asset — and here's your opportunity to cash in with dignified employment in personal family memorial counseling. For detailed information, between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday or 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Tuesday, see:

Mr. Kinnard at Defmonico's, 1101 W. Rosecrans Blvd., Gardena.

REX L HODGES REALTY

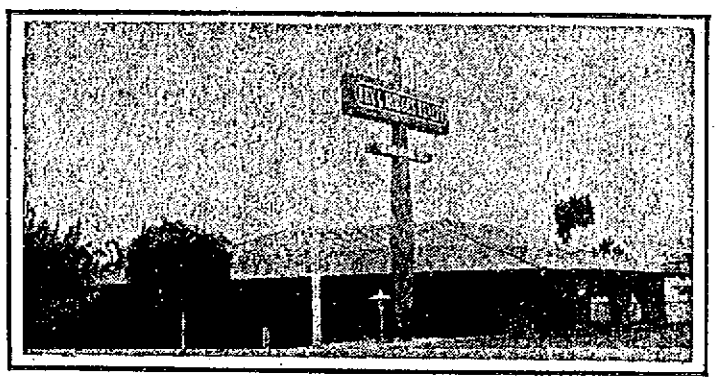

CAN MAKE YOUR REAL ESTATE DREAM COME TRUE

WE KNOW HOW TO GET THE MOST FOR YOU - - -

WE'VE BEEN AT IT FOR 42 YEARS

AND WE'RE STILL GROWING

HERE'S OUR NEWEST

FOUNTAIN VALLEY ADDITION

WHICH MEANS THAT HODGES BUYERS HAVE LARGER SELECTION, HODGES SELLERS HAVE BROADER MARKET AT NO ADDED COST

Does Your Home Fit Your Family?

We hope it does, but if you are like most, it probably doesn't. This is why you owe it to your family to check with a Rex Hodges representative, and see for yourself how much more home you could own, for probably very little if any more in monthly outlays, by merely applying your equity to the new home purchase.

Rex Hodges Company can loan you money on your home equity, while awaiting the close of sale; or the Hodges Company will guarantee a given amount of cash by a certain date from the sale of your home or they will buy it themselves.

The 42 years of success of our business is due to our company's capability of solving your housing needs by applying our know-how and our financial capability to meet your needs.

Bernie Jones

Vice President

Thought of Real Estate as a Career?

You cannot afford to overlook the opportunities being offered by the Rex Hodges Company. Rapid strides in market growth by our organization makes it possible to offer outstanding Careers to enterprising people.

Your Requirements:

1. A "TRUE DESIRE" to build a Lifetime Career.
2. A Real Estate License or willingness to enroll in a preparatory school.
3. A desire for earnings above most executives.
4. A willingness to work 40 hours weekly to achieve success.

Your Benefits:

1. SUCCESS ASSURED by free on-the-job training with personal guidance from our Training Director.
2. $10,000 EARNINGS possible first year — Top producers go over $25,000.
3. 42 YEAR COMPANY heritage of excellence and goodwill with dynamic management team to support your efforts.
4. A MULTI-OFFICE organization with expanding markets in Southern Los Angeles and Orange Counties.
5. UNUSUALLY HIGH ADVERTISING budgets plus extensive promotional programs.
6. BONUSES, Group Insurance, Sales Awards and growth into Management and Specialized Fields.

Terry Mulholland

Director Training

REX HODGES HOMES SALES BREAK ALL RECORDS

THERE'S SEVERAL REASONS WHY:

At no cost to you:

1. A WRITTEN PROFESSIONAL OPINION OF VALUE.
2. A FULL LIST OF NEIGHBORHOOD COMPARABLE PROPERTY SALES
3. A LIST OF GOVERNMENT APPRAISED VALUES OF NEIGHBORHOOD HOMES.
4. AN ESTIMATE OF THE NET CASH YOU WILL RECEIVE IF . . .
   - A. YOU SOLD TO AN FHA BUYER
   - B. YOU SOLD TO A VETERAN BUYER
   - C. YOU SOLD CASH TO EXISTING LOAN
   - D. YOU SOLD CASH TO A NEW CONVENTIONAL LOAN
   - E. YOU SOLD ON THE WHOLESALE MARKET (CASH IN 5 DAYS)
   - F. YOU BORROWED ON YOUR EQUITY UNTIL YOUR HOME SELLS.
   - G. YOU WANT AN ALL CASH & GUARANTEED SALE IN A SPECIFIC TIME.

BERNIE JONES
Vice Pres. Sales

TERRY MULHOLLAND
Training Director

HERE'S ANOTHER REASON WHY:

WE BUILD CAREERS IN REAL ESTATE FOR PEOPLE WHO HAVE THE DESIRE TO SUCCEED. OUR 42 YEARS OF "KNOW-HOW" IS PASSED ON TO EVERY NEW SALES ASSOCIATE.

HODGES PEOPLE SERVE CLIENTS BETTER BECAUSE THEY ARE KNOWLEDGEABLE AND ARE KEPT FULLY INFORMED THROUGH CONTINUOUS SEMINARS CONDUCTED BY THE "PROS" OF THE INDUSTRY.

AT HODGES WE DO THE LEG WORK FOR YOU

JUST DIAL THE AREA YOU DESIRE

Custom look by intent

"We have attempted to create a custom look to each and every one of our homes at El Dorado. And we have done this by offering only the finest quality and materials usually found in a custom-built home," commented Mark Bader, general sales manager for S & S Construction Co.

With both the look and quality of a custom-built home, Long Beach's El Dorado Park offers the ultimate in gracious living.

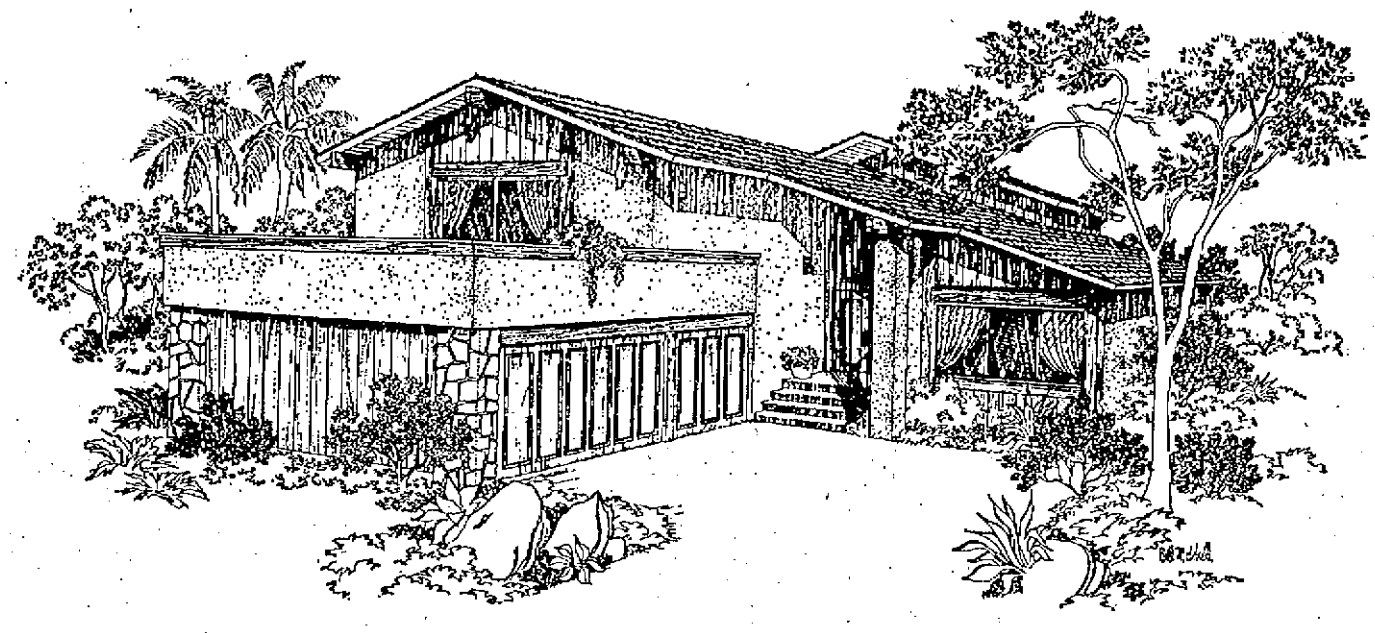

Designed for the family looking for 'more' in a home, many of the standard features included in the purchase price are items which are usually offered as options by other builders.

El Dorado offers luxurious shag carpeting throughout the house, including all closets and secondary bedrooms.

Designer entry halls are available in Imported Italian marble or terrazzo and family rooms offer decorator vinyl or rich oak parquet. Wet bars are included in many plans and have pure marble tops.

Pure marble is also included in the master suite vanities. All homes offer decorator light fixtures including hand-cut crystal. Magnificent floor-to-ceiling custom fireplaces grace

ANY OL' HAT WILL DO . . . Walnut Square construction workers display individuality in head gear

Walnut Square means luxury at moderate price

Carefree, stylish living, a counterpart of "living better for less", is the design approach found in the new Walnut Square fourplex condominium development.

Providing progressive, luxury-like homes at moderate prices, Pacesetter Homes, the developers, are venturing into the condominium concept for the first time in Orange County.

Walnut Square, located in the central Irvine area (within the proposed city of Irvine) on Walnut Avenue between Culver Drive and Jeffrey Road, previews four model condominium units which are tastefully decorated to further enhance the prospect of living environmentally "free".

WHAT MAKES these units unusual, besides their low cost, according to Landon M. Exley, Pacesetter vice president and general manager, is that they have been designed to suit the flexible life styles of today's young married set, the single set or the retired couple.

The building exteriors come in three shapes — all with cedar shingling combined with hand-troughed Spanish stucco with shake roofs.

Buyers have several choices of floor plans.

Studio homes are offered with two bedrooms and a family room, two bedrooms and a den, or two bedrooms and a formal dining room.

One-level, two bedroom units have a wood deck patio, adding still another dimension of living.

TASTES vary, Exley pointed out.

"Thus, a married couple might select a family room, the single person might share utilizing the den as a library or hobby room, and very often the retired couple prefers a formal dining room. However, the concept at Walnut Square affords the buyer the luxury of selection rather than an either-or situation."

The units sell in the $19,750 to $21,950 range, have from 950 to 1150 square feet each, and include carpeting, range and oven, dishwashers, rear yard fencing and complete exterior landscaping. Garages and storage areas come with each unit.

Open stairways and interesting niche areas encourage unusual decorating ideas in the studio homes.

AN easy-care feature, tub and showers are made of fiberglass. Most units have two baths.

The project will consist of 292 units in 73 buildings featuring an acre-and-a-half park and recreation area located in the center of the development.

Here will be found an Olympic-size swimming pool, tots wading pool, dressing rooms and basketball courts.

The first 74 units are now under construction and first move-ins are scheduled for Dec. 15th.

Exley said: "We have arranged for very low interest rate conventional financing. The buyer's monthly payment can run as low as $196.00.

THIS payment includes a fee to the residents' association, to which each owner will belong automatically.

The carefree life-style thus becomes a greater reality for the occupant as the association maintains the landscaping and exteriors of the buildings as well as the recreation area.

Residents will enjoy the cheerful brightness of their environment because of the effect created with the expansive use of glass, according to architect Frank Spangler.

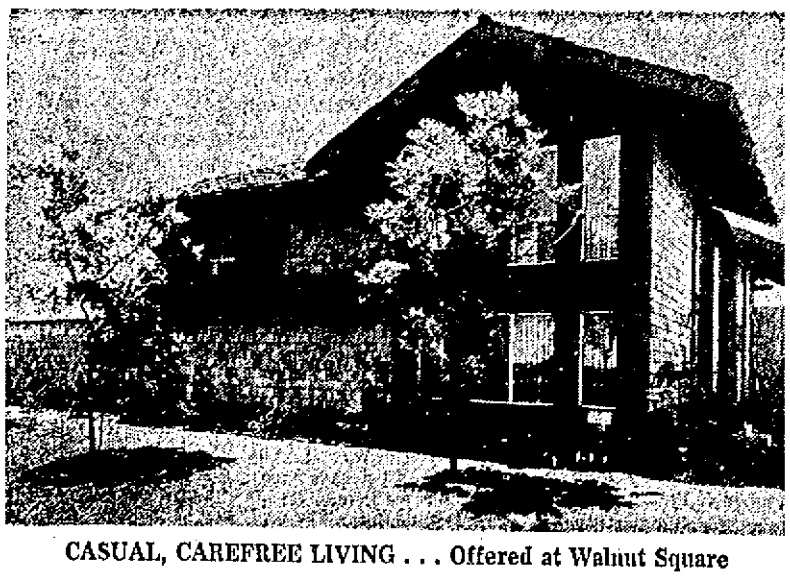

For example, elongated glass window panels set above the studio home entry doors open up the living room areas, setting a tone of illuminated depth and width. At the same time this device does not sacrifice privacy for lighting.

MOST of the units have walk-in closets, some have beamed, cathedral ceilings in bedrooms, pass through counters from the kitchens, and a separate sewing room.

Each unit has facility for a washer and dryer, a feature which is not commonly included in condominiums.

General areas of the development will be clothed in luxurious plantings, set along winding streets which eminate from the central recreation area.

Walnut Square may be reached by taking either the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to the Jeffrey Road off-ramp. Proceed west from the Santa Ana or east from the San Diego to Walnut Avenue, a winding country road which leads to the model unit.

Parkridge West

Grand opening of Parkridge West's second unit continues this weekend.

Over 100 families toured the new model homes last weekend, reports Stan Hays, sales manager of the development built by Parkridge Homes of Corona del Mar.

The three and four-bedroom homes, priced from $28,950, offer many features to the homebuying public: built-in oven, range and porcelain tub dishwaser, ceramic tile fireplaces with log lighter valves, concrete driveways, sprinklers and landscaping the front yard, copper plumbing, shake and shingle roofs and rear yard fencing.

Located a mile south of the San Diego Freeway, Parkridge West's model homes are open daily from 11 a.m. From the San Diego freeway, exit at Magnolia Street, south on Magnolia to Ellis Avenue, left on Ellis to the homes.

'Orange County on verge of housing glut,' says SPNB

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Real Estate Editor

Residential building activity in Orange County has reached levels "which cannot conceivably be maintained over the period ahead," says an economist for Security Pacific National Bank.

Speaking at an Irvine University-sponsored gathering on unemployment, Conrad Jamison, a vice president of the bank, related the dramatic "surges" in residential and real estate activity in the county.

"On the surface, these appear to be favorable when contrast with the sluggish trends reflected in other county economic aspects this year. However, we are on the verge of a housing glut in Orange County that can only be compared to the excesses experienced in the years following similar over-building situations in 1963 and 1969," he cautioned.

Orange County housing, the economist pointed out, registers a production volume of 32,000 units per year — only 12 per cent below the all-time peak recorded in 1963.

"You may recall that the 1963 volume created acute problems for the county building industry and resulted in a major reduction of activity for the ensuing four years."

He cautioned that the longer the period of excessive housing construction, the greater the glut will become.

"Multi-family housing — apartments — represent a sector of real excesses," the economist pointed out. "1971 volume in this category runs at the rate of 16,800 family units per year — historically one of the highest levels for Orange County."

He indicated August building permits reached more than 2,000 apartment units, adding confirmation to a situation that prompted the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to issue the first "maximum market alert" early last month. Alerts by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board caution lenders to carefully examine the financing of new apartment projects.

"Sales volume for new homes appears comparatively strong at the moment, absorbing the most home construction activity," he added. "However, with a housing rate of 15,500 units per year, I foresee a doubling of 1970s Orange County volume."

Jamison went on to tell the university symposium audience that the longer the excessive rate continues, the greater the glut will become, and consequently, the sharper the cut in volume that will be required to restore a favorable balance in local housing.

Huge land deal

Lake Arrowhead, one of Southern California's best known mountain resort areas, has been acquired by a group of private investors with diversified experiences and backgrounds.

The multi-million-dollar acquisition of more than 1,000 acres in the San Bernardino Mountains from Boise Cascade Recreation Communities Group and other subsidiaries of Boise Cascade Corporation, was announced this past week.

Arthur E. Bryan Jr., chairman of the board of the purchasing group, and Emil J. Gits, the group's president, said the purchase price involves a package of cash and notes.

State Mutual Savings and Loan Association, a subsidiary of the Los Angeles-based Far West Financial Corporation (NYSE, PCSE), is providing the real estate financing for the transaction, FWF President John S. Griffith Jr. disclosed.

Beside the 2¾-mile-long Lake Arrowhead which is a mile wide at its widest, the acquisition includes: the smaller Grass Valley Lake, the 18-hole Lake Arrowhead Country Club with its clubhouse and swimming pool, and an inventory of about 600 residential lots.

Also included are several large commercial parcels and undeveloped recreational land, Arrowhead Utility Company which serves the area with water, and The Village, a 40-acre commercial development.

"For the past several years, Boise Cascade, which acquired the Lake Arrowhead properties in 1967, emphasized lot development and sales," Gits noted. "The sale of quality second home sites as well as recreational condominiums also will constitute a major portion of our operations.

"Complementing these activities will be an effort to emphasize commercial developments." Among these are a resort hotel, first class motels, quality shops, and other comparable facilities.

"We plan to implement this program through sale or joint development. Efforts toward this already have been initiated," Gits said.

The executive committee of the new owners includes Bryan, Gits, and H. Y. Engeldinger, financial vice president and a director of Meredith Corporation, Des Moines, Iowa. Bryan is a senior partner in a Chicago-based law firm, McDermott, Will & Emery. Gits formerly was president and principal owner of Gits Brothers Mfg. Company, a diversified Chicago-based manufacturer recently acquired by merger.

Treasurer of the new group is James M. Roche, and the secretary is Donald M. Phares, both partners of Bryan. In addition to the foregoing, the purchasing group includes E. T. Meredith III, and James M. Lexvold.

Meredith is president and chief executive officer of Meredith Corporation which publishes books and magazines and owns and operates television and radio stations. Lexvold is the principal owner of Sauk Valley Manufacturing Company which produces wire products in Oakland, Calif.

Well intended

The federal government's recently announced plan to rush $2 billion in emergency financial aid to the nation's housing market is receiving mixed response in California, with criticisms ranging from "well intended . . . but limited in real impact" to "clearly discriminatory against California" according to key spokesmen of the state's mortgage bank industry.

The new so-called "Tandem plan", which allows the Government National Mortgage Association to buy certain FHA and VA mortgages from lending institutions at 95c and 96c on the dollar and then resell them at even lower prices to the Federal National Mortgage Association and other investors, was the subject of a nationwide closed-circuit TV conference Sept. 8.

Called by FNMA president Alan Oakley Hunter, the conference drew some 600 FHA-VA mortgage loan specialists to the International Hotel in Los Angeles, with an admission fee of $10 per person.

In retrospect, many outspoken and disgruntled attendees felt the total $6,000 FNMA picked up in Los Angeles practically amounted to a televised shell-game.

"Such an expensive program as this can at best be little more than a stop-gap solution that can't go on indefinitely. And despite its good intentions, the plan's basic economics may end up costing the taxpayer an awful lot without achieving very much," says John C. Opperman, president of the California Mortgage Bankers Assn., and executive vice president of United California Mortgage Co., the mortgage banking division of United California Bank.

According to the CMBA's vice president Robert E. Morgan, president of The Colwell Company, the nation's second largest independent mortgage bank, not only is the economic wisdom of the plan questionable, "but the regulations effectively rule out any real help for California . . . the largest of the nation's FHA-VA markets. Consequently you can't help but wonder just what Washington really expects to achieve with this thing."

Tahoe water among 'purest in nation'

Despite claims to the contrary, the blue waters of Lake Tahoe are among the purest in the nation, and its waters are among the clearest found in nature anywhere in the world.

These statements were made by Lem Angier, long-time resident of the beautiful mountain area and project manager for Tahoe Paradise, a recreational development located six miles from the famous lake.

"There have been many confusing statements as to the purity of Lake Tahoe," said Angier. "I'd like to set the record straight as this lake has been maligned by much adverse — and erroneous — publicity."

THE WATER in Lake Tahoe is pure and exceptionally clean, he pointed out. Citing a study by the U.S. Department of Interior, Angier said it was possible to see to a depth of 130 ft. at Lake Tahoe.

The same 1970 study, prepared in cooperation with the California State Department of Water Resources, notes that all natural water contains dissolved solids. However, streams flowing from mountain regions that drain granitic rock, such as makes up much of the Lake Tahoe basin, usually carry less dissolved materials than do lowland streams.

AS A RESULT, Lake Tahoe water contains from 60 to 70 mg/l (milligrams per liter, or equivalent to parts per million by weight) of dissolved minerals, or about 1 lb. in 1,800 gallons of water.

By comparison, Lake Michigan contains about 120 mg/; Crater Lake in Oregon about 60, and Lake Superior about 50.

The Truckee River, which flows through Tahoe Paradise, carries the outflow from Lake Tahoe at the low point of the lake shore.

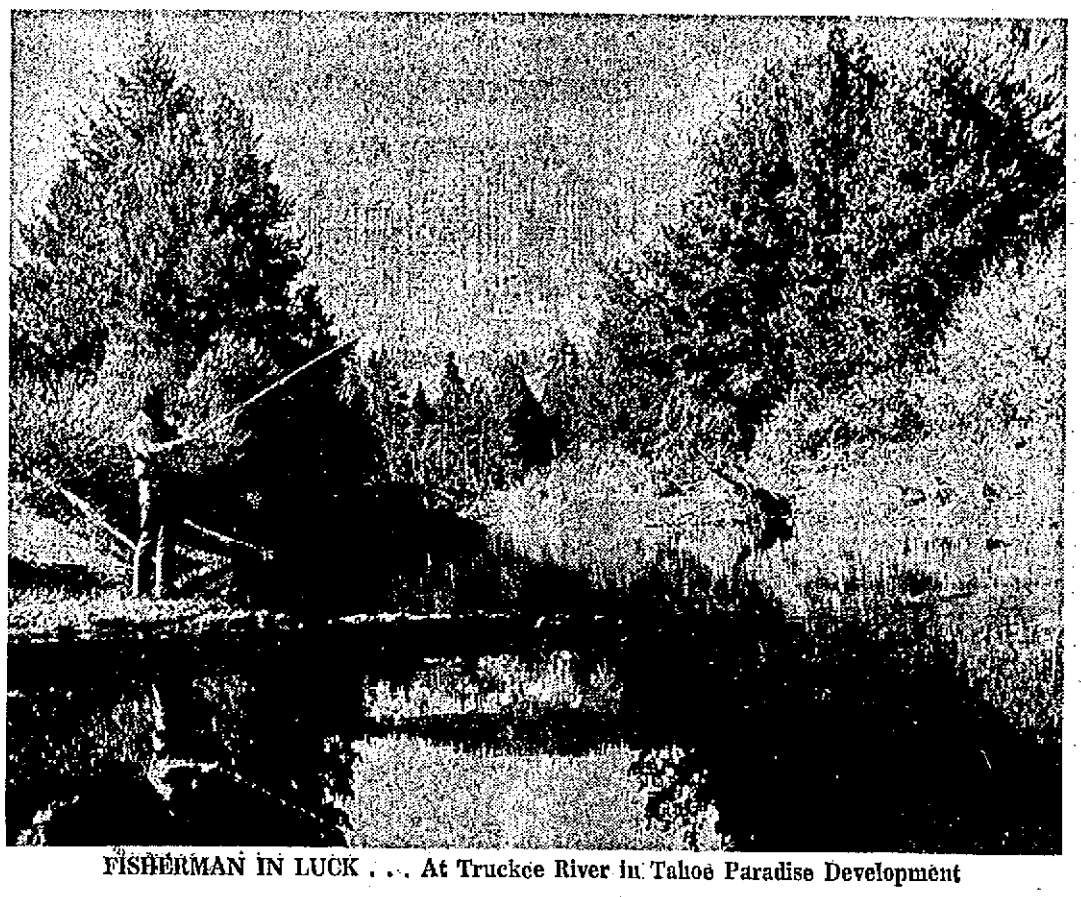

Tahoe Paradise consists of lots which average 7,000 sq. ft., according to Angier, and prices begin at $4,995 plus improvement bonds.

ASIDE FROM the spectacular setting of the Lake Tahoe area, the development is ideal for a second home due to its proximity to shopping centers of nearby alpine villages and the excitement and fun at Stateline, Nev., nine miles away.

While primarily oriented toward recreation, Tahoe Paradise also serves as a retirement or permanent home area, according to Angier, who notes the area is served by the Lake Valley School District.

Focal point of Tahoe Paradise is a complete recreation center, built around a 9-surface-acre lake and consisting of a play area for children, picnic tables, baseball field, jogging trails and other facilities.

Winter activities include skiing, snowmobiling and ice skating. Tahoe Paradise is a development of California-Pacific Corporation, headquartered at 550 California Ave. in Palo Alto. (The firm also has a Beverly Hills office at 202 S. La Cienega Blvd.)

Mesa Woods offers convenience

"Whether prospective homebuyers are veterans looking for financial benefits, or housewives looking for special conveniences, Mesa Woods has them," commented Jason Heltzer of Heltzer Enterprises, builders of the popular Costa Mesa community.

"These homes were designed to meet the living needs of families. For instance, since a woman spends many hours in her kitchen, we gave her a beautiful view, happy colors, and the finest in modern kitchen equipment to live with," said Heltzer.

"New eligibility requirements recently enacted should enable more veterans to buy homes. Due to this new 'borrowing power', a veteran who has used up to $4,000 of his previous $7,500 loan guarantee may now have enough eligibility to purchase a $33,500 home in Mesa Woods.

"FHA and Conventional financing are also available for those who need it."

THE INITIAL price ($31,950 and $33,500 cash price) of each Mesa Woods home includes these outstanding benefits which normally mean extra cost in new homes: fireplace; walk-in closets; formal dining room; and a family room.

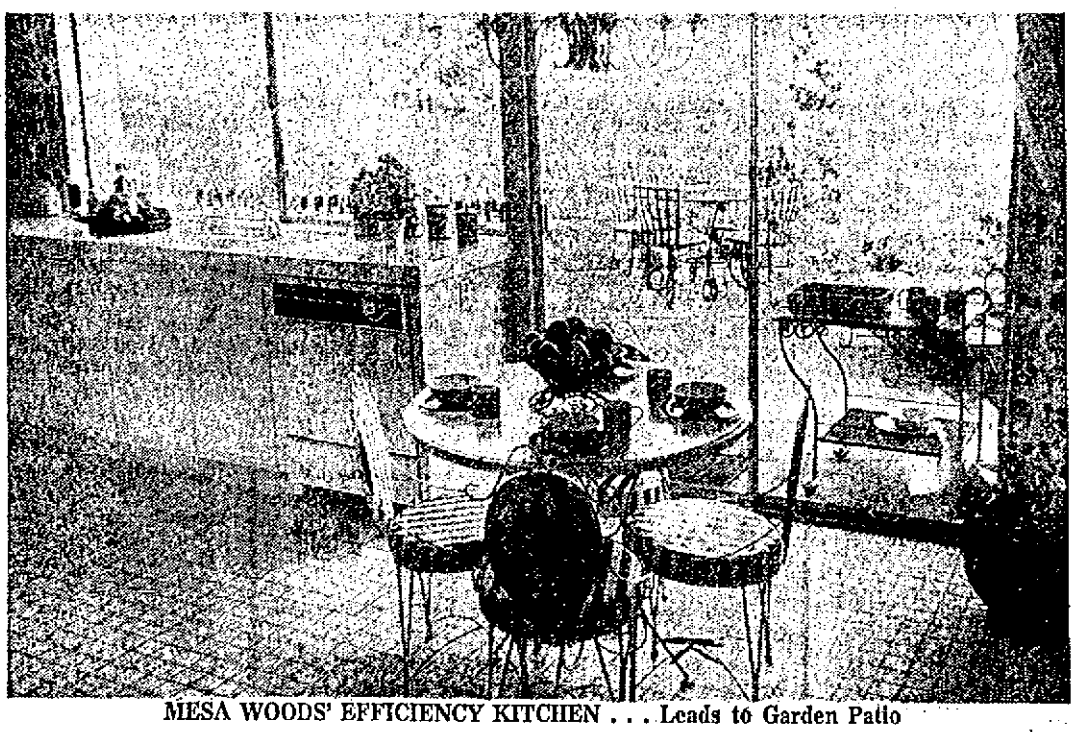

Exterior features include a landscaped front yard with sprinkler system; fenced rear yard; cul-de-sac streets; and underground utilities.

COMMUNITY benefits are equally appealing. Marinas, beach playgrounds, the South Coast Shopping Center Plaza, and industrial areas are all nearby. This location also offers the superb schools of the Newport-Mesa Unified District, reputed as the finest in Southern California.

"Location is very important," remarked Heltzer. "If the homeowner had to travel miles to do marketing, get to work, find recreational areas for the children, the home would not be a bargain at any price. But from Mesa Woods, all these facilities are only minutes away."

At this time, in addition to the regular homes, furnished model homes are also being offered for sale. They are open daily for inspection.

The sales office is at 1101 Sunflower Ave., conveniently reached via the Fairview offramp of the San Diego Freeway.

Britain taking part of Boston back

LONDON (UPI) — Britain lost her American colonies in a volley of Boston musket fire sometime around 1776. To hear Douglas Insole tell it, she may now be about to take some of that territory back — and in Boston at that.

"I think Boston was as good a place as any for any opening venture in America," he said, leaning over a detailed map of the city which spawned the American Revolution.

"We've had no serious opposition so far to our United States operation. And I personally see no reason why there should be any," he said.

Insole is an officer for Town and City Properties Ltd., a London-based real estate firm which has just bought up 33 acres of choice semi-developed land in Boston, a teabag's throw from the scene of the "Tea Party" of Dec. 16, 1773.

ACCORDING to Insole, Town and City's purchase is nothing new.

"More and more British property firms have U.S. holdings these days," he said. "It's a good market. But before we go much farther there we're going to want to digest this much, see how it pans out and what its implications are.

"You can overdo things if you're not careful going into a new market," he said.

Town and City is representative of the growing number of British property firms which have discovered investment overseas pays big dividends.

Vets urged to look at housing benefits

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you're wondering how you could swing a home purchase at this time, and if there's a veteran in the family, it might pay to check into benefits under the 1970 Veterans Housing Act.

"Every veteran — whether or not he ever has purchased a home using VA loan guarantee benefits — owes it to himself and his family to look closely at the expanded benefits passed by Congress last year," advises Emanuel M. Brotman chairman of the board of J. I. Kislak Mortgage Corp.

Kislak, a mortgage banking firm with offices in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, New Jersey, South Carolina and Tennessee, specializes in FHA and VA loans.

According to Brotman, major changes in the 1970 Veterans Housing Act have made more families eligible for loans and increased the types of loans that can be made. In addition, because of increased availability of mortgage funds, larger VA loans are expected, he said.

"BASICALLY," Brotman said, "the Veterans Administration encourages private lenders to make 30-year home loans, with little or no down payment, at moderate interest rates which are 7 per cent today.

"Veterans who served in World War II, the Korean War and during the 'cold war' are eligible for benefits and over 7 million of them actually have purchased homes under the VA home loan guarantee program," he said. "The VA guarantees loans for 60 per cent of their face amount, with a maximum guarantee of $12,500."

Brotman listed four major changes in the VA law which became effective this year and which, he said, still are not widely known among veterans and even some real estate brokers:

THE 1970 Veterans Housing Act, he said, abolished expiration dates for all VA housing benefits. Nearly 9 million World War II and Korean War veterans have had their entitlements restored. In the future, all VA benefits will remain available to all veterans until they are used. In the past, veterans were required to use their benefits within a certain time or they expired.

The end of expiration dates also means that the 7 million veterans who purchased homes with VA guaranteed loans before 1968 are automatically eligible for new VA loans.

Brotman explained this is because maximum loan guarantees have been raised to $12,500 over the years and any unused portion of the current maximum entitlement is available to veterans who want to make use of it.

"FOR EXAMPLE," he said, "If a World War II veteran used all of his then existing $4,000 entitlement to buy a house in 1947, he today has an additional $8,500 available."

Another change in the law permits veterans to use their VA entitlements to refinance existing property loans, providing the new loan is for a dwelling owned and occupied by the veteran.

Says Brotman: "This new provision should be of particular interest to veterans who were forced to use conventional financing because their VA loan benefits had expired before the new law became effective this year.

In addition, the law now permits VA benefits to be used for loans to purchase property in condominium projects.

"The only limitation," says Brotman, "is that the project must be approved for loan insurance under Section 234 of the National Housing Act, as administered by the Federal Housing Administration."

THE NEW LAW also makes VA guaranteed loans available for the purchase of mobile homes. The interst rate is higher (10.75 per cent) than the rate for conventional home loans and the terms are shorter (12 years and 32 days), but the purpose of the mobile home loan guarantee, Brotman said, is only to provide interim housing for the veteran and his family.

"Because of this objective," he said, "the VW will restore the veteran's full $12,500 entitlement to buy a conventional home after he pays off his mobile home loan in full."

Air conditioning draws Carmenita Village buyers

Included in the sale price of every two-bedroom, two-story townhouse condominium of Carmenita Village in Cerritos is refrigerated air conditioning says Alex Graham, president of Marketing Management Co., exclusive sales agents for the De Ruff Construction Co. of Newport Beach.

"After the seige of hot weather that we've been having, homebuyers are more than pleased to discover that air conditioning is included in their home," the sales executive continued.

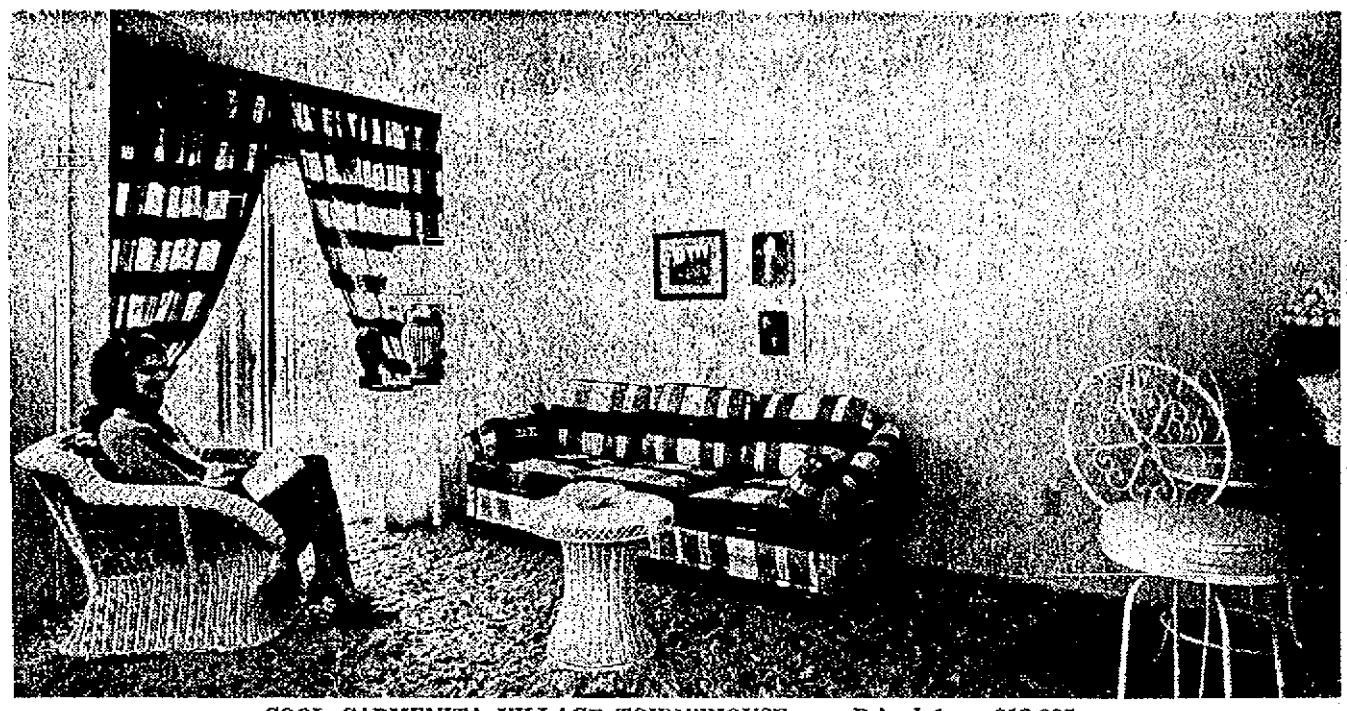

"And when air conditioning is included in homes priced from just $19,500 to $19,995, some families just can't believe it. But over 40 families have believed it" in the past month, because that is the number of families who have purchased a Carmenita Village home during that period," he went on.

JUST $150 down is offered to qualified veterans and just $850 down on FHA terms, with monthly payments substantially lower than the cost of renting a comparable two bedroom apartment.

Features included in the full sales price include carpeting and drapes, all built-ins including dishwashers, covered parking, an extra large storage area, private fenced patio, landscaping and sprinklers.

The tastefully decorated model homes of Carmenita Village are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, and are excellently located to two freeways.

From the Artesia Freeway, turn north on Carmenita Road to the models; from the Santa Ana Freeway, drive south on Carmenita Road to Carmenita Village in Cerritos.

Golden West sales, earnings in climb

Sales and earnings of Golden West Mobile Homes Inc., Santa Ana, showed sharp increases in the first quarter of the current fiscal year, President Harry E. Karsten Jr. announced at the annual shareholders meeting.

Sales for the three months ended Aug. 31 increased 37 per cent to $6,795,487 from $4,952,545 in the comparable period of last year.

Net income in this year's first quarter recorded a 32 per cent increase to $200,492, or 16 cents per share from $151,493, or 12 cents a share in the corresponding quarter of 1970. Per share figures are based on 1,292,271 average shares outstanding in 1971 and 1,300,121 average shares in 1970.

Karsten stated: "The strong improvement in operating results is due primarily to an increasing consumer demand for mobile homes, and the general public acceptance of this attractive and economical type of housing. In April, Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loans became available for the financing of mobile home purchases and this factor is also benefitting industry sales in 1971."

KARSTEN said: "With continued improvement in business conditions, it is anticipated that our company will benefit from the expansion and market diversification activities undertaken during the past 12 months. The addition of greater capability for the production of single-wide homes is increasing Golden West's market penetration.

"Progress has also been made in the development of our recreational vehicle business. The company's new and more competitive recreational vehicle products, coupled with more leisure time, indicate excellent sales potential in future periods of peak demand."

Asks increase

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI)—Northern Indiana Public Service Co. has applied to the Indiana Public Service Commission for authority to boost electric price rates about 16 per cent when President Nixon's wage-price freeze ends. Northern Indiana said the rate change would produce $19,900,000 annually and was needed to offset effects of inflation in its operating costs and $429 million worth of construction expenditures scheduled through 1974.

REPORT ON FERNANDO QUAKE

Wood frame dwellings 'took it well'

Another step toward earthquake-safe construction has been achieved with the publishing of the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau's exhaustive analysis of the effect of the San Fernando Valley quake on different types of structures.

The hows and whys and differences among various types of structures as they react to the stress of an earthquake will be important to design and engineering of future buildings, as well as to the insurance underwriters who insure them, Hal S. Morr, general manager of the PFRB, said.

"But," he warned, "the objective of earthquake safe construction will be achieved, however, only if the lessons learned from disaster such as this are implemented by improvements in existing building codes and development of greater dependability in public protection facilities and public utilities."

AMONG the study's major findings:

—Only about 1 per cent of the approximately 300,000 wood frame dwellings in the San Fernando Valley suffered a 5 per cent or greater loss, and, "in the over-all picture, earthquake resistive wood frame dwellings performed very well."

—Mobile homes were poorly braced and damage to them was common, but total losses were extremely rare.

—Completed high-rise earthquake resistive steel frame building losses never exceeded 1 per cent of value and most high-rise reinforced concrete buildings performed equally well.

—Light industrial buildings having wood roofs supported by tiltup reinforced concrete or by reinforced unit masonry exterior walls had an average loss of less than 3 per cent.

—"The near catastrophic failure of the older hydraulic fill (earthen) lower and upper San Fernando Dams have required a detailed re-evaluation of a number of similar dams throughout California, and pose a special (insurance) underwriting problem for structures below these dams."

—Failure of numerous freeway bridges pointed out the need for substantially increased design requirements.

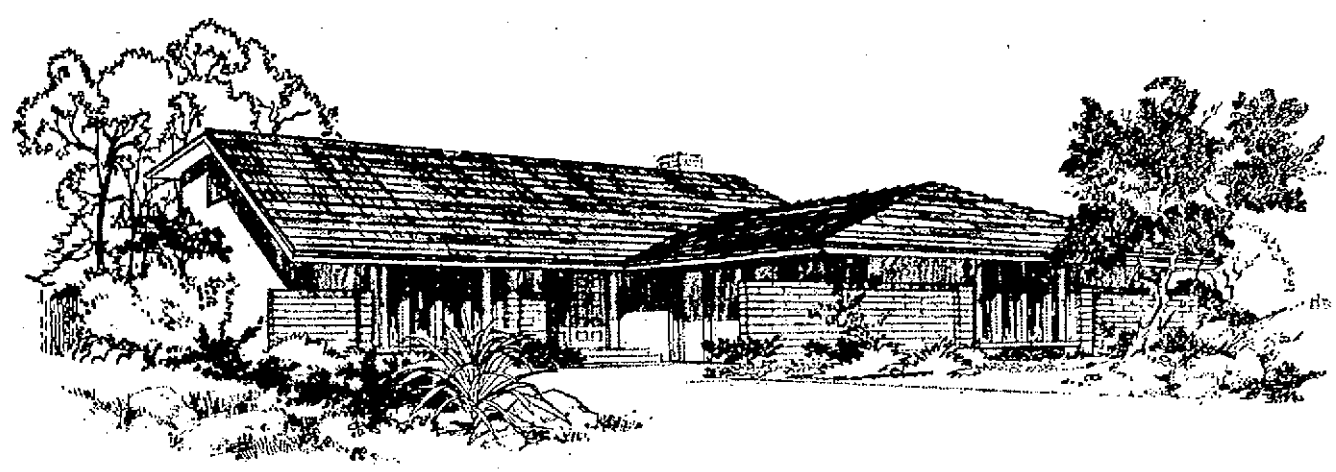

STRIKING a note of concern, the report says "it is of utmost importance that hospitals and other structures vital to public need after a disaster, including public utilities, remain functional after an earthquake.

"In the instance of four major hospitals, clearly they did not remain functional. Unfortunately, in spite of the potential hazard known to many knowledgeable persons, there is no legal restriction which will prohibit the construction of hospitals or other vital facilities on known earthquake faults."

On the positive side, the report notes "public schools, constructed under the provisions of the State of California's Field Act, performed excellently as they also have in previous earthquakes."

Newest Leisure World to be near Phoenix

The nation's newest Leisure World planned community, a massive project expected ultimately to house more than 20,000 people, will be built near Phoenix, in Arizona's Valley of the Sun, according to a joint announcement made this week by Ross W. Cortese, president of Rossmoor Corporation, and Junius E. Driggs, president of Western Financial Corporation of Phoenix.

The development, which will have an estimated cost at 10-year completion in excess of $250,000,000, is planned for a 2,000-acre tract of land under option to Western Financial, a Phoenix-based savings and loan holding company.

The site is three miles east of Mesa.

Plans provide for first model homes to be completed in early 1972.

TO BE KNOWN as Leisure World, Golden Hills, the community will be built by Rossmoor under provisions of a contract with Western Service Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Western Savings and Loan Association and Western Financial Corporation.

A letter of intent has been executed between Rossmoor and Western Service.

Final agreements are expected to be completed within 60 days.

The new community will be located between the proposed Superstition Freeway and the Apache Trail and along Power Road — the principal north-south artery in the eastern Maricopa County.

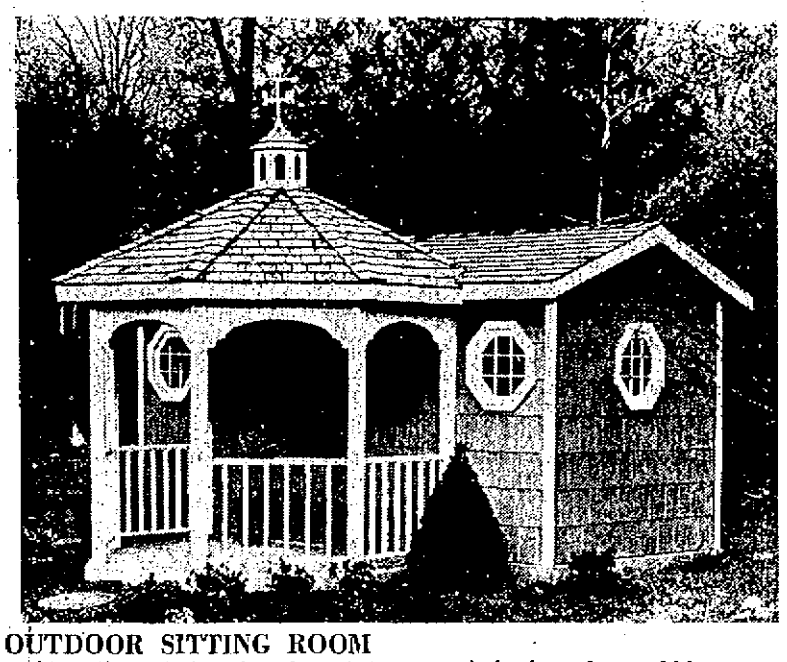

The site is a 35-minute drive from Phoenix's Sky Harbor International Airport and convenient to downtown Phoenix, Mesa and Tempe.

IT WILL be a limited access community.

The personal security and privacy inherent in this approach has been one of the principal attractions of the Leisure World concept.

Attention has been given to maintaining proper distances as dictated in good urban planning in selecting the site.

Major recreation areas such as Saguaro and Canyon Lakes, Tonto National Forest, Usury Pass County Park and the Superstition Wilderness Area are within comfortable driving distance.

OUTDOOR SITTING ROOM

Attractively designed outdoor sitting room in back yard can add immeasurably to appearance, value of any residential property. This octagon-shaped gazebo offers distinction and is practical, too. At its back is storage house in contrasting shape. Appearance is enhanced by covering of textured siding, manufactured by Masonite, and looks like cedar shakes.

AYRES' CHOICES

Two Ayres Realty sales managers have been promoted to vice presidents. Jerry Hardin (left) will be responsible for marketing and sales for Ayres' Racquet Club and The Ranch, Central Irvine. Dick Pratt (right) will perform same duties for Rancho La Cuesta, Cerritos, and Rancho La Cuesta, Anaheim.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Low-income families can buy house on FHA 235

By DON CAMPBELL

Weren't it always thus — we invariably want the very thing that is the most unattainable. It's the old story of the child with his nose pressed against the window of the toy store while he rattles two lone pennies together in his pocket.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I have a gripe as well as a problem. How can a low income family buy or build a house without a down payment? My husband is a city policeman and makes $5,800 a year. We have three children and pay $90 a month rent plus utilities. How can you have a savings account when you live from check to check?

Just because we rent doesn't mean we can't make a house payment. As a matter of fact, house payments are usually lower than rent. I know that we would have taxes and insurance extra, plus the up-keep, but we are paying that to our landlord anyway. Most real estate deals require at least 10 per cent down.

I don't care for the FHA 235 homes. They are too small. I understand you have to have a down payment with it, too. —MRS. M. T.

ANSWER: Well, you've got a problem, all right and, in my youth, my mother used to refer to it in my own case as a "champagne appetite and a beer pocket book."

Believe me when I say that I am not being unsympathetic — having gone this route, myself, once — but I am afraid that you are being a little unrealistic in your aspirations. The "no down payment" home, unfortunately, is pretty much of a historic curiosity these days — even FHA requires 3 per cent down payment.

Frankly, I am a little baffled by your attitude toward the FHA 235 houses — those houses made available on highly preferential terms to low-income families through the government's subsidization.

The feeling seems to exist, widely, as this letter illustrates, that FHA 235 houses are, in some way, built "specially" for the program and are, therefore, small and more shabbily built than conventional houses.

This isn't the case, at all — the $19,000 home financed under FHA 235 is exactly the same house that you would spend $19,000 acquiring if you were financing it conventionally.

The maximum amount that can be spent on a house financed under FHA 235 will vary, both in terms of the size of the house and geographically. In an area, that is, where housing costs are unusually high, then a higher maximum is permissible for an FHA 235 home.

In my particular part of the country, for instance, the FHA permits a low-income family to spend up to $19,500 for a four-bedroom home under 235, and this is probably pretty close to the national average.

There is, of course, a down payment of $100 required as well as closing costs of another $100 — a maximum of $200, in all. And even on this family's limited budget it should be possible to come up with $200.

My frank advice here would be to lower your sights a little, buy an FHA 235 house, concentrate on establishing a sound equity in it and then — in a few years — upgrade yourself to a house more to your tastes.

Another alternative: shop around for a would-be seller who is willing to sell his home on contract — on a flat monthly payment basis. The only difference between this and buying a home conventionally is that the seller retains control of his property and, in the event the buyer defaults, he can be evicted with no more red tape than is involved in bouncing a renter. Normally little if any, down payment is required in a contract sale.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I have a problem I hope you can help me with. My next door neighbors have a very undesirable tree in their yard. The tree is a Chinese Elm, 60-70 feet tall, and about 2½ feet in diameter.

It sits about 3 feet from our property line. The tree hangs half over my house and its leaves and branches fall all summer, clog my gutters, and many of the elm leaf beetles get into our house staining the drapes and lamp shades.

We have asked the owners several times to trim and spray the tree, to no avail. Also, in a storm, this tree could blow down on my house. The tree has no useful purpose, not even for shade. We've tried to get this problem solved in a friendly manner, but have given up.

What legal procedure could I use? What are my right?s—MRS. T. Y.

ANSWER: Quite obviously, friendliness is getting you no place here. Without saying another word about it to your neighbors, you should retain a lawyer whose first cours of action, undoubtedly, will be to write them a letter spelling out, in unmistakable detail, their legal liability in regard to the tree. In nine cases out of ten this does the trick. If stronger legal action is required, then your lawyer will certainly know how to proceed.

Don't you wish someone would build homes in Laguna Niguel for under $24,000?

We are!

We've just started construction. Come preview our delightful single-family homes today. Many deluxe features, large, terraced lots. Choice location near shops, clubs, elementary school and private beach; clear air, cooling coastal breezes. Now previewing and accepting reservations on Laguna Niguel's most appealingly priced homes. Two to 4 bedrooms, $23,500 to $26,995. San Diego Freeway to Crown Valley Parkway and follow the Crown Park signs. Wear old shoes, we're still pretty torn up.

There are many reasons to buy a home in the Highlands at Laguna Niguel. But you'll see the best one when you look out the window.

About all a window is good for in most homes is to let some light in.

But it's different in The Highlands at Laguna Niguel.

The homes in the Highlands are built high up in the hills, so when you look out the windows you get a view of all the surrounding countryside.

From the windows of these homes you can look down on the valley below and see all the "flatland" communities. Across the valley you can see the Santa Ana Mountains. Modjeska Peak; Santiago Peak; Los Pinos Peak. It's quite a view.

Don't overlook everything else while you're looking at the view.

A view isn't the only thing you get at Laguna Niguel.

We have miles of beaches. We have a private beach club (The Laguna Niguel Beach Club). We have the El Niguel Country Club, with an 18-hole golf course that's rated one of the three best in Southern California. The Dana Point Marina and Yacht Club is right next door to Laguna Niguel.

And for people who live in the Highlands, there is a private club for Highlands residents only with a large clubhouse, an 85-foot swimming pool, and a playground and picnic area.

What do homes in The Highlands have that "ordinary" homes don't?

These homes are two, three, and four bedroom homes.

You will find that the designs of these homes are unusually well thought out. There are no awkward areas. No "klunky" rooms.

And all of our homes have extra details that set them apart from "ordinary" homes. Details like electric door openers on all garages, a choice of tile and carpeting, carpeting throughout the house, sprinklers in your front lawn, front yard and side yard fencing, and landscaping from the street in front of your home all the way up to your front yard fence (we call that "Streetscaping").

These extras are only a partial list of what we give you. There's much more.

Homes in The Highlands are priced from $26,500.
And we'll take your old home in trade.

Our prices are reasonable. Very reasonable.

We also have a trade-in program. We'll take your old home in trade for a new home in The Highlands, and save you all the time and worry of trying to sell it.

If you're sick of the city smog, tension, hustle and bustle, jams, and hassle, we think you'll like the fresh air, quiet countryside, and peaceful living you'll find at The Highlands in Laguna Niguel.

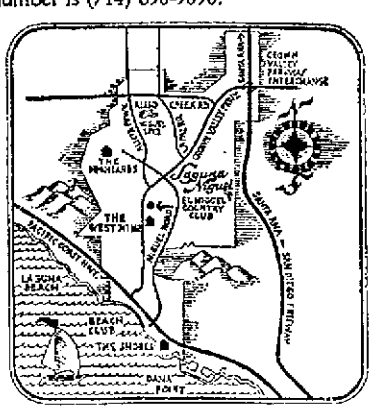

How to get here.

Take the San Diego-Santa Ana Freeway (Highway 5) to Crown Valley Parkway.

Follow Crown Valley Parkway to Niguel Road, and turn right.

Keep going until you come to The Highlands.

If you'd like to call us about anything, our number is (714) 830-5050.

Koll Co. signs long industrial park lease

Don Koll Company, Inc., Newport Beach builder-developer, has signed a long term lease on a 5.3-acre Anaheim site, and will begin construction of a $750,000 industrial park in October.

The Koll Industrial Complex, located at 700 E. Ball Road, is designed for build-to-suit projects, manufacturing, warehousing and rail-oriented businesses.

The first construction phase will be completed and ready for occupancy about February, 1972.

Plans call for several modular-type, tiltup buildings with a total of 100,000 square feet. Individual buildings will offer a minimum of 10,000 square feet with modulars having a minimum of 800 square feet.

Buildings will be a mix of ground level and dock-high, rail-served units for manufacturing and warehousing tenants.

The site is served by the Santa Fe Railroad, and is within eight blocks of the Santa Ana Freeway. Fullerton Airport is an easy 10 minute drive.

As with all Koll Industrial Complexes, abundant on-site parking is provided, and landscaping is well-oriented to the project giving it a clean, modern look.

What Realty Boards Are Doing

LONG BEACH

Speaker at Tuesday's 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will be Bob Prigmore, whose realty company is 15 years old.

Jack Krueger, program chairman, said Prigmore's topic will be "What's Happening?"

Prigmore was president of the Bellflower Board in 1963 and 1966, was CREA regional vice president, 22nd District, 1970; Realtor of the Year — local board — 1967 and 1969; received certificate in real estate from UCLA in 1956, received GRI designation in 1966.

Bob Emrich, golf chairman, announced there will be a golf tourney on Monday, Oct. 11, at the Old Ranch Country Club. All board members, their guests and ladies are welcome. Presentation of the trophies and dinner will follow the tournament.

L.A. mayor approves ordinance

Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles this week approved a proposed emergency ordinance which would prevent the use of wood ledgers to connect roof sheathings to the walls in commercial and industrial buildings.

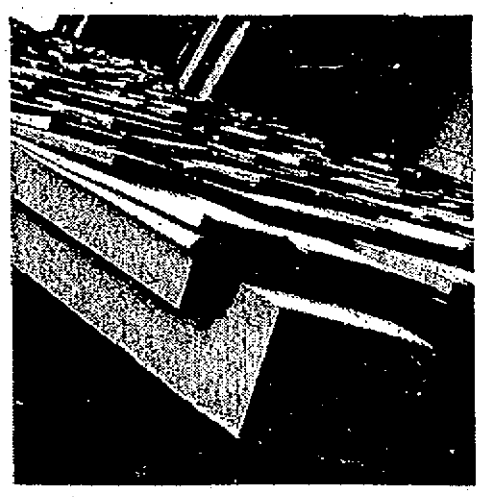

Wood ledgers are pieces of timber measuring four inches in width and 8 to 12 inches in depth, which are bolted to the side of a wall and used as the edge support for the roof.

A section of the City Building Code adopted in 1957 permits roof sheathing to be nailed to a wood ledger. Yorty said the amendment would eliminate that section of the Building Code.

Yorty said: "One of the most valuable lessons learned from the February 9, 1971 earthquake was the unusually high incidence of roof failures in commercial and industrial buildings with masonry or concrete exterior walls."

"These failures were traced to the points where roof sheathing was attached to wood ledgers. The nature of the failures was that the roof sheathing separated from the wood ledgers.

Sales setting records at Ponderosa, Cerritos

Sales of more than $250,000 have resulted from the grand opening last week of the 10th unit of Ponderosa Homes, Cerritos, according to G. Ross Crawford, director of sales.

Just over two years ago the first Ponderosa unit opened in Cerritos, and since then 409 homes have been sold.

"The success of these award-winning homes has been fantastic," Crawford said, "and they're still selling at the rate of one a day."

The new unit includes 83 homes.

Ponderosa Homes, a division of Kaiser Aetna, builds several series of custom quality homes in varying price ranges throughout Southern California. But the Ponderosa series is their biggest success story.

"It's no wonder the Ponderosa series is so popular," said Crawford. "These are large, custom-style homes, realistically priced" — from $30,990 (with VA, FHA an conventional financing available).

ACCORDING to Crawford Ponderosa Homes are "truly affordable family homes. At Ponderosa the homebuyer really gets more for his money — quality plus convenience and luxury styling."

Ponderosa/Cerritos offers 19 exterior elevations and six spacious plans scaled to big-as-life family living.

Standard in every Ponderosa plan is a fireplace. But, as Crawford points out, the fireplace is not in the living room.

"It's in the family room, where it can be frequently used and enjoyed by the whole family."

TWO single-story plans and four two-story plans are offered — half with three bedrooms and two baths, half with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

Highlight of the Ponderosa series is the San Martine Plan 401 at $37,690 which earned the 1970 Gold Nugget Grand Award from The NAHB Journal of Homebuilding and the Pacific Coast Builders Conference.

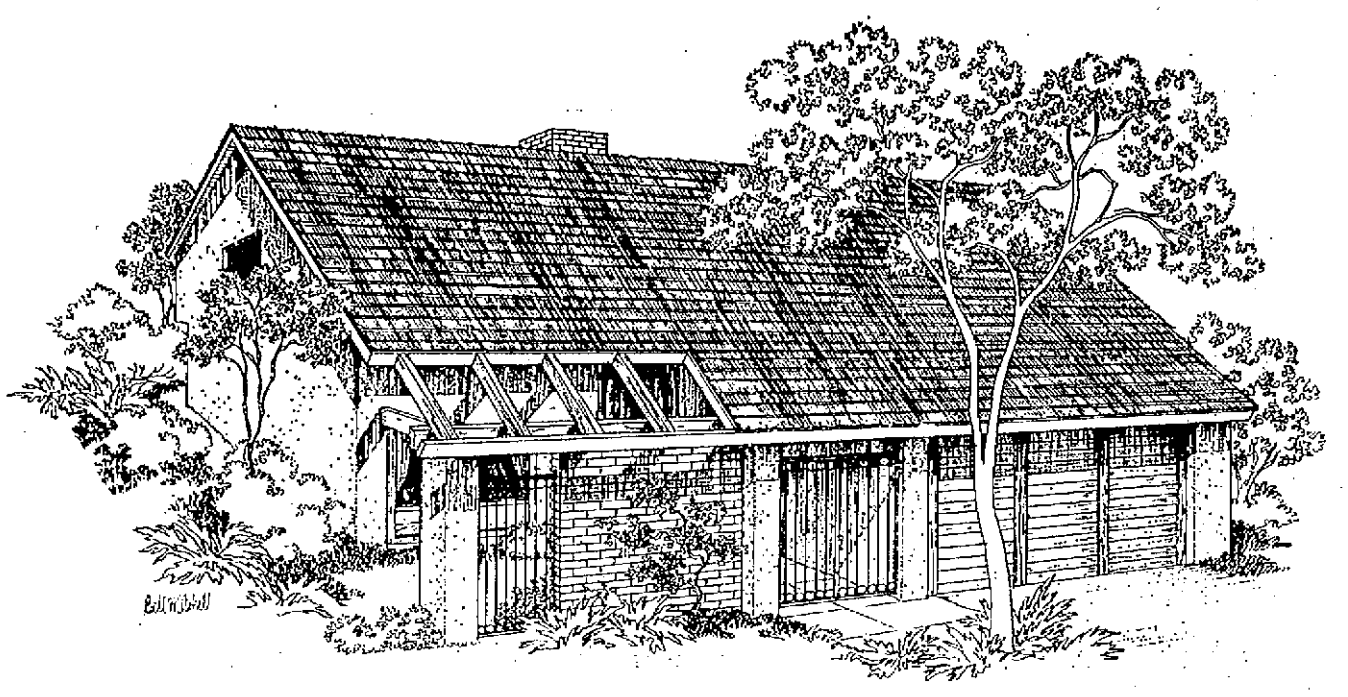

The first floor of the San Martine features a sunken living room, formal dining room, powder room, and oversized combination kitchen and family room with custom fireplace, beamed ceiling and built-in wet bar, sliding glass doors to patio area, and pass-thru window from kitchen to patio bar. Four large bedrooms and two full baths comprise the second floor.

A VARIANT of this plan also offers a 15'x19' finished bonus room on the second floor, in addition to the four bedrooms.

Among the many other custom quality standard features of Ponderosa Homes are underground utilities, lifetime copper plumbing, complete front yard landscaping and sprinkler systems, fenced and shingle roofs and lifetime concrete driveways.

Open daily between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m., the Ponderosa/Cerritos sales office and furnished model complex are conveniently located in the heart of Orange County, at 7511 Moody St., between Orangethorpe and La Palma Avenues.

Ponderosa Homes are accessible to and from the employment, recreation and entertainment centers of Southern California via all major freeways.

University Park, Irvine, offers 'three-way living'

University Park, the masterplanned community on the Irvine Ranch by Stanley C. Swartz Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of National Community Builders, offers three distance model complexes featuring Townhomes, Park Homes and Garden Homes — which represent a choice of lifestyles.

Village Three Garden Homes, the newest of the three, are detached townhomes built on the lot line.

Coming in one and two-story, two and den, 3 bedroom and four bedroom plans, the Garden Homes will come complete with wood shingle or tiled roofs, durable vinyl floors and built-in kitchens with continuous cleaning ovens and natural birch cabinets.

In addition to private back yards, many homes will have a view of greenbelt areas and parkways which weave in and about the community.

THE PARK offers estate-sized homes with up to 5 bedrooms and three baths. Designer touches like beamed ceilings, sunken living rooms, fireplaces and patios give these homes elegance.

And Village Three Townhouses are offering similar amenities but add the incentive of low maintenance. Excellent financing is available in all three sections.

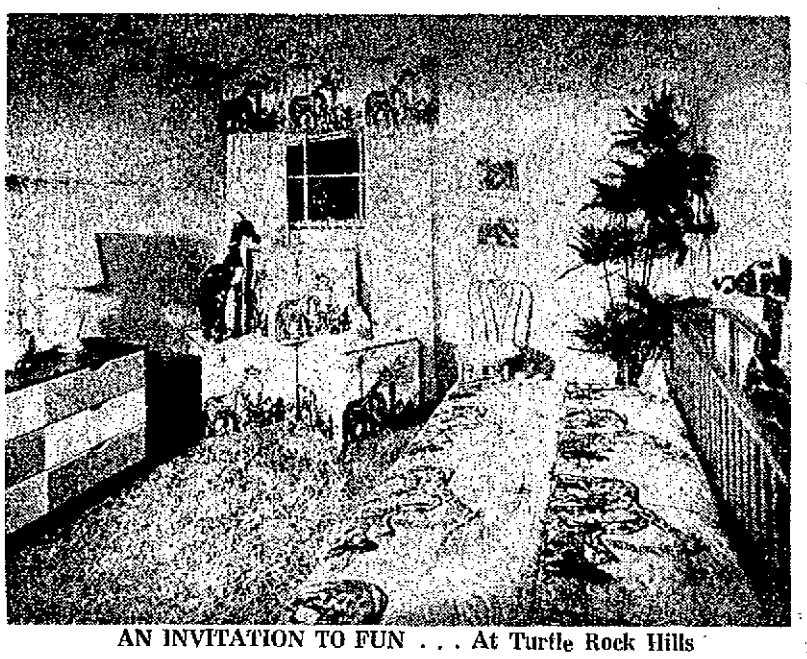

All the types of living available at University Park blend together at the recreation center where such sports as tennis and swimming can be pursued by the entire family.

University Park presents a perfect environment to raise children and get away from it all with convenience to shopping, schools and employment.

It is located on Michelson off Culver Drive and the San Diego Freeway on the Irvine Ranch.

AN INVITATION TO FUN . . . At Turtle Rock Hills

Turtle Rock exciting

Children's bedrooms at President Homes at Turtle Rock in master-planned Irvine, can take on an exciting appearance of merriment because of the built-in ease of decorating "just for the fun of it"!

Carpeting of exceptional quality and view-directed windows add to the simplicity of exercising imaginative decorating schemes.

Floor plans separate the spacious bedroom wing from the other areas of the home, providing seclusion for the activities of younger family members.

"President Homes were conceived to fill the need for large luxury homes in a select location", according to J. Keith Anderson, co-developer with Charles P. Middlebrook of the exclusive hillside community.

THE view-site properties command striking views of Catalina Island, Palos Verdes Peninsula, or the San Gabriel Mountains. The cultural offerings of U.C. Irvine are nearby while business centers, fine shopping, and recreation are freeway minutes from Turtle Rock.

Designed by Red Moltz and Associates, the homes are available in three, four, and five-bedroom plans, with two and one-half baths or three baths and range from 2367 to 2978 square feet.

Prices start at $66,700, including the land.

Quality decorator carpeting sweeps through living room, dining room, hallway, closets and dressing room, as well as bedrooms.

Another 18 homes have been released for construction at Bixby Hill — Long Beach's most exclusive new-home community, according to Mark Bader, general sales manager for S & S Construction Co

Homes are due for completion in early May.

The seven home designs are priced from $61,990 and offer up to 3,300 square feet of living space on pool size lots — with many alternate arrangements to create dens, libraries, recreation rooms and hideaways.

Bixby Hill is quoted for offering the highest quality, custom materials so that every home can be tailored to the buyers' needs, both in the interior and exterior of the home.

THE LAST phase of Bixby Hill will have a total of 122 homes.

The split-level, one and two-story homes offer three to seven bedrooms as well as family rooms, formal dining rooms and breakfast nooks.

Sunken Roman baths, glass encased atriums, wet bars, wall to wall walk-in closets and beautiful sun-balconies are some of the features adding to the ultimate in gracious living.

The walled-in community is completely private, with private thoroughfares. Access to Bixby Hill is gained only through a guarded entry gate to maintain homeowner's security.

Bixby Hill is located at the end of Pal Verde Ave. in Long Beach. Take the San Diego Freeway to Palo Verde and go south to the entry gates.

Pacifica Homes in area of little smog

Pacifica Homes in San Clemente mean cool, smog-free living within sight of the Pacific Ocean.

Sitting on a hilltop in San Clemente, Pacifica Homes are masterpieces in total enviromnent planning. Each home is oriented toward the Pacific and literally has a wall of windows to allow viewing of the ocean.

Located about half-way between Los Angeles and San Diego, Pacifica Homes are far enough away from those population centers to avoid their smog problems, yet close enough so that if you have to, you can be to either of those cities in less than an hour.

DANA POINT Marina is only five minutes away, while other famous vacation and recreation spots are also close by, including the San Juan Capistrano Mission, Lion Country Safari, Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Anaheim Stadium and the artists' colony in Laguna Beach.

Pacifica Homes are priced from $35,900 to $39,000. They have two, three or four bedrooms, two baths and a selection of nine exterior styles reflecting Spanish, California ranch and contemporary themes.

The kitchens feature built-in dishwashers and garbage disposals, push-button ranges and self-cleaning ovens, with optional gourmet islands. Master bedroom suites offer double door entries, dressing alcoves and room for king size furniture arrangements.

OTHER special features include log-lighter fireplaces, rich wood paneling, ceramic tile entry foyers and wall-to-wall carpeting.

Pacifica Homes is a development of the Sheltec Corporation of San Diego in a joint venture with U.S. Financial.

Additional information may be obtained by visiting sales counselors Jane Caldwell and Paul Sogerson at the Pacifia sales office, 403 Calle Pueblo, San Clemente.

Pacifica may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by taking the Avenida Pico exit.

Gun sales unaffected by crisis

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the recent clamor for more control of firearms, the sale of guns is proving to be one of the nation's more recession-proof businesses.

Total sales are expected to be $650 million this year, up 5 per cent on the heels of an 8 per cent rise in 1970.

Sportsmen and hobbyists will spend nearly all the money. An undetermined proportion of an expected $110 million in pistol and other sales will go to lawmen. There is also a feeling that some newly manufactured pistols are finding their way into the hands of criminals and militant activists.

Limited partnership in Conoco subscribed

NEW YORK (AP) (BW) — Continental Oil Co. has announced subscriptions have been received for the full amount of $25 million of limited partnership interests in Conoco Exploration Ltd., which were initially offered on July 13 through a group of investment banking firms managed by Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.

Conoco Exploration Ltd. is a Texas limited partnership which will join with Continental in conducting all of Continental's exploration for oil and gas in the United States (excluding Alaska, Hawaii and offshore areas) during the three-year period ending July 31, 1974.

This offering is the first of three annual offerings aggregating $75 million of limited partnership interests in the single three-year oil and gas exploration program. It is expected that the two additional $25 million offerings of interests will be made in July 1972 and July 1973.

MARK OF BUILDER EXCELLENCE

Bravo!/Cerritos is quality development for mid-income

Bravo! Cerritos, quality development for moderate income families, "is expanding at a phenomenal rate," says G. Ross Crawford, director of sales for Ponderosa Homes, division of Kaiser-Aetna.

Since its opening, Bravo' Unit II has sold over 20 homes, all scheduled for occupancy before the end of the year.

Ultimately to be a $9 million development of approximately 300 homes, Bravo!/Cerritos sold out its first unit (58 homes) in less than three weeks. This week Ponderosa Homes launches a Bravo! development in Anaheim, as well.

"The quality of this development has attracted between 400 and 500 people weekly through the Bravo! models," said Crawford.

PONDEROSA Homes in the Bravo! series range in price from $23,995 to $33,990.

There are five models and 15 exterior elevations from which to choose at the Cerritos development. Plans include two-, three-, and four-bedroom homes, some with optional dens and separate dining rooms, all with combination family-dining rooms and family-style kitchens.

A new plan, the 780, was added to the Bravo! series with the construction of the only two-story Bravo! model. It offers living room, formal dining room, family room, kitchen, powder room and utility room on the ground floor, with four bedrooms and two full baths upstairs.

The master bedroom features a private dressing room adjacent to the master bath.

"Bravo! inaugurates a totally new concept in family living, with a quality of spaciousness not usually found in contempoary homes in this price range," Crawford said.

In many models the large living areas are made larger by an unbroken line of direct access to the combination family/dining rooms and family-style kitchens — offering a versatile use of space that might normally be broken into several smaller, more confining rooms.

"It's this uninterrupted flow of usable living space that appeals to the young, practical parents of growing families," Crawford added.

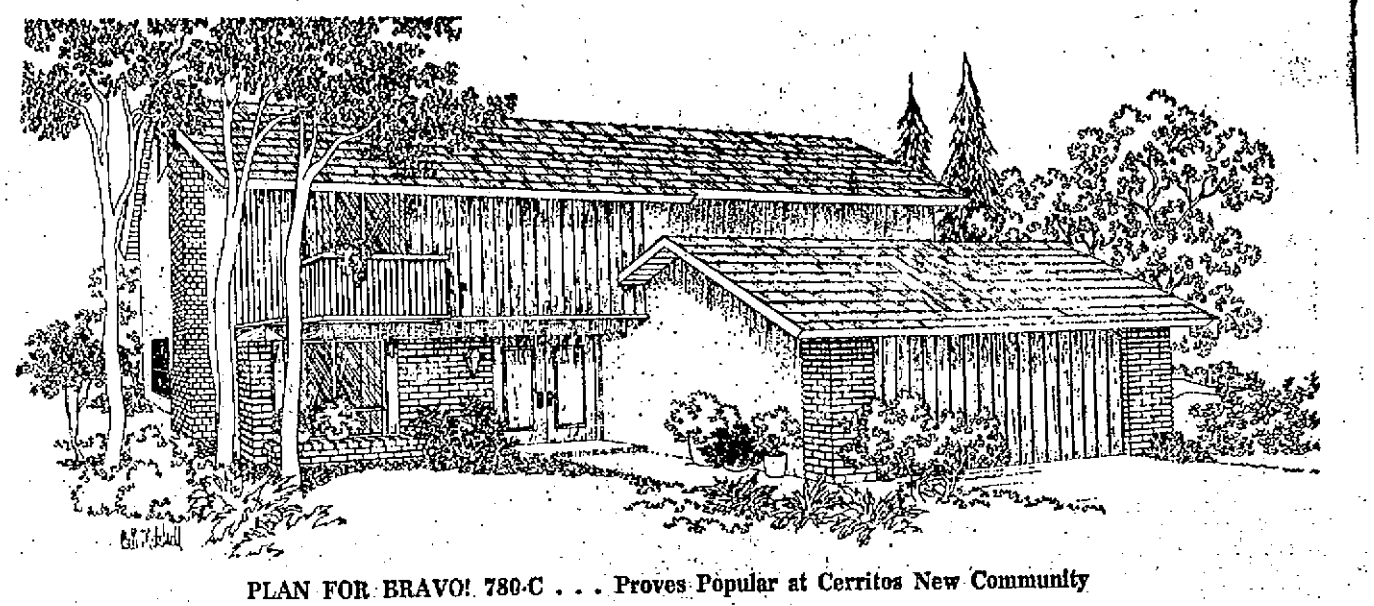

Often homes by other builders in the Bravo! price range are virtually stripped of appealing "extras." According to Jim Peters, president of Ponderosa Homes, the intent of the builder "is to offer both quality and style in a functional home at a price not prohibitive to young families."

ALL BRAVO! kitchens feature built-in appliances, custom finished hardwood ash cabinets and pass-through windows to patio dining area. Standard also is the decorative vinyl asbestos tile which is featured in every Bravo; entryway, kitchen, family room and bath.

Living room fireplace is standard in some plans, optional in others. Every Bravo! home provides concrete driveways, copper plumbing, completely fenced rear yard, front landscaping and sprinkler system.

"This not only gives the new homebuyers a head start," Peters added, "but it acts as an incentive to maintain their homes, and the appearance of the development itself, does not suffer."

Bravo!/Cerritos located at the intersection of Felson and Bloomfield in Cerritos, with easy access from all major freeways. The model complex at 12575 Felson St. is open daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Home Federal plans office in Seal Beach

Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of San Diego has been granted approval to open a new branch in Seal Beach, it was announced by Kim Fletcher, president.

CHOSEN

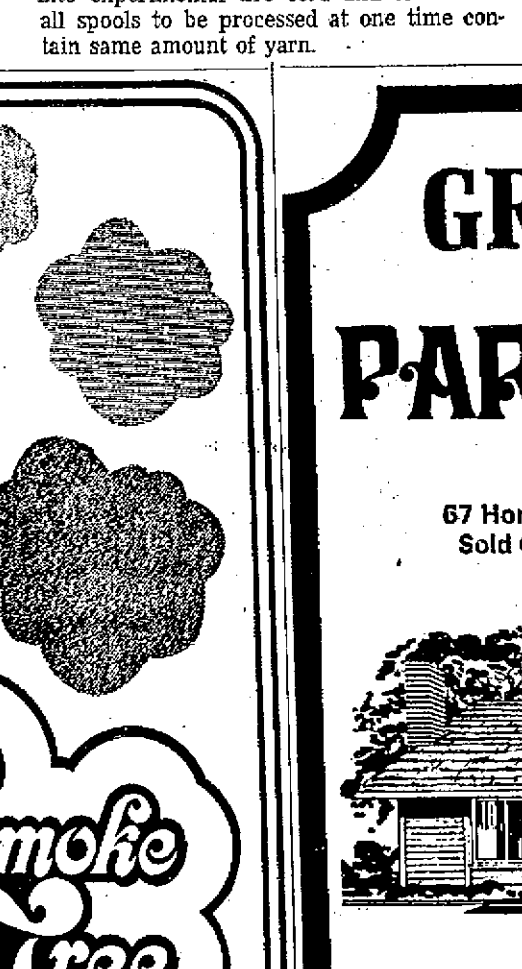

Donald DeBoer, with First Western Bank since 1955, has been promoted to vice president-manager of Bellflower office. He is active in civic and service organizations.

"We are pleased with this opportunity to serve the community of Seal Beach," Fletcher said. "We are confident that Home Federal will make a truly significant contribution to the area."

HOME Federal has four offices serving the greater Los Angeles area; the other three are in Los Angeles, Santa Ana and Arcadia.

Home Federal Savings is headquartered in San Diego, with 18 locations in Southern California. One of the largest and fastest growing associations in the nation, Home Federal has assets over $730 million.

The firm is the ninth largest federally-chartered association in the nation.

W & L sets sales records

Adding 659 home sales during August, Walker & Lee, Inc., has raised its eight-month sales total to a record-breaking 7,917, an increase of 3,420 homes over the same period last year.

The Anaheim-based firm's president, Frank E. Hart, said August dollar volume was $19.2 million, bringing the year-to-date home sales volume to $230.8 million, an increase of $102.9 million over last year's eight-month figure.

Resales of existing homes in August totaled 379, bringing the 1971 total to 4,167, New home sales for the month were 280 for an eight-month figure of 3,750.

"THE economic confusion during the past two months affected the housing market," Hart said.

"Consequently, August was the slowest month in what has been by far the best year in our 30-year history. However, the President's economic freeze on Aug. 15 should stabilize the economy and stimulate confidence."

Hart predicted a return to the firm's record sales pace during the months ahead as favorable financing becomes more available and as construction catches up with the demand for single-family housing.

He had reported several months earlier that a number of the firm's homebuilder clients had run out of new homes to sell.

Buyer interest runs high at Bradford Place

Buyer interest is running high at Bradford Place East, Grant Company of California's newest townhome community in Stanton, it was said by Charles Dreyer, marketing director.

"We've sold more than one-third of the 69 units since sales started a month ago," he reported.

Bradford Place East, located just east of Bradford Place, Grant's first townhome project in Stanton, is a completely separate community with its own recreational facilities, and has its own Homeowners Association.

Two, three, and four-bedroom townhomes at the new project are priced from $21,500 to $25,700 on FHA or VA financing.

INCLUDED in the purchase price of all homes are carpeting, drapes, and kitchens with built-in electric ranges and ovens, automatic dishwashers and disposals.

Each townhome has its own private fenced patio and two-car garage with laundry facilities.

Bradford Place East's Homeowners Association provides the maintenance for the swimming pool and other common area facilities. In addition, the Association will be responsible for the gardening work on lawns and shrubs, and the upkeep of exterior walls, trims and roofs of all homes.

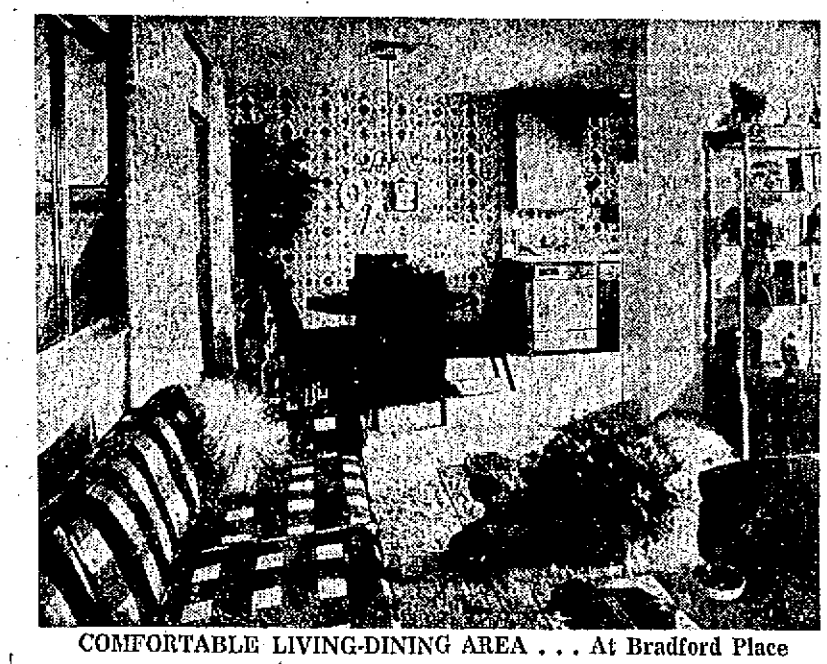

"With no maintenance worries, residents will have plenty of time to enjoy the pool or just relax on weekends," Dreyer said.

SALES FOR Bradford place East are being handled out of the information center for the original Bradford Place, where four furnished models are open daily for inspection.

Grant Company of California, developer of the new townhome community, is a division of Grant Corporation, the Newport Beach-based land Developer and home builder which has produced nearly 10,000 homes in the Western United States.

Grant Corporation, a subsidiary of Santa Anita Consolidated, Inc., currently has 15 major projects under development in California, Hawaii and Nevada.

Bradford Place East is located on Katella Avenue at Bradford Street, about one-quarter mile east of Knott Avenue.

Union Oil subsidiary in geothermal energy search

Union Oil Co. of California has announced a subsidiary will begin exploring by early next year for geothermal energy in a volcanic area of the Philippines.

Geothermal energy is natural steam or hot water from deep in the earth's crust.

The area to be explored by the subsidiary, Philippine Geothermal Inc. (PGI), is a 35,000-acre tract in the Tiwi area of the Bicol Peninsula of Southeast Luzon.

The prospective geothermal field is situated on the flanks of Mt. Malinao, a dormant volcano situated near Mayon Volcano, known in tourist brochures as the world's most perfectly shaped volcano.

If commercial reserves are found, PGI will drill geothermal wells and install pipelines to feed electric turbine generators of the National Power Corp. of the Philippines.

NPC is a government-owned utility engaged in electric power production.

UNDER THE agreement, the Union Oil subsidiary will develop the potential of the geothermal field and be compensated from the sale of electrical energy by NPC.

The contract was signed by Eduardo Rodriquez, secretary of the cabinet level department of Economic Coordination, and by Dr. Carel Otte, head of Union Oil's geothermal division.

In the United States, Union Oil is operator of what soon will be the world's largest geothermal energy project. It is situated at the Big Geysers north of San Francisco and is supplying sufficient steam to Pacific Gas & Electric Co. to produce 200,000 kilowatts.

By 1975 the Big Geysers field is programmed for 600,000 kilowatts — sufficient to supply the needs of a city the size of San Francisco — and 1,000,000 kilowatts by 1980.

Aside from the Big Geysers, the best known geothermal energy developments are government projects at Larderello, Italy, and Wairakei, New Zealand.

U.S. furniture industry gearing up for boom

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that new housing is rising at a record rate of more than two million units a year, the furniture industry is gearing up for a boom such as few other industries can look forward to.

Maybe the boom will never be heard; similar forecasts have been made for other industries only to be thwarted by reluctant consumers and unforeseen twists in the market. But the prospects are unusually good.

Everything considered, a dozen different factors are falling into place, making a picture worth hanging on the wall out of what seemed, year or so ago, a rather scrambled jigsaw puzzle.

The population mix, savings rate, incomes and personal styles are important elements in the outlook. Internal changes, such as mergers and new distribution methods, are exploiting these elements.

THE MOST important factor, as usual, is the number of housing units going up. Traditionally, furniture sales have shown a curve similar to housing after a lag of one to 1½ years.

Now there are indications that furniture sales may rise even more than housing starts.

Among the reasons:

—Should the economy be restabilized and inflation wrung out, the buying power of many Americans may rise even faster than incomes.

—The savings rate is at an unusually high level, better than 8 per cent of takehome pay. While consumers remain reluctant to lower that rate—spend the money, that is—experience suggests they cannot hold out much longer.

—Compared with recent years, the ration of installment debt to income is relatively low. Just as there are savings in the bank, there is credit at the bank too.

MOREOVER, a study by the Chase Manhattan Bank notes:

—The number of households in the 25-34 age group, the highest spenders on home furnishings, will increase by 52 per cent in the decade of the 1970s.

—The percentage of families with incomes of more than $15,000 will almost double from 22 per cent in 1970 to 38 per cent in 1980. And those are comparable —not inflated—dollars.

—The number of families in the 25-34 age group with incomes of more than $15,000 is projected to surge from 1.6 million to 6 million in 1980.

Presented with such demographic and income factors, the industry is gradually modernizing. Attempts are being made to speed deliveries which, as most purchasers know, can be maddeningly slow and inefficient.

DELAYS OF three months or so are still common, partly because of the small size of many manufacturers. The Chase study found 6,700 companies making carpets, beds and furniture, and three-fifths of them employed fewer than 20 workers.

A merger trend is slowly bringing size to the industry, and with it the ability to produce in greater volume and to maintain inventories instead of activating the lathes only after the orders come in.

New marketing methods already are evident in newspaper ads. Entire rooms are being sold instead of individual items. Because of their greater size, single manufacturers soon will be able to market pictures, rugs and lamps as well as the bed, dresser and night tables.

Volume sales also are entering the picture. Home builders and apartment house owners now offer furnishings with the unit, and sometime in the future the possibility exists of including furniture payments in the mortgage.

It's an encore for Bravo! today in Orange County

With a grand opening in Anaheim today, Bravo! homes begin an encore engagement in Orange County.

Following the success of the Bravo! series in Cerritos, Ponderosa Homes now offers Bravo!-Anaheim, with four popular models and 12 exterior elevations from which to choose.

Designed for families of moderate income, the Bravo! series ranges in price from $26,900 to $33,990 with VA, FHA and conventional financing available.

Bravo! inaugurates an entire new concept of family living.

A prime example is Bravo! Plan 830, a three-bedroom, two-bath home with optional den.

A feeling of big-home freedom and spaciousness is provided by the uninterrupted flow of living room to family-dining area and large family-style kitchen. As in all Bravo! models, the master bedroom features an entire wall of wardrobe with sliding doors.

THE BRAVO! Plan 840 is a handsome three-bedroom, two-bath home with formal living room and a spacious family-style kitchen and dining area. This plan also includes a separate utility room.

Bravo! Plan 850 is ideal for growing families, with four bedrooms, two baths and a utility room.

Kitchen and family room are divided by a double sink and counter-cabinet area which serves as an informal dining bar in the family room.

The L-shaped hallway provides easy access to any room in this large, comfortable home.

BRAVO! Plan 880 is now available in the Anaheim development, and will be added to future Bravo! units.

This two-story home includes living room, dining room, family room-kitchen, utility room and powder room downstairs. Four bedrooms and two full baths are on the second floor.

The master bedroom has a private dressing area.

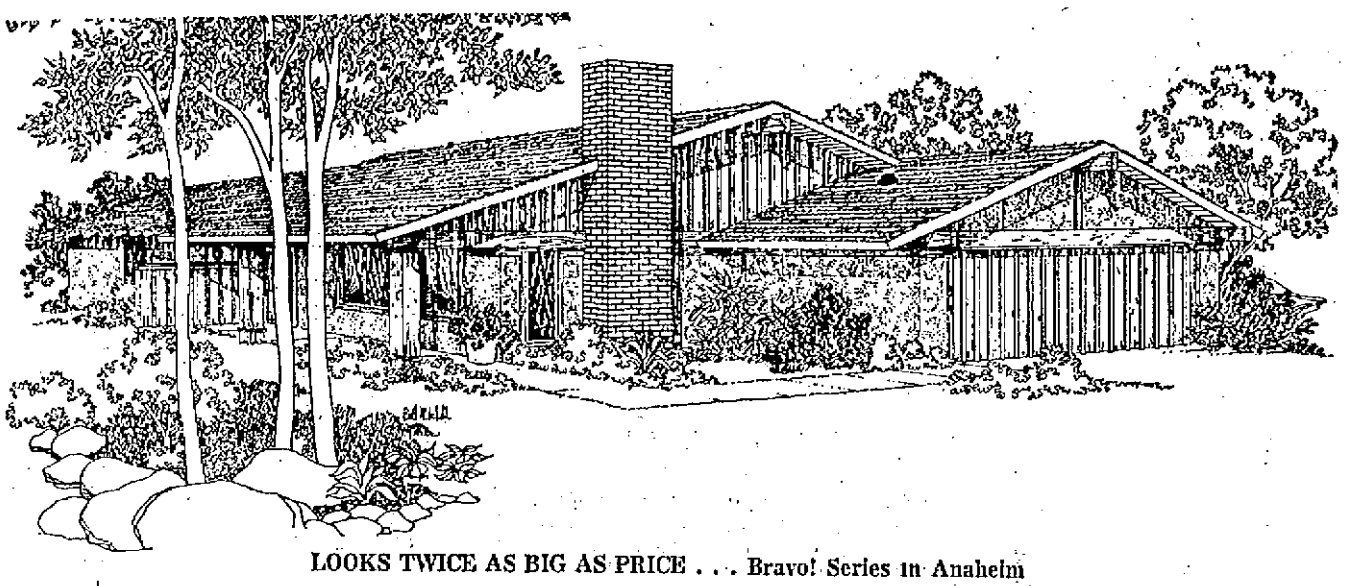

All Bravo! homes stress the concept of total family living, with such desirable features as pass-through windows from kitchen to patio dining areas, living room fireplaces, decorative vinyl asbestos tile in all activity areas and completely fenced rear yards.

G. Ross Crawford, director of sales, emphasizes Ponderosa's continuing interest in adding to the beauty of the areas where they build.

"WE ARE very concerned," Crawford said, "that all of our new home communities remain bright and beautiful. For example, when a family purchases one of our fine new Bravo! homes, they get a fully landscaped front yard with a sprinkler system already installed.

"That's just one more way that we become involved," Crawford said. "One more way to ensure that our neighborhoods will stay green and attractive.

"It is the intent of Ponderosa Homes to build fine single-family dwellings that consistently offer the buyer the best possible home bargain," Crawford said. "Better design, better styling, better features, as well as many other extras are included in the purchase price."

LOOKS TWICE AS BIG AS PRICE . . . Bravo! Series in Anaheim

BRAVO! homes, designed for moderate income families, are built by Ponderosa Homes, a division of Kaiser-Aetna Corporation. Bravo!-Anaheim is located at the intersection of Orangethorpe and Kellogg, easily accessible via the San Diego, Santa Ana and Garden Grove Freeways.

Industrial park for Anaheim

Dunn Propertires Corp., a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based Pacific Lighting Corp., has begun construction on the $1 million Ball-East Industrial Park in Anaheim.

Completion is scheduled this December.

The industrial park is to reflect the architectural motif of early California. Rough-sawn, heavy timber framing will form the entry roof structures and massive, specially shaped piers will support the framing in impressive collonades.

Located on a 5.8-acre site at the northeast corner of Ball Road and East Street, the development will have two buildings. One has 62,070 square feet of floor space, the other 49,914 square feet.

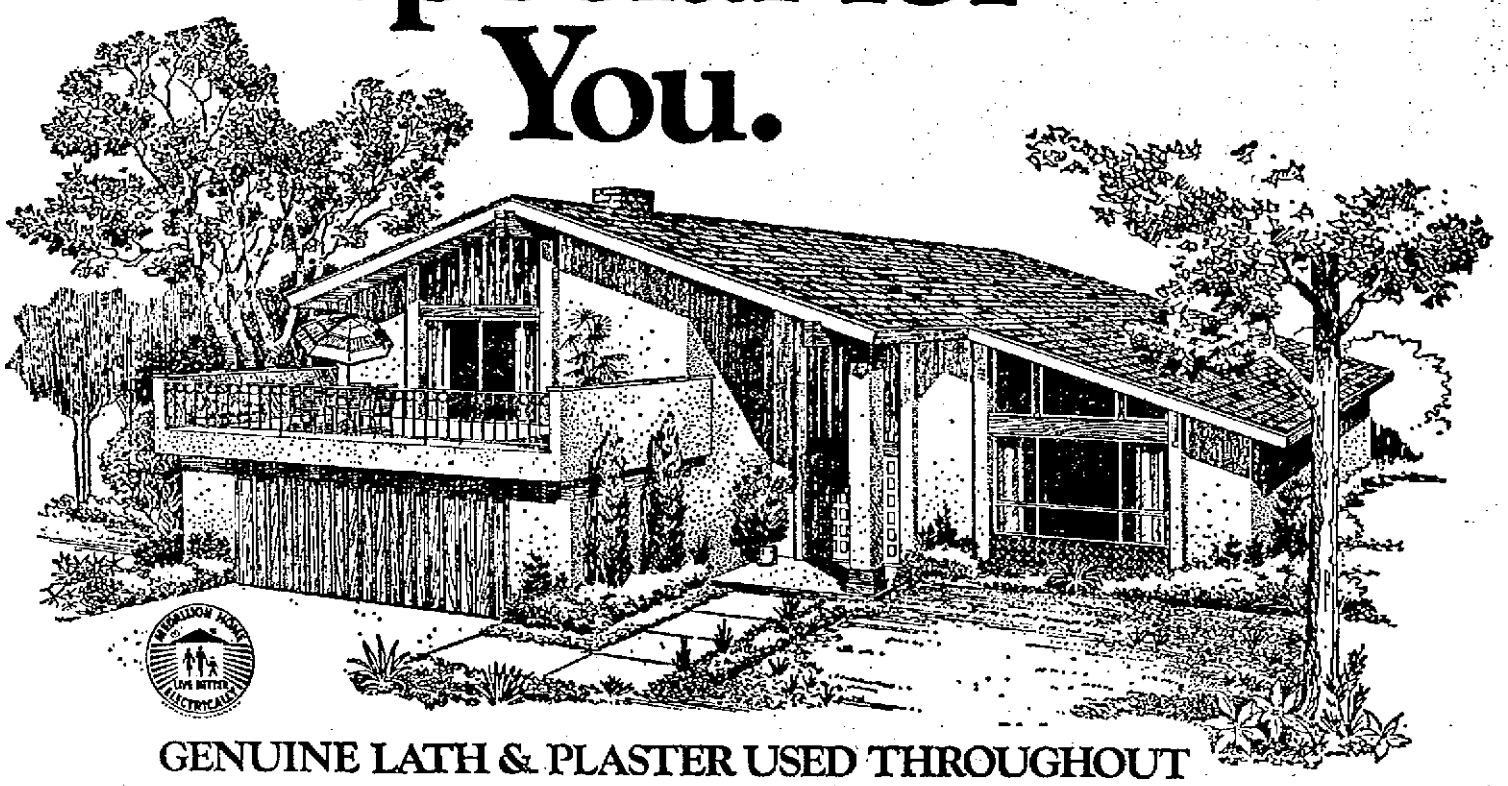

The buildings are designed to be divided for use by several tenants. Tenants will specify interior arrangements.

BOTH buildings will be of concrete tilt-up construction. Dunn Industrial Builders Inc., a subsidiary of Dunn Properties, is general contractor for the project.

Headquartered in Santa Ana, Dunn Properties Corp. specializes in producing, leasing and selling industrial property for light industry and manufacturing.

Dunn is on one of the largest industrial developer in Southern California with 21 available locations. The firm also has sites in Dallas-Ft. Worth and Houston. Other projects will be built this year in Hayward and San Jose in Northern California.

Never-say-die Dodgers trail by one

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

ATLANTA — The Duke is King — for a day, at least — and, fittingly, he's now anxious to ascend to the throne.

"We should win it now," the Dodgers' Duke Sims said of the stirring race in the National League's Western Division. "We've had ample opportunities and we're up close again. We have to do just one thing — win every game."

It was Duke Sims who slammed a three-run home run, coming at a time when Atlanta owned a two-run advantage. It was Sims again in the ninth inning, this time starting a controversial doubleplay that preserved a 5-4 victory over the Braves on a gray, overcast Saturday afternoon at Atlanta Stadium.

The victory, coupled with the staggering San Francisco Giants' 15th loss in their last 20 starts, a 6-5 defeat in Cincinnati, pushed the Dodgers back to within one game of first place.

The Dodgers have been there before. Twice last week they were within one game of first place, but haven't been able to catch up. Now time is of the essence. Only four games remain.

"We keep getting close so maybe one of these times we'll go past them," said the manager, Walter Alston, relishing the Dodgers' 12th win in 18 starts, a span in which they chopped eight games off of San Francisco's once-commanding lead.

DODGER OF DAY

DUKE SIMS slugged three-run home run to lead Dodgers to 5-4 victory over Atlanta.

The Dodgers engage the Braves again this afternoon while the Giants must face the streaking Reds again. Then the Dodgers are home against Houston Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights while San Francisco plays in San Diego.

The Dodgers are trying to do a repeat of the 1962 race — only in reverse — when they blew a three-game lead to San Francisco with six games to go.

Saturday Sims' homer, only his fourth this season, propelled the Dodgers into the lead. But the game boiled down to a critical decision by plate umpire Chris Pelekoudas in the ninth inning, a decision that swiftly swung the advantage from the Braves to the surging Dodgers.

Jim Brewer, the best of the Dodgers' bullpen, was the pitcher, asked to protect a one-run lead which he eventually did to record his 21st save.

But before he did, pinch hitter Hal King led off the ninth inning with a single to right. Leadoff hitter Felix Millan, already with a double and two singles for the day, attempted to advance King with a sacrifice bunt.

Sims lurched out from the plate, bobbled the ball and finally retrieved it in fair territory. Instinctly, he fired to second base and Maury Wills relayed it on to first to complete a doubleplay.

"It's the worst call I've ever seen," argued Atlanta manager Luman Harris. "The ball was foul. It was a pitiful call."

Eddie Mathews, the first base coach, argued, too, and finally got thumbed out of the game.

"I had a clear view of the play and so did (Lee) Weyer, the first base ump," Mathews charged. "All Pelekoudas had to do was ask for help but he wouldn't do it. This is too important of a game, to us as well as the Dodgers, for him (Pelekoudas) to worry about his ego."

Pelekoudas insisted he

Giants stumble again

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hal McRae knocked in four runs with two of four Cincinnati home runs as the Reds edged San Francisco, National League Western Division leader, 6-5, Saturday and stalled the Giants' title drive.

The loss, coupled with the Dodgers' win over Atlanta, left the Giants clinging to a one-game lead.

Cincinnati played the game under protest following an argument over a play in the Giants half of the eighth inning.

McRae, who also turned in an outstanding defensive play in the first inning, stroked a three-run homer off reliever Don McMahon in the sixth inning to give the Reds a three-run margin at 6-3.

McRae slammed his first homer of the game in the second inning off starter John Cumberland. George Foster, obtained earlier in the season from the Giants, followed with a homer and put the Reds up 3-0. It was Foster's 13th homer of the year and four have come against the Giants.

Lee May put Cincinnati on top 1-0 in the first inning with his 39th homer, his career high.

The Giants rallied for two

Cal St. tames Tigers, 15-14

The sign on Gary Wright's door at Cal State Long Beach reads:

"29-38 - 77, 38.5 average. No defensive players, or coaches, allowed in this office."

The sign is likely to come down early Monday morning.

Cal State's oft-maligned defensive unit rose to necessary heights on numerous occasions Saturday night to play a major role in the 49ers' 15-14 triumph over the University of Pacific.

The triumph was the first in three games for the 49ers and delighted a Veterans Stadium crowd of 6,853, on hand to watch CSLB open defense of its Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. football title.

Cal State's defensive unit twice gave up go-ahead scores to Pacific, on a nine-yard pass from Carlos Brown to Joe Radovich in the first quarter and on a five-yard run by Mitchell True in the third, but rose up to stifle three desperation Tiger bids after the 49ers had pulled ahead, 15-14, with 6:58 to play.

Troy enjoys yawner, 28-0

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

No one fell off any cliffs watching this one.

As a matter of fact, USC's 28-0 victory over Illinois Saturday night at the Coliseum was an untidy, stuttering effort.

As a crowd of 49,390 yawned and squirmed, the Trojans overcame the loss of five fumbles to record their second victory in three games.

But it was hardly an effort that would portend success against Oklahoma next Saturday in Norman, Okla.

The one bright spot of the evening was the versatility displayed by quarterback Jim Jones, whose running and passing shot him past O. J. Simpson's career total offense record at the school.

Jones completed 14 of 20 passes for 182 yards and one touchdown, and his nifty running of the option added a new dimension to the Trojan offense. Jones ran eight times for 52 yards.

It was an evening of futility for Illinois, which went through its third consecutive game without a point.

The Illini blew a couple of scoring opportunities, one at the USC 4 in the third quarter, and finally grew so desperate they attempted a 41-yard field goal while trailing by 21-0.

Illinois coach Bob Blackman's return to the Coliseum was something less than a smashing success. When the Illini weren't

'We were never in it'—Pepper
UCLA destroyed by mighty Wolves, 38-0

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The Bruins are through kidding themselves.

They lost to Pittsburgh on a fumble and made it easy for Texas by dropping nine passes, but Saturday's 38-0 mauling by fourth-ranked Michigan was different.

"We were never in the ball game," coach Pepper Rodgers moaned, "never in it."

UCLA middle guard Mike Pavich, who took three stitches on his nose trying to blunt the Wolverines' power-I, went a bit farther:

"Everybody's talking about coming back to play Michigan in the Rose Bowl, but we sure won't if we keep making these mistakes."

Michigan was expected to win comfortably but the way the Bruins lost diminished their esteem as Rose Bowl material.

It could be that 89,177 hostile fans and some unexpected rain unglued junior quarterback Mike Flores, but more likely it was the Wolverines' headlong pass rush that dropped him eight times for losses.

"I just played a real bad game," Flores said, "and I lost my poise."

Flores, who threw away a pitchout and two interceptions, might be forgiven, but errors by proven pressure performers like safety Ron Carver and punter Bruce Barnes brought dismay.

On Michigan's first drive, Carver, who played his usual strong game otherwise, changed his mind on a fair catch and drew a penalty for running with the ball, putting the Bruins in business on their own 4-yard line.

UCLA tried to kick it out on third down but Barnes, the Pacific-8 leader with a 40.7 average last season, topped a line drive to Tom Darden, who galloped it back 22 yards to the UCLA 20.

Five plays later fullback Fritz Seyferth crunched the final foot on fourth down.

Then Flores tried to counter the rush with a screen to Marv Kendricks, but end Butch Carpenter flustered Flores into throwing it away to tackle Dave Gallagher, who put it on the UCLA 18.

Seyferth's backup man, 237-pound sophomore Ed Shuttlesworth, scored from two feet away.

Wait, folks, there's more.

Colorado shuts off Buckeyes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Quarterback Ken Johnson, who wasn't supposed to play, ran for two touchdowns and speedster Cliff Branch raced 68 yards with a punt return for another Saturday as 10th ranked Colorado defeated fifth ranked Ohio State 20-14.

The tough Colorado defense stopped Ohio State, the nation's second leading rushing team, three times inside the 10 yard line.

Both Ohio State touchdowns came in the final period, the last with a little over two minutes remaining in the game."

Johnson, who suffered a wrist injury in the undefeated Buffaloes' first win over Louisiana State, was not supposed to play.

Sophomore halfback Charlie Davis was the leading rusher for Colorado and the workhorse of the Buffalo backfield with 116 yards rushing in 18 carries.

The powerful Colorado defense time and again blunted Ohio State's running attack and forced the Buckeyes to go to the air — something which they don't do very often.

Sweet year for Lemon

It was a big week for Robert Granville Lemon, who is being given prime consideration for American League manager-of-the-year honors.

Tuesday night his Kansas City Royals, a team pegged anywhere from 50-1 to 100-1 to even finish the season, wrapped up second place in the American League West and on Wednesday evening his players gave him a 51st birthday present by scoring nine runs in the ninth inning to demolish the pitiful Angels.

"This was my most gratifying season in my 33 years in baseball," commented the Wilson High grad on his birthday at his Claiborne Drive home. "It was even better than in '48 when I won two World Series games for Cleveland and infinitely better than '54 when I lost two World Series games to the Giants."

Lemon was asked if he honestly thought his Royals would finish ahead of the Angels and Twins this season.

"No!" he replied emphatically. "But I thought we could play .500 ball, which we've done. Last year we were 16 games below .500. At this moment, we're 13 games over .500, which means an improvement of 29 games in one season.

"But like everybody else, I felt the Angels and Twins were the teams to beat.

"It was a funny season in one way. We played like hell against the Eastern Division teams, but we played bad ball against West teams like Chicago, Milwaukee and especially Oakland.

"On the other hand, we played amazing ball against Boston. We beat them 11 out of 12 games, the loss coming in our last game. You figure you're lucky to break even playing in Boston.

"We also kayoed Vida Blue twice. It was a strange season."

WHAT WAS THE BIG FACTOR in Kansas City's rapid rise?

"There were many things," said the Century Club's second athlete-of-the-year in 1956, "but most of all I'd have to say it was the play of our little 5-4 shortstop, Fred Patek. I didn't realize he was so good. We cut down drastically on unearned runs and Patek was the big factor here.

"Fred's the best shortstop in the league. He makes all the plays and he has the best arm. Ile and Amos Otis top the league in stolen bases. Patek plays defense with excellence and he's batting around .275, too.

"I think he deserves consideration for most valuable player.

"Another big thing in our turnabout was the mating of Patek and Cookie Rojas at second base. They set a Kansas City record for double plays this season.

"We were strong through the middle, too, which a good team is supposed to be. Catching was good with Jerry May and Eddie Kirkpatrick; Patek and Rojas were great at short and second, and Otis in centerfield can do it all."

ASKED ABOUT HIS PITCHING, which Bob avoided discussing immediately, the old hurler broke into a glow of pride. After all, if one has seven 20-game winning performances in the majors, one has to lean toward pitchers.

"There's no question but that pitching was big for us," beamed Lemon. "We started spring training with question marks. So I reported the pitchers early and they were worked into shape gradually to be ready for the season's opener.

"It was basically a young staff and our improved defense gave them more confidence.

"Dick Drago (17-10) and Mike Hedlund (15-7 with the league's top ERA — 2.54) were the most consistent. We had a fine bullpen with Tom Bulrgmeir; Jim York, a helluva sidearmer from USC, and Ted Abernathy.

"I'm satisfied with our pitching, but I'm not standing pat.

"We've got some good arms on the farm and one especially is a great prospect, Monty Montgomery, who's just 22. Monty's first game in the majors was against Oakland and he walked nobody and gave up only three scratch hits. That's a pretty good trick jumping from Elmira to knuckling down Oakland.

"I've got to say one big thing about something people never consider — the unearned run statistics. This was a big thing in our season. Paul Schaal at third had a lot to do with this, along with Patek and Rojas. Paul gave us more good defense and his bat (.270) is pretty good, too."

IS LEMON looking for anything special to improve his next season?

"Heck, yes," snorted the infielder turned pitcher. "I'll try to deal for an established .300 hitter, but it'll probably take a pretty good pitcher to get him.

"Ive got to remember we'll be in a new park in '72 — The Harry Truman Complex — and we'll have Tartan Turf, which will help our offense. Balls scoot off that artificial grass and I'm looking forward to playing on it. From what I can learn, a lot of fly balls will fly out of that new park, so I want another big hitter."

Does the Royals' manager think he can offer a strong challenge next season to Vida Blue's A's?

"I think so," remarked Lemon, after consideration. "But I have to get that .300 hitter I want to go along with Otis. Everybody said I was crazy when I stated we'd play .500 ball. Maybe they'll think I'm crazy for saying that."

WHEN IT WAS POINTED OUT the Royals' record was slightly better than the Dodgers, percentage-wise, and the Dodgers still were battling for a division pennant, Lemon laughed and shrugged:

"We're in the wrong league, I guess. But we lost eight in a row and six in a row, but we came back. I don't know if the Dodgers can come back now."

Who's going to win that National Division race?

"It looks like nobody wants it," Lemon shrugged again. "It's a tough row this time of year. I'll say the Dodgers and Giants will have a playoff before the playoffs." God forbid.

Which American League division winner will be in the World Series, Baltimore or Oakland, the Royals' professor was asked?

"Baltimore's old geezers, the Robinsons and Powell, get adrenalin when that bunting is tacked on the stands," replied Robert Granville.

What will the manager-of-the-year nominee do during the off-season?

"I've got a couple of places to go," mused Lemon. "There's the Instructional League and I'll take a look at our rookies at our Royals' Baseball Academy in Sarasota, Florida. Then there's the baseball meetings in Phoenix in December.

"Then I'll rest a couple days before spring training.

"Heck, when I think about it, that next baseball season will be just around the corner."

Isn't it always, Robert Granville?

Stanford overpowers Oregon, 38-17

STANFORD (AP) — Quarterback Don Bunce threw three touchdown passes Saturday, including bombs of 78 and 41 yards to wide receiver Miles Moe, to lead defending champion Stanford to a 38-17 victory over Oregon in a Pacific-8 football opener.

The unbeaten and 13th-ranked Indians scored two touchdowns in the final two minutes of the third quarter to pull away from the stubborn Ducks, who lost starting quarterback Dan Fouts with a knee injury in the first half of the regionally televised game.

Jackie Brown dove two yards for a touchdown on a 30-yard drive that followed an interception by Stanford defensive back Tim Robnett. Bunce then threw his second touchdown pass of the day and fourth of the season, to score as the Indians took a 31-14 lead.

The senior quarterback added a 26-yard scoring toss to John Winesberry in the final period and totaled 262 yards through the air.

Stanford built a 17-0 lead before giving up its first touchdown of the season.

Fouts passed five yards to Greg Specht for the score, just before the end of the first half, and then left the game with strained ligaments in his left knee. Bill Drake, an Oregon defensive back, intercepted a Bunce pass in the third quarter and ran it back 28 yards for a touchdown as the Ducks made it 17-14. But with Fouts gone, and sub Harvey Winn at the helm, the Ducks got only one more score — a late 39 yard field goal by Larry Battle.

Bunce scored the first touchdown for the Indians, 3-0, on a five-yard run and Rod Garcia hit on a 25-yard field goal in the first half.

Oregon running back Bobby Moore, although held scoreless, rushed for 150 yards in 29 carries.

The Ducks, 1-2, must play Texas next week, followed by Southern Cal and then unbeaten Washington. Oregon's other loss was to No. 1 rated Nebraska.

S.D. State stunned by So. Miss.

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Quarterback Rick Donegan sneaked one-yard for a touchdown on a fourth down play in the third quarter Saturday night to pace Southern Mississippi to a 10-0 upset of San Diego State.

Ray Guy added a 22-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter to complete the scoring.

Southern's hard-hitting defense kept the pressure all evening on San Diego quarterback Brian Sipe, who ranked fifth in the nation in passing a year ago.

The victory for the Southerners, who went into the contest 14-point underdogs, was the first of the season after losses to Florida State and Alabama. The setback marred the season opener for the California team.

Spartans give Duffy 100th win

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Third-string quarterback Frank Kolch fired scoring passes of 25 and 15 yards and safety Brad Van Pelt galloped for two touchdowns with interceptions Saturday to lead Michigan State to a 31-14 college football victory over Oregon State.

The Spartans, limiting OSU to second-half touchdowns on runs of one yard by Steve Endicott and six yards by Dave Schilling, presented head Coach Duffy Dougherty with his 100th victory.

Kolch, a rugged 6-foot-4, 225-pound junior, had been in for ony one play previously this season — and had thrown an interception.

Teen-ager trips Smith

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

A young man and an old man gave a sellout crowd of 3,200 plenty to cheer about Saturday afternoon at the Los Angeles Tennis Club in the semifinals of the $73,000 Pepsi Pacific Southwest Open Tennis Championships.

Jimmy Connors, who turned 19 this month, stunned Pfc. Stan Smith, the U.S. Open champion and top seed, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, after 43-year-old Pancho Gonzales eliminated third-seeded Cliff Richey, 6-2, 7-5. Smith and Richey are both 24.

Connors, a UCLA sophomore, was unseeded and Gonzales was seeded only eighth. Jimmy won the NCAA title as a freshman.

In women's play, the top favorites advanced to today's finals as Billie Jean King ousted third-seeded Kerry Melville of Australia, 6-2, 7-6, and little Rosemary Casals rallied to defeat Francoise Durr of France, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4, after trailing 1-3 in the last set.

This afternoon's competition, a sellout in advance, opens at 1:15 o'clock with Mrs. King facing her friend and doubles partner, Miss Casals. Then will come the Gonzales-Connors clash, to be followed by the two doubles finals.

Billie Jean, of Long Beach, Berkeley, Honolulu and Palm-Air, Fla. (she represents Palm-Air as touring pro), will be going after the first prize of $4,000, which, by her figuring, would run her tournament earnings for 1971 to $99,000. The women's runnerup will collect $2,500 and today's losers got $1,250.

First prize for the men is $10,000, but young Connors, being a college player, isn't eligible for it. Second place money is $5,000. Richey and Smith earned $2,500 each, but since Smith is in the Army his money will go to the U.S. Davis Cup fund.

San Jose lashed by Bears

BERKELEY (UPI) — After a lethargic first period in which they netted only 36 yards, the California Bears erupted for three couchdowns in the second period Saturday en route to a comeback 34-10 win over San Jose State.

Steve Kemnitzer, a bullish 195-pound running back from Klamath Falls, Ore., scored twice on short runs and quarterback Jay Cruze flipped touchdown passes of 11 and 18 yards for the Bears. Isaac Curtis raced 25 yards for the other Bear TD in the second period.

The victory was the second in a row for the favored Bears after a season opening loss to Arkansas. San Jose dropped its second game in a row.

Cowboys fall to Air Force

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Sophomore Air Force quarterback Rich Haynie Saturday calmly ignored frantic Wyoming linemen and passed 15 yards to flanker Greg Smith in the end zone with two seconds left, giving Air Force a 23-19 victory.

Haynie, the No. 2 Falcon quarterback going into the game, took over the team in the second period.

Wyoming had to give up the ball with 23 seconds left and a 19-16 lead after cutting off an Air Force drive by intercepting a Haynie pass in the end zone. But 23 seconds and two plays was all the Falcons, who got the ball on the Wyoming 45, needed.

Haynie passed to right end Dan Novak for 30 yards and then tossed to Smith in the right corner of the end zone.

Mando learns facts of life

"I never thought this would ever happen to me. I thought it would always be the same—good living, eating good. It's not like that."—Mando Ramos.

You wouldn't recognize Mando Ramos these days. He wears his hair long and his expression sober, and if you happen to see him at 5 a.m. he'll be going out, not coming in.

"We're up at 5 every day," he boasts.

"And he's ready to go," says his father, Ray, "just like in the beginning, like the good old days in Long Beach."

Mando was 17 — technically underage to fight professionally — when he dropped out of Poly High and soared to the world lightweight title, training on the beach while his father sometimes jogged alongside, bursting with pride.

MANDO

It's much the same scene at Santa Monica now where Mando, 23 in November, shares a room at the Surfrider Inn with his father and prepares to meet Ruben Navarro at the Olympic Thursday night.

The following Monday he leaves for Spain to fight Pedro Carrasco for the World Boxing Council's version of the title on Nov. 5. After that, he says he'll be looking for Scotland's Ken Buchanan, the World Boxing Assn. champion, "to settle this whole thing again."

COMING OFF 10 MONTHS of doubt and disillusionment since he dispatched "former friend" Raul Rojas in six rounds, it would seem that Mando is presuming a lot. He has been a three-way loser in the last year-and-a-half. First he lost his title, to Panama's Ismael Laguna, then his marriage, finally his money.

Still, the WBC rates him as the No. 1 contender and, although Navarro is No. 4, Ramos sees Ruben as no threat to his plans: "He's not in the same class."

Class Mando had. But even after becoming, at 20, the youngest man to win the title he seemed to fall short of his potential.

"Most people know that I had a lot of problems," he says. "Why deny it, as long as I've changed? I've said it so much I hate even saying it — 'This time I mean it.' I really wasn't sincere . . . but my father knows I am now, 'cause we're back doing what we used to do."

Mando insists that he never did mind training.

"That's the thing about boxing," he says. "The work isn't hard. It's just all the sacrifices you make.

Mando made very few sacrifices.

"I'd be in the gym every day, but then I'd just take off, looking for girls or just out drinking beer. That's why I used to get fat — drinking beer. Then after the fight you wouldn't see me for a month. Instead of getting better, I'd stay the same."

AFTER THE ROJAS fight Mando felt it all closing in on him.

"It got pretty bad," he says. "I was having problems with my wife, and there was a lot of money involved . . . so much money, so many people putting so many ideas in my head. Not really being educated, it had me confused. It seemed like it all just came down bad and I just wanted to get away."

Mando, who had earned about $250,000 in his career, asked for what little cash co-manager Lee Prlia was still holding for him and moved to Rosarito Beach, south of Tijuana, ostensibly to "train." But after a couple of months he was back in his old harbor haunts.

"I didn't actually have a place to live," he says. "I'd stay at my dad's house a couple of days, then at my mother's, or my brother's."

About a month ago Mando was driving on the Long Beach Freeway. His son, Armando Jr., a year and 9 months, was sitting beside him. A car blew a tire and swerved in front of them and Mando barely avoided a terrible accident.

"It wasn't my fault," he says, noting the unique nature of the incident, "but it really made me think what could have happened — and what I'd be leaving my son. I owed the government money, I was behind in my rent."

"THE NEXT MORNING Mando made two phone calls — one to his manager, Jackie McCoy, the other to his father.

"Jackie just said he wanted to see it — if I really had changed," Mando says, "so I've started doing it."

His father doesn't even have to lock him in at night.

"The only problem is I still like women," Mando sighs, "but I have to stay away from 'em before the fight."

The girls still come around, but the friends don't.

"Anybody ask me for money, I'd just say, 'Sure, here's,'" Mando says. Now that I'm broke I don't see any of my friends."

He figures the anticipated $25,000 or so from the Navarro fight will get him even — "maybe a little ahead" — on his debts, including back taxes and a $500-a-month child support to Stella. He has turned his affairs over to Long Beach attorney Albert C. S. Ramsey.

"He'll be handling my money," Mando grins wryly, "as soon as I have some money to handle."

WHEN MANDO LEAVES to take a phone call, Ray tells of the father-son estrangement.

"In the beginning I'd train him and was getting a percentage, although my name wasn't on a contact or anything. But as soon as he started making big money I wasn't around anymore. I guess people were talking to him.

"He'd tell my wife to keep me away from the gym. Pretty soon he didn't want me to train him in the morning. The night he won the title I wasn't even around."

"It was hard," Mando says, "he and I splitting up like that. So I thought the only way I could do right was by him being with me."

Ray, who will serve as one of Mando's seconds, explains how he has his son shadow-box with weights in his hands, how he rubs a saltwater solution into the eyebrows to toughen the tender tissue against cuts. He rises enthusiastically to demonstrate his son's new moves.

"Don Chagrin (the promoter) wanted to put him in a four-rounder on the card," Mando laughs.

"I'll be in his corner now," Ray affirms.

Parseghian disdains playing for tie

Notre Dame slips past Purdue, 8-7

New York Times Service

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — In a continuous cold rain, Notre Dame remained unbeaten Saturday with a sudden 8-7 victory over Purdue on a daring 2-point conversion after a recovery of a fumbled punt-attempt in the end zone for a touchdown with 2:58 remaining.

Fred Swendsen, a 235-pound defensive end, pounced on the loose ball for the touchdown. Bill Steenberge, the quarterback who had completed only seven of 25 passes, then floated a pass to Mike Creaney for the winning points.

By disdaining a placekick that would have assured a tie, Ara Parseghian, the Notre Dame coach, prompted the memory of the controversy in 1966 when he was accused of "playing for a tie" in the closing minutes of the memorable 10-10 duel with Michigan State for the national championship.

"It was a gutsy call," said Creaney, a junior tight end. "No one can say that the coach doesn't go after the big one."

Return yardage	35	52
Passes	7-26-1	12-24-1
Punts	10-37	4-35
Fumbles lost	1	2
Yards penalized	20	52

Parseghian cited the "limited time" available as the reason for his decision to go for the victory, while risking a loss.

"Had we scored in the early part of the fourth quarter," Parseghian said, "we would've kicked the extra point. But because of the limited time, only two minutes and 58 seconds, we thought that our chance of scoring again would be remote, especially in view of the elements. So we went for it."

With about five minutes remaining, the Irish, ranked second in both wire-service polls and hopeful of a national championship, appeared doomed to their fifth consecutive loss in Ross-Ades Stadium.

In a third-and-two situation at the Purdue 5-yard line, Steenberge had fumbled the snap. Chuck Plebes, the Purdue quarterback last season but a defensive back now, recovered. If the Boilermakers could kill the clock, they would record another upset in this bitter Indiana rivalry.

As the scenario evolved in the second half, Purdue dominated the game, to the delight of their loyalists in the record crowds of 69,765 that huddled under umbrellas. When the Irish had been deflated by Steenberge's fumble, their 25th victory against 16 losses and two ties in the series appeared unlikely.

Huskers wreck Aggies

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska relied on the "big play" Saturday—including touchdown runs of 98 and 95 yards—as the top-ranked Cornhuskers rolled to a 34-7 intersectional college football victory over the Texas A&M Aggies.

Shifty Johnny Rodgers returned the second-half kickoff 98 yards for the day's third Husker touchdown, while safety Bill Kosch returned an intercepted pass 95 yards in the fourth period.

Texas A&sM countered with a dazzler of its own on Hugh McElroy's 94-yard kickoff return in the game's closing minutes.

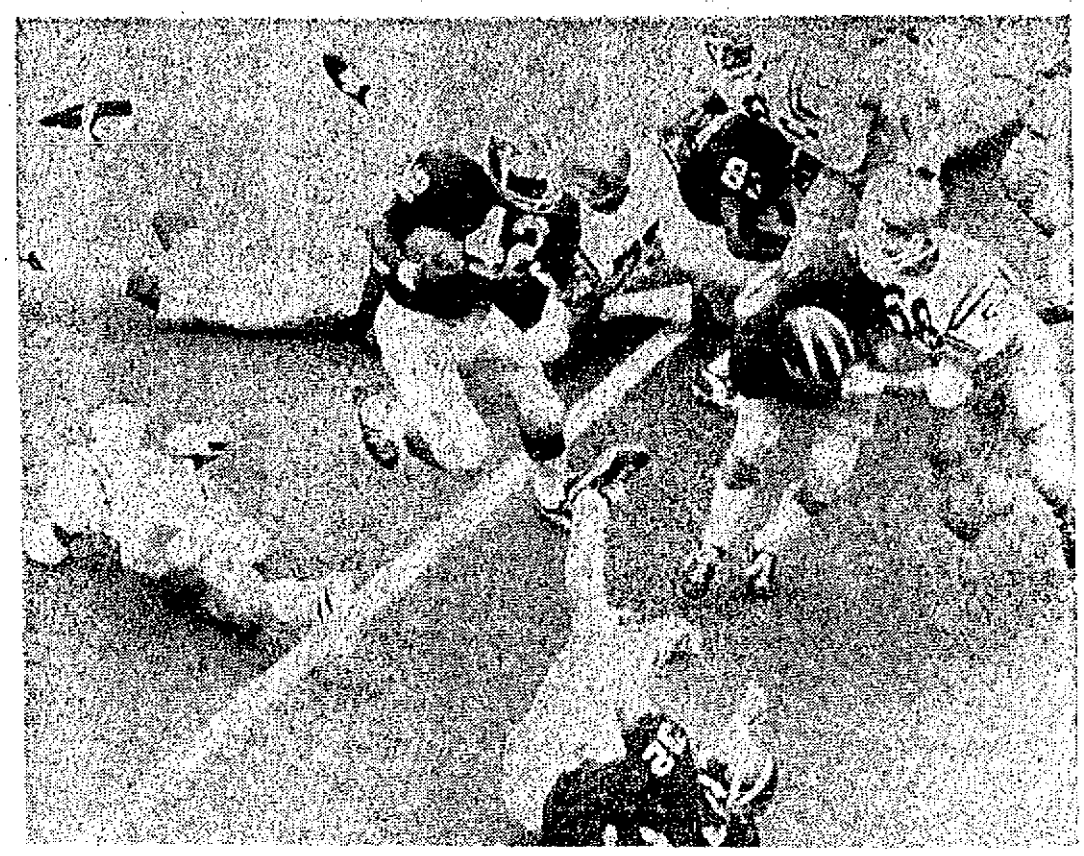

The victory, the Cornhuskers' third of the season, stretched their string of games without defeat to 22 and left A&M with a 1-2 mark for the season.

A 67-yard sideline run by junior fullback Bill Olds put Nebraska on the scoreboard first in the closing seconds of the first quarter.

A one-yard sneak by quarterback Jerry Tagge boosted Nebraska's lead to 13-0 at the intermission.

MADISON (AP) — Quarterback Paul Lyons ran for three touchdowns and passed for fourth to lead 16th-ranked Louisiana State to a 38-28 college football victory over Wisconsin Saturday.

Lyons scored on runs of 38, 11 and three yards and passed 10 yards to Andy Hamilton for the other touchdown.

The spirited Badgers, playing before 78,535 — largest crowd in Camp Randall history — took a 14-7 first quarter lead on touchdown runs of two yards by Rufus Ferguson and 53 by Alan Thompson.

But the Tigers wiped out a 14-10 halftime deficit, scoring the first four times they had the ball in the second half.

BRUINS BOUNCED —

Kendricks, jolted by one of linebacker Mike Taylor's 10 solo tackles, fumbled at his 19. The bleagured defense this time held 'em to a 31-yard field goal by Dana Coin, but it was 17-0 and UCLA hadn't been beyond its own 33-yard line.

Plagued by such errors, the Bruins hardly needed trouble like Darden, who later returned an interception 92 yards, and Billy Taylor, a 5-11, 195-pound tailback who carried the ball on Michigan's first six plays and gained 57 of his 91 net yards in the first quarter before the defense cornered him.

Bruin linebacker Vince Mok said, "Hitting him is like hitting a fireplug."

So, as Rodgers had feared, Michigan didn't have to pass much — but, like Texas' Eddie Phillips last week, soph Kevin Casey showed he could when he had to.

On a 32-yard scoring play in the second quarter, split end Bo Rather caught one on the 25 and pirouetted through three Bruins before falling into the end zone.

The rain stopped by halftime, and so did the Wolverines.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler, who used 73 players against Virginia (56-0), let his regulars go until late in the fourth quarter, figuring they won't get much of a workout against Navy next week.

But the Wolverines seldom passed or ran outside tackle, allowing the Bruins to gather themselves for a last shot at avoiding their first shutout in 25 games (6-0 by Washington in 1968).

The defense, led by Pavich and all-coast linebacker Bob Pifferini, shored itself up and Flores got the offense rolling while Michigan still had its defensive giants on the field.

Right end sprints by Kermit Johnson of 16 and 18 yards and a 25-yard pass to Mike Cochran reached the Michigan 18, but when Flores tried to beat a linebacker blitz with a soft lob to Terry Vernoy, Darden intervened and was last seen heading toward Pasadena.

Michigan's reserves rang up another one. Al (Cowboy) Walker galloped 22 yards to the five and Harry Banks scored from the three on a pitchout. Dana Coin's fifth conversion made it 38-0.

Flores then completed six of nine passes for 89 yards on a drive that ran out of time on the Michigan three.

The statistics — 216 net yards to Michigan's 284, 12 first downs to 15 — put UCLA in a far better light than the score, but it's the Bruins' first 0-3 start since 1943.

Rodgers said, "Considering the ineptness of our offense, our defense played pretty good."

Pifferini made eight tackles and an assist, sacked Casey for a 10-yard loss and intercepted a pass that was nullified by a teammate's interference.

Pavich, who also made eight tackles, called Pifferini "the best linebacker in the country.

"But the rest of us just fouled up too much. That first quarter was disastrous — just disastrous. Our ends are young, sure, but I fouled up a lot, too. Instead of making tackles at the line of scrimmage, I was making 'em four or five yards downfield."

Rodgers, backed into a small boiler room off the primitive dressing quarters, said, "I've never been dominated by a team like that. On this day, Michigan looked better than Texas . . . but the way we started was the ball game. I hate getting beat like that."

UCLA defensive tackle Ed Galigher dislocated a shoulder and will be lost for three weeks. Linebacker Greg Snyder, the defensive captain, stayed home with recurring headaches.

Rodgers copped no alibis on any score — the injuries, the weather or the unfamiliar Tartan rug.

"I thought it was nice," he said. "The only thing that wasn't nice was Michigan. They were nasty and tough."

'We're not 38 points better'

Bo good host to UCLA

By DAVID WEIR
Special Correspondent

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan coach Bo Schembechler was a good host to UCLA Saturday after watching his unbeaten Wolverines shellac the Bruins, 38-0.

"UCLA is a good, tough team; make no doubt about it," Schembechler said in the locker room after the game. "We beat 'em good, but I don't think we're 38 points better than they are."

Schembechler could afford to be nice following Michigan's third successive victory of the season, and its 17th win in it's last 18 regular season games.

The Wolverines, boasting a full hose of talented runners in the backfield, and a defense which held the Bruins to only 39 yards rushing, were never threatened in the game.

Before the first quarter ended it was 17-0, and the game, for all intents and purppses, was over.

But even wit a 24-point lead at halftime, Schembechler left his first string teams in the game.

"We stayed conservative in third period," Schembechler explained. "I'm not taking any chances against a team like UCLA. They can score too well."

But UCLA, despite a good passing performance by junior quarterback Mike Flores, was unable to move against the aggressive Michigan defense.

When the Bruins finally did get a drive going midway through the fourth quarter, Wolverine safety Tom Darden picked off a Flores pass on his own eight-yard line and fancy-stepped his way 92 yards for a touchdown.

Darden said after the game that he was expecting the pass. "We knew they would pass on that play. I was supposed to pick up the man who came out of the backfield, but no one came so I was hanging free.

"Someone hit Flores and he just lobbed it out there. I got it and ran. By the time I got to that end zone, I was dead tired."

Michigan made its own breaks all afternoon, turning an interception into a score and a fumble into a field goal in the early part of the game.

"We took advantage of the breaks early and put points on the board . . . that was the difference in this game," Schembechler said.

The Bruins' defense tightened up considerably in the second half. Wolverine tailback Billy Taylor was stopped for losses three of the six times he carried the ball for a net gain of only two yards. This was after he had racked up 89 yards in the first two quarters of play.

"They, (the Bruins) were keying in the power sweep in the second half," Taylor said. "Whenever we broke into the sweep, we could see them taking off. They really moved in on us."

Schembechler had plenty of praise for his defensive corps after the game. "They can play the pass, the run, and they can blitz. Their goal is to hold a team to one touchdown or less. That's how we win games."

But the Wolverine coach wouldn't be drawn into a comparison of his team with the other national powers. "I couldn't care less about the ratings," he said. "We'll wait until the season is over, and then see where we're ranked.

If Saturday's game was any indication, it just might be No. 1.

Auburn drive topples Tenn.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pat Sullivan, shackled by a stubborn Tennessee defense most of the game, drove Auburn 86 yards in the final six minutes Saturday as the fourth-ranked Tigers defeated ninth-ranked Tennessee 10-9 in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Sullivan hit on four consecutive passes in the drive, covering 75 yards to set up Harry Unger's 5-yard touchdown run with 2:44 left in the game.

Gardner Jett, who kicked a 28-yard field goal in the second period, than addetd the game-winning extra point.

The defeat was Tennessee's first at home in 24 games.

Tennessee's defense, sparked by cornerback Conrad Graham, had given Sullivan a horrendous afternoon until the stocky quarterback got the Tigers rolling at the end.

The Vols had driven to the Auburn 14 where the Tigers recovered a fumble and started their game-winning drive. Sullivan completed three passes of 23, 23 and 11 yards to Dick Scomalv and 19 to Terry Beasley in the drive.

Alabama flattens Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Musso slammed for four touchdowns Saturday as Alabama pulverized Florida 38-0 to elevate Paul (Bear) Bryant to the fifth winningest coach in history.

The eighth-ranked Tide converted two interceptions and a Florida fumble into three quick Musso scores and a sell out crowd of 61,832 sat stunned as Alabama rolled up a 24-0 half time cushion.

Alabama is 3-0 and the Gators 0-3, Florida's worst start since its 1946 team stumbled to a 0-9 record.

Bryant's 27-year coaching record is 202-66-16. He has passed Eddie Anderson, who won 201 at Holy Cross and Iowa.

Ole Miss runs wild

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)— Sophomore Kenny Lyons and senior Gardland Reed combined for more than 300 yards Saturday as they led Mississippi to a 34-20 southeastern Conference football victory over Kentucky.

Lyons, the blond quarterback from Biloxi, Miss., passed for 147 yards and three touchdowns and added 50 yards on the ground while Reed carried 27 times for 117 yards.

49ERS WIN, 15-14

away a Pacific drive at the 49er 19 that would have broken the contest open.

The Tiger bid was stopped when Terry Conley batted a Brown pass out of the hands of a Pacific receiver and Jimmy Johnson made a tumbling interception on the LB 19.

The 49ers took the ball and drove to the Pacific 21 before the Tigers stiffened, and Jim Fassel's fourth-down pass was incomplete.

The 49ers were able to set up shop on the Pacific 25 when Chuck Davidian returned the fourth-down punt 10 yards and 15 more were added on a personal foul.

Cal State lost 10 yards on the first play, but on 3-and-20 Metcalf turned in a brilliant effort to gain 21 yards on a screen pass from Fassel.

Fassel then threw 11 yards to Davidian and Metcalf ran three yards for his fourth CSLB touchdown.

Cal State's heroes were many, including the tiny Johnson, and an improving 49er secondary on defense and Metcalf and Davidian on offense.

Metcalf rushed 28 times for 126 yards and two scores, caught 6 passes for 62 yards, punted nine time for a 34.1 average and returned a kickoff 17 yards.

Pacific entered Saturday night's game without an offensive touchdown in 120 minutes of action. The Tigers took care of that streak quickly.

The Tigers, who had not lost to the 49ers since 1966, took the opening kickoff and methodically diced the 49er defense for 70 yards in 12 plays, scoring on the pass from Brown to Radovich.

Pacific didn't run, as promised, chosing instead to test the green CSLB secondary. Brown, who was to throw 36 passes in the game, hit five of seven tosses on the march to account for 52 of the yards.

Tre 49ers didn't get rolling until late in the first quarter, but pulled within one, 7-6, 36 seconds into the second period when Terry Metcalf capped a 91-yard, 14-play drive with a five-yard run.

The stylish Metcalf, who did it all for the 49ers Saturday night, set up his own score with a tackle-breaking 23-ard run to the Tiger four.

Terry Logue's conversion attempt was ruled wide and the 49ers, as they had been in every minute of game action this season, were still behind.

It looked as though that would be the halftime story until Brown, trying for another Tiger score, tried to pass with 15 seconds remaining in the quarter.

Ed Washington stepped inside the intended receiver, picked off the ball and returned it 41 yards. With no time remaining as he made the kick, Logue knuckle-balled a successful field goal attempt from the 34 and the 49ers had a 9-7 halftime edge.

Davidian also caught 6 passes for 71 yards and greatly bolstered CSLB's kick returning by returning 8 Pacific punts 108 yards. Davidian, who suffered a cut over the left eye early in the contest, lost his fourth score of the season when he had the last 26 yards of a 70-yard punt return nullified by a clipping penalty.

Georgia spurts past Clemson

CLEMSON, SC. (AP) — Powerful Georgia, its offense sputtering early in the game, came to life in the second half Saturday and buried Clemson 28-0.

The Bulldogs, the nation's 14th ranked college football team, managed only three first downs in the first half and got their only score when sophomore Dan Golden intercepted a pass and raced 71 yards.

20-point underdogs

Army sidesteps Ga. Tech

ATLANTA (UPI) — Sophomore Jim Barclay kicked his third field goal of the game from 40 yards out with 4:06 left to play Saturday to give aroused Army a stunning 16-13 victory over a Georgia Tech team that had been favored to win by 20 points.

The Cadets who won only one game last season and had suffered a lop-sided loss to Stanford in last week's opener, jumped off to a 13-0 first period led on two Barclay field goals and a 4-yard touchdown run by Ray Ritacco.

They had to come back in the closing minutes after the Yellow Jackets tied the score at 13-all on a 21-yard field goal by Cam Bonifay 45 seconds after the final period began.

There was 7:02 left on the clock when Army, aided by two 15-yard penalties, moved in for Barclay's winning field goal.

Georgia Tech had two opportunities to pull out the game, but fell a yard short of a first down at the Army 34 the first time, and then the next time Mercer Ferguson intercepted a McAshan pass in the Army end zone with only three seconds left to play.

Tulsa hogties Arkansas

Combined news services

FAYETTEVILE, Ark. — Lightly-regarded Tulsa struck for three fourth quarter touchdowns Saturday on the passing of quarterback Todd Starks to stagger nationally-ranked Arkansas, 21-20.

The Razorbacks, a four touchdown favorite, led 20-8 in the first half and appeared to have the situation well in hand until Starks got a hot hand.

Tulsa had momentum on its side after he tossed 23-yard scoring pass to Dave Stewart. Two minutes later he hit Drew Pearson for nine yards and another score. Starks completed 24 of 43 passes for 247 yards,all but 72 yards in the second half.

Tulsa drove 87 yards for its winning touchdown. Starks completed three important passes in the drive, two of them to Pearson for a total of 48 yards. Starks 22 yard floater to tight end Jim Butler salvaged a third and 24 situation and Frey got the first down with a yard to spare at the Arkansas six.

After a major penalty, Starks, a skinny junior from Palo Alto, Calif., lobbed the ball to Frey on a screen pass. Frey followed his blockers in to end zone with 3:46 left in the end znne with 3:46 left in the game and Sam Henry kicked the deciding point.

The victory was Tulsa's first over Arkansas since 1967.

Sub Wigginton guides Texas past Tech, 28-0

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Sparkplug quarterback Donnie Wigginton ran for two touchdowns and an alert defense set up two others with interceptions Saturday as third-ranked Texas shut out Texas Tech 28-0 in the opening Southwest Conference game of the year.

Wiggington, a 5-8 senior subbing for the injured Eddie Phillips, worked the Longhorn triple option for touchdown runs of 7 and 6 yards.

Sophomore halfback Don Burrisk and senior fullback Bobby Callison each scored on five-yard runs for the defending conference champions in a game played before a crowd of 76,638.

Tech failed to muster any offensive punch until Texas liberally salted its defense with substitutes in the fourth period, and even then the Longhorns gave ground grudgingly.

All four Texas scores followed miscues by the Red Raiders.

Wiggington took the Horns 48 yards for the first score after a short Tech punt; Greg Dahlberg recovered a wild Raider pitchout at the Tech eight on the first play of the second half and key interceptions by Malcolm Minnick and Alan Lowry set up the final two Horn touchdowns.

This came after Tech coach Jim Carlen called on sophomore passer Jimmy Carmichael to try to arouse the sluggish Tech offense.

Texas' Ronnie Workman intercepted a Tech pass in his own end zone with less than a minute to go to kill Tech's most serious threat.

The game was Texas' 21st consecutive Southwest Conference win.

Phillips, injured in last week's victory over UCLA, did not play at all Saturday.

TROY BLITZES ILLINI—

fumbling or having passes hang up for interceptions, they were running into each other like Keystone Kops.

USC coach John McKay, whose unhappiness with the Trojan offense has been aired publicly several times, must have been ready to run and hide several times Saturday night.

Just when the Trojans would get rolling, the ball would pop free. Tailback Lou Harris lost three bobbles to the Illini. In all, there were seven Trojan fumbles, and five went to their opponents.

USC encountered little trouble making yards, but lacked a finishing punch. The Trojans gained 245 yards rushing and 257 passing for 502 total. Illinois had 160 rushing and 86 passing.

The Trojans rammed 83 yards in 17 plays the first time they got the ball, Sam Cunningham punching over for a touchdown from the one. But the 7-0 lead Mike Rae's kick gave them had to stand up until shortly before the end of the first half.

The scoring opportunity arose from a fumble recovery by Trojan cornerback Skip Thomas at the Illinois 26. On the first USC offensive play, Jones fired a looping pass that 6-4 Charles Young gathered in with a leap at the Illini 5. Defender Ken Panique fell down, and Young trotted into the end zone.

It was a play that was similar to the R.C. Owens alley-oop receptions for the San Francisco 49ers 15 years ago.

It worked again for the Trojans in the final period when Rae, who had replaced Jones at quarterback, was trapped while trying to pass and hurried a desperate shot toward Young. Again the junior tight end from Fresno leaped high to grab the ball, and this time defender Tom Baumgart fell down, permitting Young to carry the ball in from nine yards out.

USC's final touchdown resulted from a pass interception by substitute linebacker John Papadakis, who made the theft on the Illinois 25 and returned it 16 to the 9.

On USC's first play, tailback Charles Hinton took a pitchout and cut around left end for the touchdown.

The Trojans put a hard rush on Illinois quarterback Mike Wells, forcing him into three interceptions, two by sophomore safety Artimus Parker. Wells' successor, Tom McCartney, threw the last interception.

McKay's "fears" of a scoreless tie weren't justified, but he has reason to be uneasy about this edition of the Trojans. Unless it gets straightened out, the season could be as long as 1970.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Quarterback Bruce Gadd's 48-yard touchdown pass to tight end Gary Butler and the steady running of Speedy Stable Vincent sparked aroused Rice to a 14-11 upset over Tulane Saturday night.

Gadd's bomb came on the seventh play of the second half to give Rice a 7-0 lead, Vincent, who gained 159 carries on 28 carries, scored the winning touchdown on a 2-yard run with 4:32 remaining in the third quarter.

Indiana blanked

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — Godfrey White returned the second half kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown Saturday night and Baylor's defense shut down power runner Ken St. Pierre to bring the Bears' a 10-0 victory over Indiana.

It was only the third victory for Baylor since coach Bill Beall came to Waco from Louisiana State two seasons ago.

In what was chiefly a lackluster offensive performance by both clubs, the only score other than White's touchdown dash was a 25-yard field goal by Mike Conradt.

GAME OF THE WEEK

Oakland 23, San Diego 20

San Diego has become one of the hottest football towns in America.

For the first time, Chargers have sold more than 30,000 season tickets. Last week, 54,000. 2,000 over capacity, watched San Diego upset Kansas City, 21-14. Today's game was sellout less than 48 hours later.

Chargers will have the crowd noise — and under Sid Gillman they're revitalized — but Oakland has little too much muscle.

Last year Oakland won 20-17, and teams ties 27-27. San Diego leads series, 11-10-1.

Falcons eye maiden win over Rams

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Predicting a winning football season for Atlanta is like saying the war in Vietnam will end. It's bound to happen sometime.

With the momentum of their opening day upset against San Francisco, the Falcons are hoping to ride it to their first win in 10 shots against the Rams today at the Coliseum.

Sixty thousand fans, most of whom still are in a state of shock over the Rams' 24-20 loss to the lowly New Orleans Saints, are expected for the 1:05 p.m. kickoff.

Larson's Line:
Rams 17, Falcons 14

A year ago, coach Norm Van Brocklin's Falcons watched the Rams rally in the final minute for a 10-10 tie which, at the time, could be considered a moral triumph for the Peach Street gang.

Atlanta's 20-17 win over the 49ers was no accident or fluke. The Falcons intercepted John Brodie 4 times and recovered 3 fumbles. Atlanta cornerback Tom Hayes was expected to be "picked on" but the rookie from San Diego State balked at that role — grabbing not only Brodie's last-minute fumble but 2 of his passes.

A pair of rookie wide receivers, Ken Burrow and Wes Chesson, were prominent in the action. Burrow caught 3 Bob Berry passes for 67 yards, including 2 for TDs and Chesson caught 4 passes.

At first glance, the '71 schedule looked favorable for the first 3 games for the Rams. Somehow, things got goofed up, mainly because of a guy named Archie Manning and the Saints sent the Rams spinning. That means Atlanta and New Orleans are perched on top of the NFL West and the Rams and 49ers are resting on rock bottom. Ouch.

The fiery Dutchman has similar plans today for his Falcons although the oddsmakers still favor the Rams by 3 points in what looms as a defensive struggle.

Roman Gabriel admittedly had an off day against the Saints and Tommy Prothro said, "Gabe was pressing but I'm confident he'll work things out. I don't think his sore ribs are hurting him as much this week. However, if Gabriel's Guards don't provide airtight protection, his ribs won't be the only thing hurtin'.

The Falcons' pass rush features Claude Humphrey and John Zook, a 1969 Ram draftee from Kansas who never got a glance from George Allen's coaching staff that year. Atlanta also has the redoubtable Tommy Nobis at middle backer and two excellent aides, Don Hansen and Greg Brezina.

The main bruises acquired by the Rams in New Orleans were to their pride. Les Josephson will be back at his halfback post, pairing with Willie Ellison.

PRO-O-RAMA: Ram officials figure last Sunday's poor showing against the Saints cost them 10,000 at the box office today. The National League pennant race also will keep many patrons glued to their TV sets.

If the Rams are smart, they'll ask P.A. announcer John Ramsey to introduce the defensive unit. It would quiet the boo birds who are ready to hurl a verbal assault at Gabriel the moment he rushes onto the field.

Atlanta finished 4-8-2 last season. The Falcons' previous best record was a 6-8 third-place finish in 1969. Rookie Joe Profit, the No. 1 pick and a sprinter from Northeast Louisiana, has given the Falcons a new dimension in their ground game. Quarterback Bob Berry uses his ground power to help the air game. His play-action passes are so cleverly faked that the linemen and linebackers frequently lose a step while trying to decide to pass or run. Cornerback Tom Hayes played basketball at Riverside JC before heading for San Diego St. His younger brother, Billie, was cut by the Rams this summer.

Bill Nelsen and Greg Wojcik apeing will share the defensive right tackle position today. Wojcik, 6-6 and 268, attended USC. But he never played there, or in any other four-year college. Greg suffered a punctured lung with the Trojans and quit the game. The Rams' head scout, Norm Pollom, was a USC assistant coach at the time. After he connected with the Rams, Pollom told Wojcik, "Come around when you get to feeling better and we'll give you a try." Wojcik dropped out of sight for several years. However, after a season with the Richmond Saints of the Atlantic Coast League, Greg reminded Pollom of his offer. It has worked out fine for both.

Sooners rout Pitt, 55-29

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Jack Mildren and Joe Wylie scored three touchdowns each and Greg Pruitt rushed for 118 yards Saturday as 11th ranked Oklahoma, behind a swift offense, walloped Pitt, 55-29.

The Sooners spotted Pitt an early field goal before Wylie's 85-yard kickoff return started a string of seven successive touchdowns for their first-string offense.

Wylie also scored on runs of 14 and 19 yards in the second quarter while quarterback Mildren, directing the Wishbone-T attack flawlessly, scored on runs of 2, 4 and 16 yards.

Pruitt, who carried the ball only nine times, scored on a 32-yard run and Tim Welch scored on a 16-yard run as Oklahoma gained 425 yards on the ground.

Pitt never was in the game after Eric Knisley climaxed the first drive of the day with a 32-yard field goal.

Navy sunk, scuttled

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Speedster Ed Rideout, a converted quarterback, sprinted for two first-period touchdowns, one on a 59-yard punt return, and Boston College went on to rout Navy 49-6 Saturday in the Eagles' 1971 home college football debut.

The BC defense set the pattern by stopping Navy cold on the first series. Rideout, a senior flanker, took the ensuing Navy punt and went on his long scoring jaunt with the game just 63 seconds old.

Crusaders stun Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Colin Clapton uncorked a 63-yard touchdown bomb on the first play of the final quarter Saturday and Holy Cross hung on to stun Harvard 21-16 in a college football opener for both teams.

The victory under new coach Ed Doherty was the first since 1968 for the Crusaders, who went 0-10-1 last year after canceling most of their 1969 season because of a hepatitis outbreak.

Dawson sparks Penn

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Ron Dawson, a junior halfback who left the team on his volition after three games last season, staged a personal comeback Saturday and scored two touchdowns as Pennsylvania opened its 95th football season with a 28-14 victory over previously undefeated Lehigh.

Griffith TKO'd by Monzon

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Carlos Monzon, cool and cautious for most of the fight, unleashed a savage flurry of punches in the 14th round to stop Emile Griffith and retain his world middleweight championship Saturday.

The end came at 2:46 of the round with Griffith crouched helplessly in his corner as a sellout crowd of 23,000 went wild in Luna Park.

Monzon was in control of the fight when the end came, marking his 6th successive bout without a loss and the second defense of the title he won by knocking out Nino Benvenuti in 1970.

Griffith, the 33-year-old New Yorker who was bidding to become a world champion for the sixth time, simply was outclassed by the younger, taller Argentine.

There was little doubt that Griffith was badly hurt when Mexican referee Ramon Berumen stopped the bout. Griffith was hunched over with his arms dangling at his sides and Monzon pounding away at will.

Rushing mark for Yale back

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Halfback Dick Jauron set a one-game Yale rushing record Saturday as the Elis swept by the University of Connecticut, 23-0.

Jauron, a junior from Swampscott, Mass., rushed for 186 yards on 26 carries including a 75-yard third period romp that clinched the opening day victry for Yale. The old record of 177 yards was set in 1948 by Levi Jackson against Brown.

BUD TUCKER

It's this way Mr. President

Mr. Richard M. Nixon
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

It was with deep concern that I read where your heart was broken because your town had blown its major league baseball team. It is always a sad state of affairs when a city loses a franchise, but when one is lost to a place like Texas, it is downright humiliating. Of course, Mr. President, it is not out of the question the shift of the Senators to Dallas-Fort Worth was partly your fault. I mean, as long as you were freezing things you might just as wetll have included ball clubs. After all, you froze my salary and now I am wondering what to do with all those frozen peanuts.

While your heart may be broken, Mr. President, we in California find our hearts gladdened by your statement that you will shift your allegiance and will henceforth be a supporter of the California Angels. We are further delighted to note that it is your intention to drive up from the beach to Anaheim next spring to throw out the first ball.

We fervently hope the press of your office does not prevent you from keeping the date. However, in the event you can't make it, Mr. President, we would just as soon you didn't send the vice president as a substitute. The last time a pitcher got wild and hit a couple of batsmen was up in San Francisco and we very nearly had a riot on our hands and you know how distasteful riots can be.

ALSO, MR. PRESIDENT, if you are coming to Anaheim, the management will appreciate as much advance notice as possible. You see, things may be changed a great deal since the last time you visited the stadium.

We are not in the least sure who will be working as executives with the Angels and therefore cannot say who will meet you at the front gate. Perhaps the general manager could wear a red carnation or maybe run next door to Disneyland and get a beanie with a propeller on top.

I know you had your own problems this summer, Mr. President, but the president of the Angels had endured sufficient grief to send him up a wall.

Mr. President, you are aware that it is sometimes awkward when a politician does not choose to run. The Angels had an outfielder who did not choose to run from home plate to first base.

The guy was fired by the team and this touched off all sorts of demonstrations and protests and hearings and so on and so forth. One group even went so far as to suggest there were racial overtones to the issue. There was a time when the president of the American League had only one race to worry about.

Then, too, the Angels had an outfielder decide he wished to retire from the game and called a press conference at 5 a.m. Even Martha Mitchell has more consideration for the press than that. Happily, however, the writers covering the Angels had not yet gone to bed.

I AM SORRY to have burdened you with details of the Angels' hardships, Mr. President, but I wanted you to know why you may not recognize any of the faces when you come to Anaheim Stadium to throw out the first ball next spring.

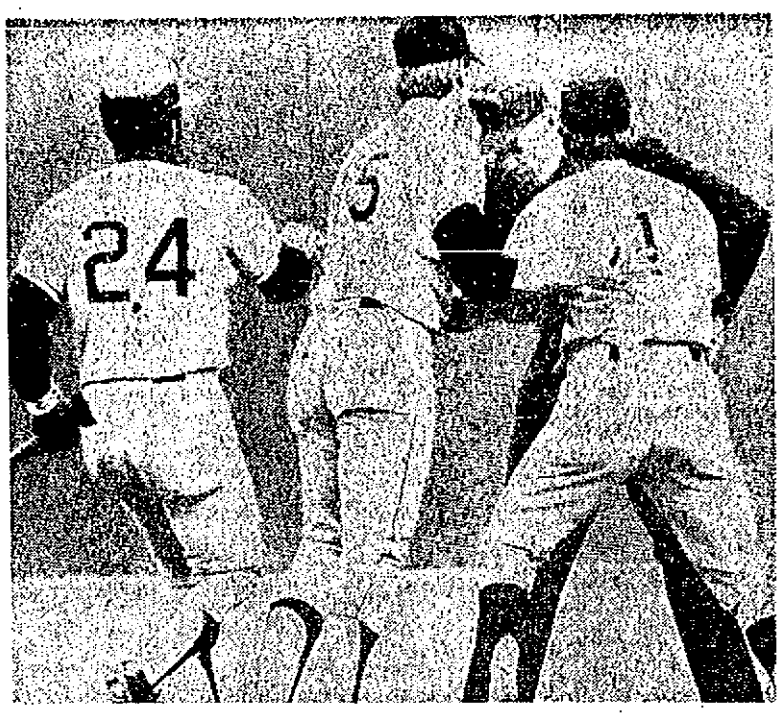

By the way, I am sure you will be writing Lyndon Johnson to congratulate him on the Texas franchise. You might include a word or two about Bob Short, the owner of the Senators.

I know, Mr. Johnson has been around the block and most Texans sit pretty tall in the saddle but they may not have experienced anyone quite like Bob Short. It would be a shame to see all those Texans walking around without any trousers under the chaparajos.

Mr. President, I hope you soon get over the loss of the Senators. Remember, Washington still has the Redskins. Don't pay any attention to the smart guys who will change the saying about your town to read, "First in war, first in peace, and last in the National Conference."

See you next spring.

Bud Tucker

GIANTS LET OFF STEAM

San Francisco's Ken Henderson (15), coach John McNamara (1) and ump John Kibler are locked in bitter discussion over ruling in eighth inning of Saturday's game at Cincinnati. Kibler ruled Henderson had touched and rounded second after advancing on Tito Fuentes' fly, but returned to first without retracing his steps, and called him out. Ump in chief Augie Donatelli overruled Kibler and Henderson went back to first as Reds won 6-5. Willie Mays rushed up at last moment with bat in hand.

Alomar sets steal record, Angels win

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

The Angels were quick Saturday night and they lefe the Chicago White Sox for dead.

Scoring three times in the first inning, an inning keyed by a double steal by Sandy Alomar and Ken Berry, the Angels held off the Sox, 3-2, and negated a brilliant pitching performance by Tommy John.

After the first-inning flurry when the first five Angel batsmen reached base safely, John accomplished an astonishing turn-about and retired 24 of the last 25 hitters in a vain, if courageous effort.

Clyde Wright went 5.2 innings to even his record at 16-16 and then sat back and watched Lloyd Allen collect his 14th save.

Allen entered the game in the sixth with two on and two out and promptly set about the task of retiring the next 10 Sox in succession and it was all over.

Alomar's daring theft of third base was his 38th of the year and it was good enough to create an Angel club record, topping by one Jose Cardenal's total of 37 set in 1965.

Alomar and Berry opened with base hits and after the double steal, Sandy scored as Rich McKinney boated Jim Fregosi's grounder. Ken McMullen singled home Berry and Fregosi scored on Lee Richard's throwing error.

Walt Williams hit a two-run homer to account for Chicago's output in the third.

ANGEL ANGLES: The curtain comes down on another season at the Big A today with Rudy May, 10-12, pitching the home finale against Wilbur Wood, 21-13, who threw a five-hit shutout at the Anaheims last Thursday . . . As an added attraction today, speedster Mickey Rivers will attempt to better Evar Swanson's base-circling record of 13.3 seconds . . . Swanson set the mark in 1929 and no one has challenged it since George Case failed in 1943 . . . Four-timers will be employed to chart Rivers' course . . . Club president Bob Reynolds will present the Owners Trophy today to the most valuable Angel as determined by balloting amongst the players themselves.

runs in the seventh inning when Dave Kingman doubled to left center for his third two-base hit of the game, and scored when Dick Dietz singled to left. Then pinch-hitter Willie McCovey lashed a double to score another run.

In the Giant's half of the eighth, a hassle developed when Tito Fuentes flied to Foster with one out and Ken Henderson on first.

Foster threw to second base and second base umpire John Kibler ruled a double play because he said Henerson had rounded second base on the play and failed to tag it while returning to first. But the umpire crew conferred and ruled that Henderson had touched second and permitted him to stay on first. The Reds who had left the field, returned and reliver Ed Sprague fanned Willie Mays to end the inning.

DODGERS OUT BY 1

needed no such help from Weyer, Mathews, Harris or anyone else.

"The ball was fair and I saw it all the way," he said. "Sims was in foul territory but he reached over with the glove. It's where the ball makes contact that determines whether it's fair or foul."

"He made the right call," Sims said, understandably upholding the umpire's honor and, more to the point, his decision. "The ball hit my glove, then my chest protector and rolled into fair territory. The umpire called 'fair ball' right away. What they (the Braves) were claiming is that I pushed the ball fair. That's not true."

"It was a great call," said Alston, relaxing after the Dodgers' 26th one-run victory. "It's not where the catcher is standing, it's where he makes contact with the ball. Anyway, how can you see from the bench? I'll have to go with the umpire's word," he added with a trace of a grin.

The Braves had taken a 2-1 lead against winning pitcher Don Sutton (16-12) in the third with singles by Sonny Jackson, Millan and Garr, as well as a throwing error by leftfielder Manny Mota.

Mota made up for that with a run-scoring triple in the fourth but Darrell Evans homered in the bottom of the fourth for a 3-1 lead.

In the sixth Rich Allen doubled with one out, and Willie Crawford drove him home with a single. Mota got his second hit of the game, a single, and then Sims homered over the right-centerfield fence.

"I thought it might be caught," said the Duke. "If it was Dodger Stadium I know it would have been caught. Heck, he (Atlanta's starter Ron Reed) just made a mistake and hit my bat.

"Now, if you'll excuse me," added the well-known bachelor, "I gotta get dressed and catch the bus. I can't afford a cab."

DODGER DOPE: Pitching today's game will be Claude Osteen (13-11) for the Dodgers, George Stone (6-7) for the Braves. . . . If was Stone who struck Manny Mota on the left elbow last week and the two hits Saturday were the first for Mota since then . . . Manager Walter Alston said Mota's arm still was hurting and he wasn't certain if he could play today against the Braves' lefthander. . . .

Until the Braves scored in the third, the Dodgers had a string of 30 consecutive scoreless innings against Atlanta, stemming from three consecutive shutouts. . . .

Willie Davis' first-inning single was his 197th hit of the season, more than Wes Parker hit last season when he led the club with 196. It's also the most since Tommy Davis' 230 hits in 1962 when he led the National League in batting. . . .

Rich Allen has an eight-game batting streak (11-for-29) and is now hitting .299. . . . Allen is just four walks short of matching Jim Gilliam, Los Angeles record of 95 bases-on-balls in 1959 and again in 1960. . . .

The Dodgers are now 3-5 in Atlanta Stadium and can break even with the Braves over-all with a win today. They're 8-9 with Atlanta at the moment.

'Metcalf does things Burns never did,' praises UOP

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Homer Smith could only shake his head in dismay.

Another week, another loss.

"We're going to be alright," he kept repeating. "We'll win some ball games."

It was difficult to determine whether the Pacific head coach was trying to convince himself or visitors in the Tigers' dressing quarters.

Saturday night, the defeat came at the hands of Cal State Long Beach (15-14. The former Princeton all-America was quick to credit his conqueror as he had after losses to Miami of Ohio (17-10 and Texas-El Paso (21-3 the previous weekends.

"Long Beach gives its offense a real chance because it can sustain drives, said Smith enviously. "We weren't surprised; they kept forcing it until they finally scored."

When asked what he thought of Terry Metcalf, the 49ers' one-man offense, the head coach rolled his eyes upward in disbelief.

"He's really fantastic . . . oh . . . wow . . . is he fantastic.

"We heard Kirby (Jim might be back, but he'll really have a fight on his hands to get back into the starting lineup," added Smith, wishing he had such problems.

"When informed Metcalf had gained 126 yards on 28 carries in his Veterans Stadium debut, Smith recalled graduated 49er Leon Burns. "You know, we had much more success against Leon. Metcalf does things Leon never did."

Smith also wished he had Cal State's problem at quarterback.

"That two-quarterback approach ain't bad. Nebraska won a national championship with it last year.

"It's like trying to fight a guy with two guns. Fassel (Jim) is as tough to catch as Drake (Randy)."

Was there a turning point in the contest?

"We don't believe in turning points. But if it narrowed down to one play, I'd have to go with the two interceptions Carlos (Brown) threw."

The first came in the closing seconds of the first half with Pacific holding a 7-6 lead. Ed Washington picked off a bomb by the 6-3, 210-pound sophomore, returned it to the Tiger 17 and Terry Logue gave Long Beach a 9-7 edge at intermission with a 34-yard field goal.

"The whole object of that play was not to have it intercepted," grimaced Smith. "It just couldn't happen."

Questioned about Pacific's offense game plan, Homer replied: "You really want to know it? We were trying to run all we could because of our receiver situation."

Smith hesitated, perhaps not wanting to make excuses for Pacific's play. "We're real skinny on receivers. Our slotback (Joe Radovich) wasn't even on offense until Wednesday.

"That threw Carlos off balance, constantly having to explain plays," Smith revealed. "We ran the simplest pass patterns we have and we never dropped back either."

With over half the first 22 men new to the system, Smith only hoped his Tigers could "get something going so we could feel some momentum. We never did get control of something."

'We're establishing discipline at Illinois'

'USC chewed us up'--Blackman

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

The University of Illinois probably won't win many football games this season but coach Bob Blackman in his first season at the Big 10 school intends to install discipline if nothing else.

"USC chewed us up in most areas," said the former Long Beach Poly High School star after the Trojans' 28-0 victory Saturday night, "but I thought our deep defense was especially bad.

"One reason was that our fastest and best defensive player, Willie Osley, didn't make the trip. We got burned at his position by the Trojan passes.

"Osley was left behind because he had to be disciplined. We're establishing a new program and discipline is one of the first things that must be settled."

Blackman wasn't happy with the defeat but neither was he the soul of despair.

"I think I saw a few bright spots," he smiled. "At least the boys really fought their hearts out. But there was no question it was a mismatch.

"If a boxing promoter had signed for a mismatch like this, he'd have his license taken away.

"USC was bigger, more talented, faster — everything.

"We just made so many little mistakes. We even had plays being called from the wrong formations. That was very bad. When I sent in some third-down plays, I at least expected them to be run from the proper formation.

"I don't enjoy a start like this — three games without even scoring a touchdown. But I knew it'd take awhile to get things going. We had a lot of problems with losing players this fall. Two days before our first game with Michigan State we lost four key men through ineligibility.

"For one thing, we don't have the great backs we need so desperately. A big 10 interpretation of the JC transfer rule cost us two fine players this spring. Nebraska didn't have this rule in their league regulations so both boys went there and were available for spring practice."

Even though the Trojans stumbled all evening, Blackman had high praise for his old school.

"USC has so much quickness, it's frightening," remarked Blackman. "There's no question but that the Trojans have talent all over. I think John McKays boys have much potential. We held them to three touchdowns but I had the feeling they were 10 times better.

"The Trojans have more talent than Michigan State but USC made more mistakes than our second opponent, North Carolina. Carolina was one of the most disciplined teams I've ever seen.

"As for us, well I did think our running game was its best yet but I'm still not happy with it. We made so many mistakes, it was terrible.

"We were engulfed with penalties before te game was more than a few minutes old. Three penalites in five or six plays is ridiculous."

Defensive end Glenn Collier summed up most of his teammates' feelings when he remarkd that "USC hits like a bunch of mules. When that (Sam Cunningham piled up three of us on one block, it was like a sledgehammer had landed. I should know. I was at the bottom of that pillup."

Syracuse nipped, 12-6

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — Northwestern built a 12-0 halftime lead and then staved off error-plagued Syracuse 12-6 for the Wildcats first victory of the football season Saturday.

Trounceed the past two weeks by Michigan and Notre Dame, Northwestern exploited costly Syracuse fumbles and penalties to hand the Orange its first defeat after last week's 20-20 tie with another Big Ten club, Wisconsin.

Bill Planisek booted two field goals of 28 and 22 yards in the first quarter and Northwestern moved ahead 12-0 midway in the second quarter with the only Wildcat touchdown.

Jones cracks O.J.'s record

Statistically, Jim Jones is better than O. J. Simpson.

The senior quarterback from Harrisburg, Pa., surpassed Simpson's career total offense mark at 7:59 p.m. Saturday, but two hours later in the locker rooms of the Coliseum he didn't want to talk about it.

"People have been saying I was close to O.J.'s record and needed only 54 yards or something," said Jones softly, "but honestly, I wasn't even thinking about it."

Jones had 234 yards passing and rushing Saturday night to boost his career total to 3,652. Simpson had 3,471 in his two-year stay at Troy.

"I felt comfortable out there tonight," admitted Jones, "but I think I've been passing fairly well all year. Our offense in the first two games didn't dictate much passing.

"The record was secondary in my mind. I guess it'll be nice to have later."

Trojan coach John McKay said Jones "had an exceptional game."

"I thought he was sharp all night, and so was Mike Rae," he said. "We had some dropped, too."

As for the seven fumbles, five of which the Trojans lost to the Illini, McKay cracked: "All I can do about fumbles is to tell the guys not to fumble. What do they do? They go right out and fumble on the second play of the second half. We were going for the NCAA record, which we originally held, for turnovers."

When asked whether he had heard about Oklahoma's 55-29 win over Pittsburgh, McKay replied:

"I think we're better than Pittsburgh. Remember, I didn't say we are better than Pittsburgh — I said I think we are."

The Trojan coach tabbed tight end Charles Young, who had two touchdown pass receptions, for notable improvement.

"Young played better than he had in the first two games," noted McKay. "He ran his patterns very well, also blocked well and he had a great advantage at 6-4 when a 5-8 guy was defending against him."

Although the USC defense extended its string of shutout time to 159 minutes and 54 seconds, McKay wasn't impressed.

"They didn't inspire me at all," he observed.

But linebacker Willie Hall hailed the achievement.

"We have a string going," he said. "That's a lot of quarters. Yes, we're conscious of it. People said our defense wasn't that good."

He grinned. "We want to prove we are."

Wake Forest hit by Miami barrage

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Quarterback John Hornibrook hit lanky Witt Beckman with a 15-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter Saturday night to break Miami loose for a 29-10 victory over Wake Forest.

Hornibrook's scoring toss snapped a 10-10 deadlock and rangy Chuck Foreman, Miami's offensive workhorse, quickly added two more touchdowns to ice the Hurricane win.

Wake Forest's lone touchdown came on a four-yard touchdown run by quarterback Larry Russell in the second quarter.

Substitute kicker Chuck Ramsey, in his first varsity appearance, had put the Deacons on the scoreboard minutes earlier with a 49-yard field goal that set a school record.

Spike and Elmer ready for ducks

Spike and Elmer are going to Utah this week to get ready for the Oct. 2 opening of the migratory waterfowl season in that state. You are wondering no doubt who is Spike and who is Elmer. Well, right now at least Spike is 85 pounds of strong Black Labrador; the other is Elmer Decker, Spike's owner and recently retired as president of the Martin-Decker Corporation, once situated in Long Beach, then later at an enormous plant in Santa Ana.

When Elmer, a member of the Southern California Tuna Club, a past chairman of Ducks Unlimited and a very strong DU supporter through the years, retired "officially," the company had a party for him and it seemed as though it should have been held on the Orange County Fairgrounds; it was large enough.

Elmer got many gifts. Among those was a Labrador, a present from his daughter. While speaker after speaker extrolled the many good deeds of Elmer Decker, Spike simply yawned and finally went to sleep; all that yakking wasn't his dip in a pond.

Few persons at that "Elmer Decker Day" knew just what a problem Spike presented to his new owner. It's this way: Elmer, a widower, lives in an apartment on the eastern section of Ocean Boulevard here, and dogs are not allowed there.

Elmer was quite proud of Spike, but he couldn't move so Spike was sent to a training kennel, where he learned the fundamentals of "fetching" and "heeling." There was no actual hunting.

ELMER GOT PERMISSION to build a small runway and home for Spike on a vacant lot next to Elmer's apartment house, where he now is quartered, but it took a bit of doing to get him there and settled in his own "apartment."

When Elmer went to get him in his station wagon, he built a temporary cage into the back of the station wagon, where Spike was supposed to ride from the trainer's place to Long Beach. Even with a carpet in the cage, Spike wasn't too happy about it, so he got out and flopped into Elmer's lap. Spike figured that a bit of nuzzling and a kiss or two might help.

Elmer, however, had been warned that he would have to be firm with Spike if the Lab was to become a good hunting dog, so he gently eased him back into his "prison." Spike didn't stay there long. In moments he was back in Elmer's lap.

It was then that Elmer had to make a quick decision: Either have a hunting dog or a household pet and a lap dog. So he whacked Spike with the leash and Spike scurried back to his pen.

When Spike was placed in his own "apartment," he whined and barked and howled. Elmer was ready for that one. He merely picked up the garden hose and showered Spike with cold water. Spike likes water all right, but he doesn't care for it in that manner, so he stopped barking, whining and howling on the very first nihgt.

SPIKE HAS LEARNED WELL INDEED. Elmer has him running ad practicing on the beach. Spike doesn't understand at his young age why he gets tossed around by breakers while recovering objects that Elmer tosses into the water. Spike also can't understand why that ocean water tastes so badly.

Well, Spike will get his chance to sample fresh water and retrieve birds next weekend when Elmer takes him on his first trip to the Bear River Valley country of Utah, where Elmer is a member of a private club.

That brings up the subject of the waterfowl-hunting season in California, which doesn't start until Oct. 9 on the first split for Southern California and most of the state. In checking with sporting goods stores Saturday, I found that most of the dealers now have the single-sheet regulations for California's migratory bird season. They also have the forms to apply for hunts on state-controlled preserves.

Walt Reed, of Fisherman's Hardware, commented on the license situation this way:

"Hunters who haven't yet applied for 1971-72 licenses should remember that they must have their 1970 licenses to prove that they have shot in California in prior years; or they must show a Hunter Safety certificate of competence in the handling of firearms. There is one other alternative: The applicant must take an oath under penalty of perjury that he has held a prior California hunting license. The best way is to bring the old 1970-71 license if he still has it.

NEW PUBLICATIONS — Stackpole has scheduled two books for October release. One is "Introduction to Sailing," by Leeds Mitchell Jr.; the other "Introduction to Bait Fishing," by Ray Ovington. These two new books will join some others already on the market, such as "Introduction to Backpacking," "Introduction to Rock and Mountain Climbing," and "Introduction to Treasure Hunting."

Naturally, the best way to learn how to sail is to attend a public or private course and actually get into a boat, but "Introduction to Sailing" is one way to get started. It is for the absolute beginner, a skill-starting primer that takes nothing for granted and guides the neophyte from shore to horizon with step-by-step instructions and practice. This is no sailing bible, but it is most helpful to young and old.

As for the other book due to be published late next month, you may think that because you can put a worm on a hook that you know all about bait fishing. You don't and I don't, but Ray Ovington has made that type of fishing a part of his life.

Ray tells you in simple language how to get, keep, select from, attach, cast, retrieve and play all kinds of natural baits for bigger catches in lakes, streams, offshore, surf and jetty. Both books are well illustrated with drawings.

Hartman winner at Pocono

MT. POCONO, Pa. (UPI) — Butch Hartman of Zanesville, Ohio, led throughout 131 laps Saturday to win the rain delayed Pennsylvania 500 at Pocono International raceway and also the United States Auto Club Stock car point title.

Driving a 1969 Dodge Daytona, Hartman's average speed for the 200 laps was 116.760 mph. The victory was worth $10,000.

A. J. Foyt of Houston, driving a 1971 Plymouth, was 1½ seconds behind Hartman and came in second. He had led for 18 laps earlier in the race.

Reigning USAC points champion Roger McCluskey of Tucson, Ariz., needed only to place eighth or better to capture the title for the third straight year but he lost his brakes on the 190th lap and placed 19th.

In the final laps, Len Blankenship of Kekokuk, Iowa, dueled door-to-door with Hartman. However, he ran out of fuel on the 199th lap and placed fourth.

Driving rains last Sept. 19 forced a halt to the race on the 141st lap. At that time Hartman was leading and the race was continued Saturday where the drivers were at the time of the delay.

Robinson teefest washed out

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — A steady, heavy rain forced cancellation of play Saturday in the third round $100,000 Robinson Open golf tournament. A double round of 36 holes was scheduled for today.

Play had been suspended for more than an hour when tournament officials decided the Crawford Country Club course was unplayable and postponed the round.

Jim Colbert and rookie Dwight Nevil shared the lead after 36 holes at 135, seven under par.

About half the field had teed off but no one had completed play when the round was washed out.

Millie takes First-round Masters lead

Millie Stanley fired a 77 on her home course El Dorado Saturday, taking the first-round lead in the Women's Master tournament.

Miss Stanley, hampered by bad putting as was the rest of the field, leads Gwen Hibbs of Recreation and Betse Straub of Old Ranch, both with 84's.

Today's competition is at Recreation beginning at 10 a.m. The tournament concludes next weekend.

Judge logs speedy 1:59 sulky win

After three successive Hollywood Park victories, Judge has finally made believers out of Southern California harness fans.

Before a crowd of 19,000 Saturday night, Judge became the first three-time winner of the meeting with a speedy 1:59 triumph over Ocean Mouth in the featured $15,000 Huntington Park Pace and served notice he's definitely to be considered when the $100,000 American Pacing Classic rolls around on Nov. 12.

Judge, whose disposition has always been on the nasty side, has apparently taken to his new driver, Roger Hammer, for he rattled off his second consecutive 2:00 mile in beating the top pacers on the grounds.

Sent away at 2-1 by the Saturday night gathering, Judge returned $6.80, $4.00 and $2.60 across the board. Ocean Mouth, who won a tight four-horse photo for second, paid $7.00 and $3.60 while Windy Way returned $3.20 to show.

Family affair at Belmont

Combined Wire Services

Numbered Account, one of three Phipps family 2-year-olds entered in the $105,000 Matron Stakes, caught stablemate Bold Example in the stretch and streaked away to a 6½-length victory in the six-furlong Belmont feature Saturday.

Jockey Braulio Baeza moved Numbered Account up to second place midway in the race and the fleet filly went all out as she grabbed a three-length lead early in the stretch and doubled the margin in the race for the wire.

Stepping High was second, other filly in the Phipps enformative, with Bold Example fading to fourth at the finish. Ideal Day, the other fily in the Phipps entry, came in last.

Numbered Account, the only stakes winner in the six-horse field, raced the distance in 1:10 2-5 for her fifth win in six outings this year. She paid $2.40. There was no place or show betting

At Atlantic City, Mary Tepman's Ahira won his first stakes race by scoring a length and three-quarter decision over favored Speedy Zephyr in the $30,000 Boardwalk Handicap.

Sent off by the crowd of 14,877 at 11-1 odds, Ahira battled Speedy Zephyr most of the last eight of a mile, finally caught the front-running favorite and went on to record a $24.80 payoff.

At Bay Meadows, Rock Bath lived up to his advance billing as the new "Silky Sullivan," by staging a stirring stretch run to capture the $2,000 added San Francisco Handicap.

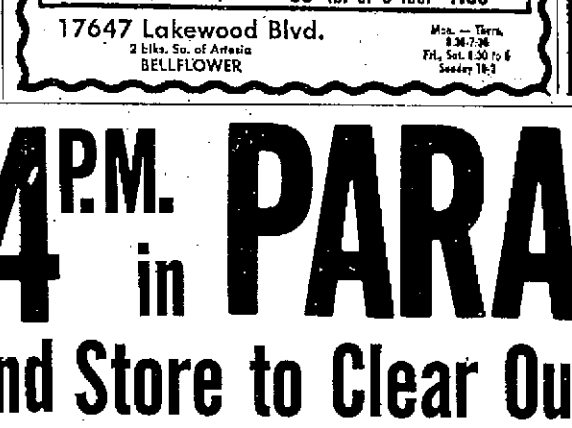

Out of sight in the early running, the three-year-old son of Cavan came around the field at the top of the stretch to pass his eight rivals. The victory earned Rock Bath the sophomore championship of the Tanforan portion of the fall racing season.

9-2 shot wins Pomona feature

POMONA — Graceful Native, overlooked in the betting at 9-2 despite an impressive triumph in his Los Angeles County Fairgrounds debut on opening day last week, proved that win was no fluke Saturday by driving to a narrow victory in the $16,505 C. B. Afflerbaugh Memorial Handicap before 21,854 onlookers.

Given a powerful ride by Robby Kilborn, Graceful Native hargeted from last place to outfinish the 37-1 longshot.

Sitka D., upset by Graceful Native last week but still made the 8-5 favorite this Saturday, appeared home free after taking command on the final bend. However, he was unable to cope with the closing rushes of both Graceful Native and Fine Cause and was a nose behind the runner-up in third place at he wire.

The homebound aged... 'the greatest scandal in Long Beach'

Hard fate: to be old, poor and alone

By Joanne Norris
Staff Writer
(First in a series)

Long Beach has a vigorous recreation program for seniors, much of it in the city's graceful Bixby Park.

Mrs. Elsie McLaughlin lives right across the street from Bixby Park, but she hasn't been to an activity there in a long time.

Mrs. McLaughlin can't walk well enough to cross the street, so the card games, the chess and checkers and the shuffleboard, although so near, are much too far for her to attend.

"I can hear the band," she said. But everything else the city recreation department has to offer at her front door might as well be on Mars.

Mrs. McLaughlin is not unique. She's one of a growing number of elderly people in Long Beach unable to take advantage of what the area has to offer. The number grows as people live longer, but not necessarily more mobile, lives.

The actual number of old people in Long Beach varies from the Chamber of Commerce's estimate of 29,000 to the Community Planning Council's approximately 55,000 up to as high as 60,000.

"They are the forgotten ones," said Mrs. Lucy Still, who headed the Family Service Homemaker Program for the Elderly and Chronically Ill until it ran out of money last June.

"It's the greatest scandal in Long Beach," Mrs. Nell Wills, director of Family Service's homemaker program for families with children, said about the plight of the homebound aged.

THE ELDERLY in Long Beach now are without the services which Mrs. Still's program provided them for two years. Most of them no longer have anyone to shop or clean, to take out laundry and do other essential tasks they no longer can do for themselves.

"They're ignored. They have no lobby and no voice. They are not taxpayers because they are living on Social Security and Old Age Security," she added.

Mrs. Wills and Mrs. Still both snort at Gov. Ronald Reagan's remarks about "maid service to the elderly."

"He said families should care for their elderly relatives, but many of these people do not have any family," said Mrs. Still.

Some are physically wasting away because they are unable to cook enough to maintain good health.

Delbert and Blondina Jarvis are a devoted couple about to celebrate their 62nd wedding anniversary. They are in their 80s and very frail.

Mrs. Jarvis broke a hip in a fall three years ago and has left her second-floor apartment only once since then. That was for a trip to the doctor.

Her husband, who has a severe heart condition, is able to get down the stairs once a day to take out the garbage. But he is unable to shop or do laundry. They must depend on a neighborhood boy to do that.

Their income is about $351 a month which, they say, is adequate to pay the $118-a-month rent on the small apartment and buy food. Their grocery bill isn't high because they don't eat very much.

THEIR CLOSEST relative is a niece in Riverside County whom they seldom see.

"She is too busy with her own family and a big house," said Mrs. Jarvis. "She would like to come to see us but she can't."

The Jarvises have television and they have each other. These are their total entertainment.

They used to be very active.

"We always went out. We always had company in."

Now they don't go anywhere, have few visitors and can't see well enough to read much.

"I still get the newspaper every day although I can't read it," said Jarvis. "It's a 60-year habit I just can't break. I look at the headlines. They give me some idea of what's going on."

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Picture of week's confusing events

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

I HAVE COME to the world shaking conclusion that what the world needs is to de-emphasize the role of pictures of columnists with their work while at the same time reaffirming its faith in the nature of humans who protest, too much, that the camera either does or does not lie.

Let me make one thing perfectly clear. This is all I am going to say about that.

THERE WAS A LOT of excitement at the home of Ruth Grisham the other day.

While the piano movers were trying to figure out how to get the piano outside, (this was after they put the ice in the oven but a while before the mice started running around) Ruth decided to . . . .

O.K. enough nonsense I will tell it like it really was.

Lawyers Wives were gathering for their opening meeting of the new club year. Ruth offered her home for the pot luck salad luncheon under the direction of Jane Conway and her committee.

There was not enough room in the refrigerator for all the salads so they put ice in the oven and chilled salads stayed chilled.

Harriet Williams had written a skit which required the use of the piano. The party was out-of-doors so the committee had to muscle it outside. I say muscle because the gals discovered the piano had no casters.

Harriet's skit was a parody of the Mousketeers and such past presidents as Flo Brooks, Gertrude Winston and Mary Sutter donned sweatshirts and mouse ears for the performance.

Other past presidents were Mariallce Johnson, Marjorie Sten, Virginia Artman, Norma Wisot, Gloria McWilliams, Jim Brown and Eleanor Williams. Claire Webster decided to become official photographer for the day instead of a mouse.

Right in the middle of the welcome by President Grace Carroll, Court Commissioner Jack Carroll, who coincidentally is Grace's husband, and Charles Ramsbarger, who happens to be married to Ruth Ann, took center stage wearing straw toppers, and "entertained" the ladies, with a guitar duet.

The whole thing sounds more like the Mad Hatter's Tea Party than a meeting of Lawyers Wives.

If their meetings are this wacky, I wonder what they have planned for their Queen Mary Fashion Show on Oct. 19?

WE HAVE ALL HEARD of potluck dinners.

I have heard of BYOB parties. Bring Your Own Bottle. But the Women's Auxiliary to the Long Beach Pharmaceutical Association had a BYOC steak fry at the home of Stan and Leota Nickle.

The BYOC stood for Bring Your Own Chair.

Surprise of the evening was the presentation of a birthday cake, baked in the shape of a mortar and pestle, to Don Wolter.

Chair bringers included Don's wife, Kjersti, Bill and President Kay Smith, Don and June Salvatori, Les and Mary Stucker, Gordon and Dorothy Davis, Mike and Carolyn Crawford, Chuck and Dorothy Ryan and Bill and Dani Hawthorne.

SCHOOL DAZE. . . .

From Willamette University in Salem, Ore., comes word that Poly High grad, Julia Schakelton, daughter of the Jesse Schakeltons, has pledged Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Closer to home . . .

New freshmen at Redlands are Lakewood High grads John Ford Jr., son of the senior Fords and Jan Harris, Daughter of Jane Harris.

Class of 1971 Millikan High is represented by David Evans, son of the Loren Evans and Christine Sexton, daughter of the Robert Sextons.

Los Alamitos High grad, Patricia Phillpis is also at Redlands. She is the daughter of the Edward Phillips.

AND IF YOU graduated from St. Anthony's High School with the class of 1951, you are eligible to attend the 20th reunion at Lakewood Country Club.

The dinner dance is scheduled for Oct. 16.

For tickets contact Patricia O'Shea Kelly at 9016 Belfair Street, Bellflower 90706. Or Jean Nelson Ingram 6653 Dashwood, Lakewood 90713.

THEIR KIDS finally drove them to drink . . .

Dr. Gregg and Joan Hoskins opened their home for a fund raising cocktail party for members of Wilson High Booster Club. Greg is president of the Boosters.

Dick Murphy, there with wife, Lorna, received kudos from the group for his construction of a booth to be used as a souvenir stand at games.

Special guests were Wilson Principal Dr. Genero and Karlyn Garcia and vice-principal Ed and Janet McKenzie and athletic director Bill and Lindy Crutchfield.

Other boosters included George and Billie McGarvey, Min and Joan Johnson, Don and Patty Peters, Dr. Bob and Liz Barmeyer, Lou and Doralee Berberet and Dell and Darlene Holm.

Volleyball a winner every time

Rick Rackers planned a romantic evening under the stars for their annual Men's Night Party.

They provided cool, soft, sand at Sunset Beach, live music, rare steaks, quality spirits, the soft glow of luminarias, a velvet sky and the whisper of surf. They even ordered a moon.

The husbands played volleyball.

Dan Swanson swam while wife, Charleen sat. Dick and Bunny Kussman also braved the surf.

Sand sitters included George and Sharon Azevedo, Stan and Betty Luker, RR Chairman Barbara and Walt Havekorst, Jack and Barbara Enlow, Mike and Barbara Johnson and the spouses of the athletes in the picture, Ron Dulin, Merry Lee Chambers, Sandie Anderson and India Nangano.

The Muses of the California Museum Foundation welcomed 50 new members at a beautifully appointed tea in the Muses Room at the California Museum of Science and Industry in Los Angeles.

New members from Long Beach are Jeanne Bader, Loraine Collins, Lorraine Fulton and Phyllis Gray.

LUAU RESTAURANT in Beverly Hills was the scene of a pre-wedding rehearsal dinner hosted by Willie and Ina Harris. Their son, Richard, took Lynda Belcher as his bride Saturday afternoon.

The wedding party gathered first in the garden of the home of the Gower Champions. Marge Champion is Lynda's aunt. During the rehearsal of the garden wedding, someone commented on the early afternoon time set for the ceremony.

Richard, a USC grad and avid football fan, explained that the hour was chosen so that reception festivities would end in time for them to make the kickoff for the USC-Illinois game.

VCC entertains German golfers aboard Queen

Half the guests touring the Queen Mary Museum Thursday night were German; the other half were American.

All spoke a common language—golf.

As part of the People-to-People Program, 27 members and ladies of the Hamburg-Ahrensburg Golf Club currently are on a 21-day golfing tour of the Western United States.

They arrived in Long Beach Thursday afternoon after golfing and sightseeing their way through San Francisco and Monterey. While in Long Beach they will be jointly entertained and housed by members of Virginia Country Club and Santa Ana Country Club.

Following the cocktail tour of the Queen, guests gathered for dinner at International City Club where Jim Craig, Virginia Country Club Team Captain and chairman for the evening, presented the key to the city to the Hamburg Club's team captain, Dr. Hermann Busch.

Long Beach area residents opening their homes to the visitors include Messrs. and Mmes. Samuel C. Cameron, John Walter, Julie Bescos, John Hancock, George Brower and Ralph Biggerstaff.

THE GOLFING group Saturday toured Disneyland and today will play at Virginia Country Club with a barbecue scheduled at the club tonight. First of the week German visitors will visit the Los Angeles-Pasadena area and then go to Phoenix, Grand Canyon and New York for departure for home.

Scheduled to golf with the guests today are Virginia Country Club members Bill Bryant, Sam Cameron, Jim Willingham, Jim Craig, John Walter, Dan Ridder, Julie Bescos, John Hancock, George Brower, Ben Little, Ralph Biggerstaff, John Roggeveen, Andy Anderson, and — on the distaff side — Joan Bescos, Ann Wood, Liz Walter, 'B' Hancock, Kay Brower, Terri Biggerstaff, Ann Little and Kay Roggeveen.

PEOPLE-TO-PEOPLE — Sharing in the steering of the Queen are Dr. and Mrs. Hermann Busch of Hamburg-Ahrensburg Golf Club and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Craig, Virginia Country Club.

Mamie, at 75, devoted to furthering Ike's ideals, goals

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI Writer

WASHINGTON — Mamie Doud Eisenhower, soon to celebrate her 75th birthday, has a magnificent obsession in widowhood — to work for the ideals espoused by her famous husband.

Of the many goals he had in retirement, among the most urgent for President Dwight D. Eisenhower was to promote American education and Eisenhower College in Seneca Falls, N.Y., which stands as a living memorial to his name.

On Monday, friends and admirers will salute the former First Lady's efforts in this field with a diamond jubilee dinner and formal establishment of a Mamie Doud Eisenhower Scholarship Fund. President and Mrs. Nixon, Frank Sinatra and Clare Boothe Luce head the list of guests planning to attend the $100-a-plate affair.

But for Mrs. Eisenhower, whose birthday falls on Nov. 14, the occasion will be a tribute to her late husband as well.

"Everything she does today is motivated by what she believes Ike wanted her to do," a close friend said. "She really wants to carry on the interests of Ike. Ever since his death, she has worked for The College."

ALTHOUGH THE MAINSPRING of her life is now gone, Mrs. Eisenhower still maintains a busy pace and dedicated devotion to her special projects.

A lot slimmer now than she was during the eight years she lived in the White House, Mrs. Eisenhower exudes the same warm friendliness, vivacity and dignity that has won her the title of "most admired woman in the world" for the past two years.

She wears her crown lightly. Her blue eyes twinkle with enthusiasm and her bangs are still her trademark.

Since her husband's death in late March, 1969, she always has worn a jeweled American flag pin "because Ike always wished that people would display the American flag more frequently."

THERE WERE TIMES after the five-star general's death when friends and relatives thought that Mrs. Eisenhower would not be able to go it alone at their farm in Gettysburg, Pa. But she soon found that no apartment in Washington could ever replace the only true "home" she had ever known during her married life.

In her years as a military wife, she moved 35 times in 35 years. The White House offered the closest semblance of permanency, being their home for eight years.

But now she spends most of her time at the simple white brick farmhouse in the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains — with its gentle rolling acreage, most of which was deeded to the Federal Government and designated as the Eisenhower National Historic Site by the National Park Service.

While she winters in Palm Desert, Calif. and often vacations at "Mamie's Cottage" on the Augusta, Ga., National Country Club grounds, Mrs. Eisenhower's happiest moments are at Gettysburg in a houseful of treasures and historical momentos.

SHE IS A DOTING grandmother. But "Mimi," as she is called by the four children of her son, Ambassador John Eisenhower, never puts the pressure on to see them or be near them. She is there if they need her.

Mrs. Eisenhower is a frequent guest of President and Mrs. Nixon at the White House, where she always is given the "Queen's Room." When she is around, it's old home for the household staff, most of whom are familiar faces to her.

She was a disciplined housekeeper while First Lady and laid down strict rules forbidding her grandchildren to romp on the state floors or to touch the silken walls with their smudgy fingers.

Although it was not publicized — and led to some unkind rumors — during her White House years, Mrs. Eisenhower suffers from an incurable middle ear problem which causes her to lose her balance. Frequently she will grab hold of the person nearest to her. For that reason she does not fly.

HER MAIL LOAD continues to be "fantastic" and she dictates her replies to her secretary, Ethel Wetzel. But many persons throughout the world receive replies personally penned by Mrs. Eisenhower.

Washington's "hostess with the mostest," Perle Mesta, has been an intimate friend through the years.

Although they were on different sides of the political fence, it has never marred their friendship.

"I think she looks younger than ever," Mrs. Mesta added. "I think she misses Ike. She's quite a religious girl. Mamie's always had a strong spiritual outlook. She keeps up beautifully."

Throughout their married life, the Eisenhowers were a partnership. "A winning team," he used to say.

He was "Ike" and "my beau" to her. She was "my Mamie" and frequently drew more cheers than he did when they appeared at the back of a campaign train.

THEY WERE MARRIED July 1, 1916. They met when he was a shavetail lieutenant at Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio, Tex.

About a month after they were married, Mrs. Eisenhower found out what the future would be like. "Ike" came home to get his traveling gear. His wife, on the verge of tears, was astounded that he would be leaving her so soon.

"He put his arms around me," she recalled after his death, and said gently: 'Mamie, there's one thing you must understand. My country comes first and always will; you come second.' "

Probably the best years of their lives, their togetherness, came after Eisenhower left the White House. He became the elder statesman, respected and beloved.

Harris, Belcher are wed

The garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gower Champion in West Hollywood was the setting Saturday afternoon for the wedding of their niece, Lynda Dianne Belcher, to Richard William Harris.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belcher of Burbank and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Harris of Long Beach.

Mrs. Suzanne Love and Donna Belcher attended their sister; Roger Ehren was best man.

The bride attended Valley Junior College and Chouinards Art School. Her husband is an alumnus of Wilson High School and USC, where he was affiliated with Delta Tau Delta.

The newlyweds will make their home in Fox Hills after a honeymoon in Puerta Vallarta, Mexico.

Take wedding vows

Kerth-Stearns

St. Joseph's Catholic Church was the setting Saturday afternoon for the wedding of Elaine Madelyn Stearns to Kenneth Paul Kerth.

Among guests witnessing the ceremony were parents of the bridal couple, Mrs. Dorothy Stearns and Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Kerth, all of Long Beach.

Suzanne Stearns was her sister's maid of honor; Allen Kerth attended his brother.

The new Mrs. Kerth is an alumna of Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Polytechnic High and LBCC and is attending California State College at Long Beach.

A first home in Bellflower awaits the couple after a honeymoon to San Francisco and Lake Tahoe.

Britton-Frye

Jordan High School graduates Carey Ann Frye and William R. K. Britton exchanged nuptial vows Saturday afternoon at United California Heights Methodist Church.

Denise Brown was maid of honor for the daughter of Mrs. Leo C. Smith of Long Beach and the late Mr. Smith. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. John Britton, also of Long Beach, and the late Mr. Britton, asked Jack Brunswig to perform the best man duties.

The bridegroom is serving a tour of duty with the United States Air Force at Norton Air Force Base.

The newlyweds will reside in Lakewood after a honeymoon in San Luis Obispo and Las Vegas.

Jones-Garrison

A wedding ceremony aboard the S.S. Princess Louise united in marriage Diana Garrison and Larry Jones Saturday afternoon.

Linda Baker was maid of honor for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Garrison of Lakewood. Dan Jones performed best man duties for his brother. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Jones, also of Lakewood.

The bridal couple graduated from Lakewood High School and attended Long Beach City College.

A first home in Lakewood awaits the newlyweds after a honeymoon at Mission Bay.

Black-Orpet

Millikan High School graduates Susan Marie Orpet and Kenneth Black Jr. were married Friday evening at the Long Beach Navy Chapel.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Russel E. Orpet and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Black Sr., all of Long Beach.

Sheryl Orpet was maid of honor for her sister; Paul Black attended his brother.

The newlyweds are honeymooning in northern California, and will make their first home in the Long Beach area while both attend Long Beach City College.

Bonnet Party for SA

Easily recognizable in dresses of bright yellow, members of Salvation Army Women's Auxiliary will open the doors of the SA Temple, 455 E. Spring St., at 10 a.m. Oct. 5 for their fourth annual Bonnet Party Bazaar.

The $1 admission price entitles guests to browse, buy and also enjoy a luncheon of homemade salads served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Larger each year, plans for this year's event call for 22 booths selling Christmas articles, garden plants, silver and antiques, jewelry, books, white elephants, handmade articles and baked goods.

New this year will be the Kitchen Cupboard which will stock kitchen cooking and serving utensils along with homemade jams and jellies and fancy, long aprons for at-home entertaining.

ALSO NEW this year will be a silent auction, led by such articles as a 20" Color TV Console with AM/FM radio and record player, oil paintings and prized antiques. Special door award, provided by Ryan Outdoor Advertizing Co., will be a Mexican Holiday — five days and four nights — in Mexico City.

Mrs. Lyman Lough, bazaar chairman, is being assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Roth and Mrs. Walter Green, co-chairman. Mrs. Vern Wier is auxiliary president.

floor apartment temporarily -- they thought. Not long after the move she suffered a fall and they're still there but Mrs. Jarvis is unable to get down the stairs.

"She's a prisoner," said Mrs. Still.

UNTIL THE HOMEMAKER program ended, the Jarvises had someone in several times a week to help them. Now they have no one.

By both pitching in, they maintain neat quarters. But Mrs. Still is worried about their meals.

"Cooking is their main problem," she said, "They need someone to help out. I'm afraid they aren't eating enough."

Another of Long Beach's seniors who is shifting for herself since the homemaker service was halted is a former librarian unable to get out of her apartment complex because of a degenerative disease of the spine.

She hired a housekeeper privately to shop and do laundry for her several times, but part-time help is hard to find at prices she can afford.

Her small refrigerator is crowded. "The last time she (the housekeeper) came I had her shop for two weeks," she said.

When the supplies run out she's not sure what she'll do.

She likes to read and is buying books because she can't get to the library or to a bookmobile.

"I belong to the Book-of-the-Month Club. It's my only luxury," she said.

The Long Beach Public Library has a book service for shut-ins, but this avid reader was unaware of it, and the library staff was unaware of her.

"Nobody knows about these people," said Mrs. Still

MONDAY: Housing: a major problem?

AT WIT'S END

As Florida goes, so goes the nation?

By ERMA BOMBECK

To all young people who think the over-30 group is insentitive to change, here's a zinger for you. Chewing gum has been legalized in classrooms in Miami, Fla. That's right. Students may now blow bubbles brazenly in front of law officers, buy gum over any drugstore counter and not be arrested for snapping it on the playground.

The permissiveness of student action has been a slow process. In 1961, shuffling feet under a desk was legalized, followed in 1963, by sitting on your spine with your feet in the aisle. In 1967, a test case went to the supreme court of a boy who blew his nose while an English teacher was reading Beowulf. The court decided in the boy's favor, saying the blowing of the nose was an impromptu Act of God and could not be controlled.

IN RECENT YEARS, other barriers have gone by the board. Lying in the hallways blocking the principal's entrance to his office has become common practice. Likewise, sailing hot dogs through the air when they purportedly contained no meat in protest of the cafeteria has become acceptable.

Through it all, however, the no-gum-chewing in the classroom rule held firm. In my era, gum chewing among students was the number one offense and was not only dealt with by physical punishment and detainment, but was recorded on your permanent record.

I also remember the week we graduated. Although we had all finished 12 years of required academic study, it seemed no one knew how to put one foot in front of the other and march. It took us a week to accomplish this. One of the cardinal rules was that we not march with gum in our mouth. Gerald Krick defied this rule. On the first day of rehearsal, Gerald put an entire pack of gum in his mouth and blew an enormous bubble. Miss Modesty saw him and said, "If that is not your gall bladder, Gerald, you are in trouble." Gerald Krick did not graduate with his class.

THE LEGALIZING of chewing gum is only the beginning. I was talking the other day with an educator who said plans are now in the works to "turn our heads" on dirty gym suits and legalize naps except during fire drills.

"What about the boy who doesn't have a pencil?" I inquired.

"Don't push," he said. "We'll still throw the book at him."

Anyone for breakfast?

A chef threesome of Kay Langen, left, president of Altrusa Club of Long Beach, Mrs. Gary Lynn Becker and Agnes Howell gets ready to serve up breakfast next Sunday. The annual Altrusa fund-raising event is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, 3610 Locust Ave. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1.50 for children, 6 to 12 years of age. Mrs. Howell has planned a menu of fruit or juice, scrambled eggs, ham or sausage, hash brown potatoes or pancakes, toast and coffee or milk. Proceeds will benefit Altrusa philanthropies, including Community Rehabilitation Industries, scholarships, Juvenile Department of Long Beach and Hoffman House for women parolees.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Heard opts for hot cakes

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

He can see through things with an uncanny genius. Being the fourth generation of opticians, it stands to reason that he should. Today's Chef of the Week, Howard Heard, is president of the Heard Optical Company.

Heard opticians who preceded him include great-grandpa, grandpa, his dad and uncle. The fifth generation, son, Jim, is now learning the business. The firm processes approximately 300 lenses a day.

Born in Los Angeles, Heard attended Third Street Elementary, John Burroughs Junior and Los Angeles High Schools.

Then the Army grabbed him, and he spent the next three years with the U. S. Air Force, "touring" the South Pacific area.

The war over, he returned to California and joined his dad in El Monte. With his dad's death, he affiliated with the American Optical Co. Though actually based in Los Angeles, he did considerable traveling.

Then, 16 years ago, he came to Long Beach and joined his uncle, the late Joe S. Heard. At that time the Heard Optical Company was located in what was then known as The Times Building.

Our chef is an active member of the Optical Wholesalers Association.

He and his wife, Rafaela, have five sons and one daughter. The roll call reads like this: Les, Larry, Scott, Jim, Toni and Toni Marie.

WATER SKIING, SWIMMING, boating and motor cycling lure him easily in his free moments. "Also, says Rafaela, "he can do anything with his head or his hands, whether it be repairing or building from scratch." In fact, we're told, that any idea she thinks-up in the form of decorating — and there are many — he can execute.

As for his cooking, he's a family nuisance. An early riser, he's up whipping up a batch of hotcakes, hoping the rest of the family will both hear, and heed. When they don't, which is mostly, he partakes of a batch of his goodies, and then heads off on his motor or bike.

HOWARD HEARD

Here's how he does 'em. He didn't name them, but read the recipe and you can easily envision that they're mighty good eating. Even worth getting up early for.

HEARD'S "OPTCAKES"

4 eggs
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
Flour to make thin batter

Beat egg yolks until foamy and thick. Add sugar, salt, milk and flour. Beat until smooth.

Melt shortening in 8-inch fry pan, put small amount of batter in pan and spread to make a large thin pancake. BE SURE PAN IS NOT TOO HOT! Brown on both sides.

Spread with raspberry jam and butter. Roll up and sprinkle with powdered sugar and dab with whipped cream flavored with brandy and sugar.

To receive brotherhood award

Dr. Irving Moskowitz, Long Beach philanthropist and president and chairman of the board of Universal Medical Development and Management Enterprises, (UMEDCO), will be honored Monday as 1971 Brotherhood Man of the Year at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Local and national dignitaries will attend the 25th annual tribute, sponsored by the California Jewish Voice and the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Dr. Moskowitz is a physician with a general practice at 5887 Atlantic Ave., where he maintains offices along with UMEDCO's Atlantic Medical Clinic.

He began developing hospitals when he purchased a nearly completed facility in Buena Park late in 1960. He assumed the role of construction worker, landscaper, interior designer, buyer and personnel director. Three months from the date of purchase, 67-bed Buena Park General Hospital admitted its first patients.

One of Dr. Moskowitz' most important projects to date is the 237-bed Long Beach Neuropsychiatric Institute, the West's largest privately-owned neuropsychiatric facility, opened last May.

As president and chairman of the board of UMEDCO, Dr. Moskowitz supervises the company's current roster of health care facilities. Under his direction, the company has developed into a complex of hospitals, clinics and medical buildings serving major areas of Southern California where patients of all colors, religions and economic levels are treated.

DR. MOSKOWITZ helped found and fund Lubavitch Chabad Center which maintains Long Beach Hebrew Academy, is a permanent member of the Committee for the Inaugural Conference of the State of Israel Bonds; was president of the United Zionists Revisionists of America and is chairman and founder of Israel Tourist Industry. He is past president of Beth El Synagogue and a member of the Board of Temple Beth Sholom, both in Long Beach.

In 1970 Dr. Moskowitz was hailed as Boss of the Year by the American Businesswomen's Association and was presented the Golden Boy National Award by the Boys Club of America, Paramount, for providing the building to house its headquarters.

Past honorees of the Voice Brotherhood award include Mrs. Dorothy Chandler, Victor Carter, Steve Broidy, Supervisors Ernest Debs and Warren Dorn and other notables.

Letters commending Dr. Moskowitz have been received from Governor Reagan, U.S. Senators John Tunney and Alan Cranston, Mayors Sam Yorty of Los Angeles and Edwin Wade of Long Beach.

Dr. Moskowitz and his wife, Cherna, 10-year Long Beach residents, have eight children.

The Aces on bridge

By IRA CORN Team Captain

Dear Mr. Coru:

Please help settle an argument. My partner opened two no trump and, since I had no interest in slam, I bid three no trump. My hand was:

♠ A J 10 8 4
♥ 10 6 2
♦ 8 6 5

My partner claims I should have bid three spades. What do you say?

Nine Tricks,
Denver

Answer: A three-spade bid over two no trump is an offer to play in three no trump on four spades and does not necessarily suggest slam interest. After all, with a slam-going hand responder will always have another chance after the rebid.

It can't hurt to give opener an option. You would certainly want to play spades if partner held something like:

♠ K Q 7
♥ A K 9 3
♦ K Q J 9
♣ A 7

Pilot Club Governor

L.B. hosts Pilot Club conclave

Lakewood Pilot Club will host the Southern California Area Workshop at the Edgewater Hyatt House next Sunday.

Mrs. Cecelia Ditlefsen of Alhambra, District 18 governor of Pilot Club International, will be presiding officer.

Representatives from the 13 clubs within the District will attend.

Edna Walker, president of the host unit, and Marianna William are in charge of arrangements.

Art world brightens

Exhibits, receptions abound

Art interest centers today on Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., for two exhibitions open and will continue through Oct. 24. A reception sponsored by the Friends of the Museum will take place this afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock in recognition of Masuo Ikeda - Prints, and new selections from the Art Rental and Sales Gallery.

Ikeda is a contemporary Japanese artist whose style is that of an international expressionist and entirely removed from the traditions of Japanese printmaking.

Born in Manchuria, Ikeda lives now in Tokyo but travels frequently between the United States and Japan. In 1965 his prints were exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art, Ikeda's first exhibition outside Japan. The following year he received the Japan Society fellowship for travel in Europe. He has had one-man exhibitions in major cities in the U.S. and Japan.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 1-5 p.m. Closed Mondays.

HONORING artists whose work has been accepted for the El Dorado sculpture show, a reception will take place next Sunday from 2-4 p.m. in El Dorado Branch Library, 3800 Studebaker Road. The show continues through Oct. 30.

Cecil V. Comara of Comara Gallery, Los Angeles, has selected the 35 sculptures in the show. First, second and third prize awards will be made at the reception by Mrs. Harley Gurrey, president of Long Beach Art Association. The $200 purchase award will be made by Mrs. Lowell Ashley, library services chairman for El Dorado Woman's Club.

Special guests will include city and library officials.

ENTRIES for Long Beach Art Association October membership show will be received Monday at 800 E. Ocean Blvd. from 1-6 p.m. All media, including sculpture, will be accepted. There is no limit on number of entries. Selection will be made by Sherry Swan, member of the administrative staff of the Long Beach Unified School District, in charge of elementary and high school art education

ETCHINGS and drawings by Linda Algazi will be shown Thursday through Oct. 31 in Long Beach Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave Hours are Sunday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 7-10 p.m.

A New Yorker transplanted to California, Mrs. Algazi is a member of Goat Hill Graphics and Torana Art League. She has exhibited in Southern California in Corona Del Mar, Laguna Beach and Idyllwild.

RETROSPECTIVE show of Albert Wein sculpture and oils opens to the public Wednesday and continues through Oct. 17 at the Upstairs Gallery, 3850 Cherry Ave. Wein's work has been likened to the capturing of the essential elements of natural organic shapes as forms of esthetic expression. Joyful and uplifting, his sculpture and painting express sensuality, dignity, sincerity and validity.

WORKS of three young artists of exceptional promise will occupy San Pedro Municipal Art Gallery, 638 Beacon St., commencing Thursday and continuing through Oct. 31. Robert Thorn, Laguna Beach resident and graduate of California State College, Long Beach, presents luminescent paintings. Pamela Faulk of El Monte will exhibit paintings and prints, and Kevin Rea of Oakland shows multi-directional works.

The three artists will be honored at a reception Wednesday in the gallery at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited. Regular gallery hours are Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays.

EXHIBITS of Indian art and crafts, Indian posters, stone artifacts, displays of Kachina dolls, jewelry and other hand crafted items may be seen through Saturday at the Mall of Orange shopping center. Morning, afternoon and evening programs will include Indian folk tales, sign talk, dancing and songs. Featured will be an exhibit of American Indian art since 1900.

NEW PRINTS by Corita Kent may be seen through Sunday at Talisman Prints Gallery, 1949 South Coast Highway, Laguna Beach. Included are a collection of her rare earlier prints. Corita created her first serigraphs in 1952 when she was known as Sister Corita, head of the art department of Immaculate Heart College, Los Angeles. Her prints are now in the permanent collections of many major museums.

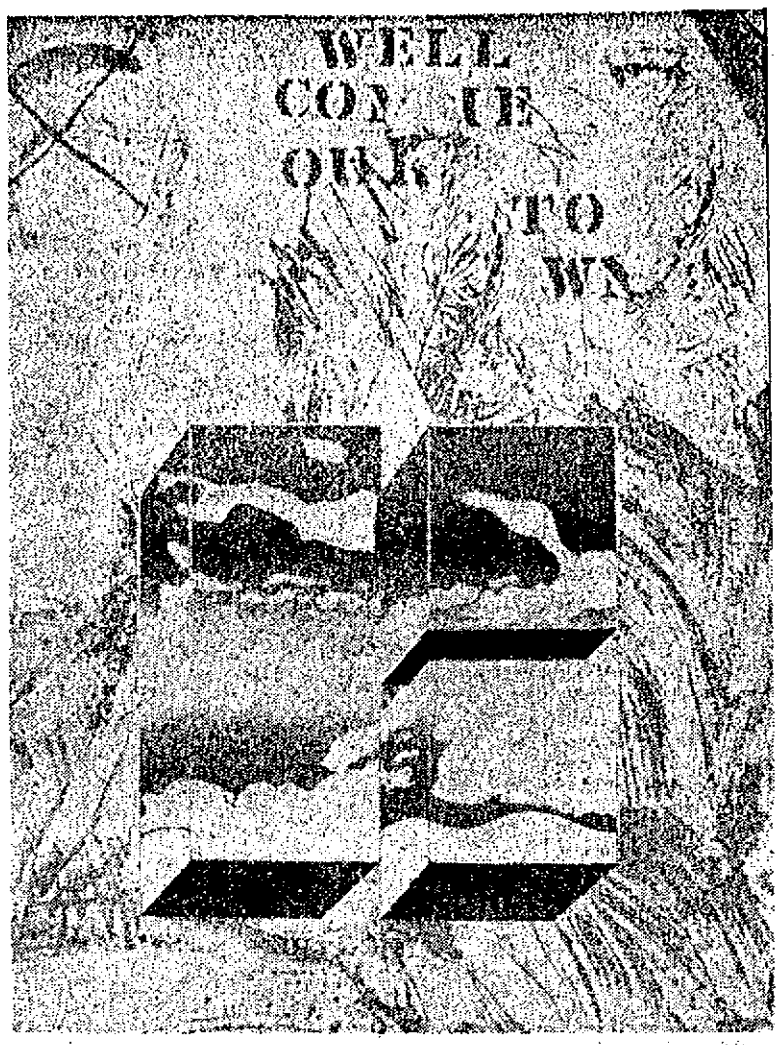

Gallery hours are each day from noon to 5 p.m. except Tuesdays when the gallery is closed

ON VIEW through Nov. 14 at Pasadena Art Musem is "French Primitive Photography," an exhibition of more than 250 prints and negatives showing the dramatic development of the photographic medium more than a century ago.

Selected from the museum's extensive Japanese print collection is a showing, The Human figure in Japanese Prints, through Nov. 7. Works are by master printmakers active during the classical period of ukiyo-e in the 17th-19th centuries.

An exhibition of nine oil paintings and related drawings representing the last works of the later American painter, Paul Burlin may be seen at the museum through Nov. 7.

"WORD-IMAGE," paintings by Jules Engel, Howard Smagula and Emmett Williams, will open Tuesday at Branch Library Art Center, Glendale. The exhibit explores the use of words, verbal images and typographic symbols in their relationship to various conceptual and cognitive situations.

FAR REMOVED from traditional Japanese printmaking is Masuo Ikeda's contemporary "Welcome to Our Town 'B'" at L.B. Museum of Art.

LA museum adds third series to world art films

World premiere of Universal Studio's new art films "Museum Without Walls" has been expanded to include a third series of showings due to great interest expressed in the film. The films will be shown at Los Angeles County Museum of Art beginning Tuesday.

Tickets for the Tuesday evening and Sunday afternoon showings of the 11 new films are sold out. A third series is now being offered Sunday evenings and will begin at 7 p.m. in Leo S. Bing Theater at the museum. Tickets for the series are $12.50 for museum members and $15 for non-members.

Films have been made on such artists as Picasso, Giotto, Goya and the architect Le Corbusier as well as on such movements as the Impressionists, Cubists, Dadists and kinetic art.

Narrators include Edward G. Robinson, Barry Sullivan, Ricardo Montalban, Richard Basehart and Richard Carlsen.

THE PROJECT represents a major effort by a traditionally show business - oriented entertainment complex to deal with the appreciation of fine art through the film media.

"Museum Without Walls" will be seen throughout the U.S. at museums and colleges beginning Oct. 25. In Southern California the films will be presented by UCLA and Pasadena Art Museum.

The series took four years to make, utilizing camera teams traveling world-wide and working with leading museums and art experts.

In the first series, viewers will see the vital Picasso at work in his studios at Mougins and Cannes. The artist himself displays some paintings from a group of 500 not yet shown to the public.

"Goya," a 55-minute motion picture featuring the Spanish artist's major works in Madrid's Prado Museum, will be screened with the Picasso film. Highlights of Goya's work include portraits of royalty and friends, etchings, the bullfight sequences, frescoes at the cathedral at Salagossa and Church of St. Anthony, and the "black paintings" from the walls of his own house.

"GIOTTO and the Pre-Renaissance" film covers the Italian artist's many innovations, including never-before-filmed detail of his immortal frescoes at Assisi and St. Croce in Florence. His revolutionary murals, in which he was the first to create a new world of visual experience based on casual observations of man and nature, are also shown.

"The Cubist Epoch" film offers a comprehensive survey of Cubist art in the context of its period, focussing on the works of Picasso, Braque, Gris, Leger and Villon. The spread of Cubism through every aspect of culture is commented upon, including its influence on music, literature and ballet.

They are the final attraction of the summer season at the Greek where performances will be each evening at 8:30 o'clock through Saturday.

Knowledge of music lax? Bone up on it!

With the Starlight Serenades in Recreation Park still a pleasant memory and the Long Beach Symphony, Civic Light Opera and Pacific Opera Theater promising excellent winter entertainment, Long Beach Public Library is prepared for an increase in requests for material about music and music appreciation.

Guides for the general reader who wants to learn more about music and increase his capacity for understanding and enjoying music include "Introduction to Music Appreciation" by William Miller; "Understanding of Music" by Charles R. Hoffer, and "This is Music" by David Randolph.

The history of music is covered in John Rublowsky's "Music in America"; Marion Bauer's "Music Through the Ages"; William Lovelock's "A Concise History of Music"; John Howard's "A Short History of Music in America" and Paul Lang's "A Pictorial History of Music."

Books for opera lovers include "Requiem for a Yellow Brick Brewery: a History of the Metropolitan Opera" by John Briggs; "Callas: La Divina," by Stellies Galatopoules; "The World of Opera" by Wallace Brockway and "Great Operas in Synopsis" by Arthur Jacobs.

Other recent books in the music field include Milton Goldin's "The Music Merchants," David Laing's "The Sound of Our Time" and David Ewen's "David Ewen Introduces Modern Music."

The library also has a range of music scores, phonograph recordings and tapes.

Concerts lure music lovers

Crestwood Chamber Players will perform during the concert hour Wednesday at Long Beach City College liberal arts campus. Concert hours, in Studio C of the Music Building at 11 a.m., are open to the public with a $1 general admission fee.

Helen Bussell, piano and harpsichord; Salvatore Spano, oboe, and Charles Gould, bassoon, will play Kammer Trio 24 by Handel, Trio in E Flat, Five Variations on an Olde Englishe Ayre, and Trio for Piano by Poulenc.

FINAL Concert on the Green will take place today at 4:30 o'clock when the Shanley Virtuosi presents its musicians in Municipal Art Gallery, Barnsdall Park, Los Angeles. Admissoin is free.

Gretel Shanley, flute, Valerie Vlazinskaya, soprano, Dennis Karmazyn, cello and Sharon Davis, piano will present works by Bach, Ravel, Casella, Rimsky-Korsakov, Rachmaninov and a Russian folk song arranged by Beethoven.

INSTRUMENT ensemble Ronnie Cole Trio, appearing Oct. 23, will open the San Pedro Community Concert Association season in San Pedro High School. Rounding out the season will be Ma Si-Hon and Tung Kwong-Kwong, violin and piano, Nov. 13; Jerry Jennings, tenor, Jan. 19 and Fiesta Mexicana dance ensemble, April 27.

DUE TO increasing popularity, UCLA's traditional Great Artists Series will be divided this year into two separate series of four concerts each. The "Blue" Series presents pianist Van Cliburn, Oct. 30; violinist Yehudi Menuhin Jan. 9; lutenist-guitarist Julian Bream, March 12 and soprano Beverly Sills, April 16.

Great Artists "Gold" Series opens Nov. 20 with Itzhak Perlman and includes cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, Jan. 21; pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy, Feb. 5 and baritone Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, April 14.

NOTED for its clarity, humor and poignancy, the Gloria Newman Dance Theater will perform Oct. 8-9 in the Downey Theater, 8540 Second St. Sponsors are the Downey Museum of Art and the National Endowment of the Arts program. Tickets are $3.50 (students with ID cards, $2) and may be ordered through the museum, 10419 South Rives Ave., Downey 90241.

EIGHTH annual season of the Los Angeles Master Chorale and Sinfonia Orchestra gets under way Sunday, Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m., with a performance of the Verdi "Requiem" in Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Music Center.

ROGER WAGNER

Dr. Roger Wagner, music director for the 100-voice professional chorale and orchestra, will conduct the Verdi work as well as the other four concerts on the regular season.

The annual Christmas concert, featuring popular noels, carols and classics from around the world will be presented Dec. 19.

A combination of choral classics and favorite light works will be given Jan. 16. Antiphonal effects of Renaissance choral and instrumental music of St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice will be recreated in the St. Mark's Festival set for Feb. 13.

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will climax the season on April 16.

Season tickets are avaiable now for the season. Ticket holders for the season not only get a discount over the single ticket price, but are also given choice seat locations for each event.

Also available are season tickets for the series of three chamber music events to be presented by the Master Chorale in the Mark Taper Forum, starting with the John Biggs Consort Jan. 3.

Potpourri beckons at UCLA

UCLA's north campus sculpture garden and surrounding area will be site today from 4 to 7 p.m. for a colorful "Potpourri for a Sunday Afternoon," presented as a benefit for the university's Design for Sharing project.

Programs will include "The Wonderful Drama of Punch and Judy," performed by Dr. Mel Helstien with original 19th century hand carved puppets on an authentic castellet stage; the PSA Gallery, singing contemporary songs; the first screening of several American Film Institute films and performances by the Baroque Players.

Also in the potpourri will be skits and vignettes by I Folletelli, a troupe in the Commedia dell-Arte tradition; the Allman singers and dancers, and an exhibition of international theater memorabilia. Refreshments will feature California wines, punch and finger foods and cheeses of Denmark.

Neil Simon comedy headed for Hollywood

Neil Simon's comedy, "The Gingerbread Lady," starring Nancy Kelly will open its national tour Oct. 22 at the Huntington Hartford Theater, 1615 Vine St., Hollywood. The play was a Broadway hit last season. Preview performances will be given Oct. 20 and 21.

Current attraction at the theater is "Harvey," starring Gig Young and Shirley Booth.

RIVER-FRONT PARK AT KERNVILLE

Kern River Valley braces for population boom

By HAL LOWE

The 9,000 or so residents of the Kern River Valley, about 40 miles east of Bakersfield, are getting ready for a new gold strike which is about three or four years away.

The pleasant valley, which can be reached on State Highway 178 from Bakersfield, or on the same road west from the Mojave Desert, has been a mecca for a few river fishermen and boating enthusiasts.

The area lies along the shores of Lake Isabella and the Kern River and has a history dating back to the days when John C. Fremont explored in the vicinity.

A couple of gold rushes brought a lively populace to the area including a man who brought along a couple of barrels of whiskey, placed a board across them along the dirt track and opened up the first recreational attraction in the valley giving life to its first name, "Whiskey Flats."

THE START of the real attraction took place in 1954 when the Army Corps of Engineers, seeking to harness the flooding Kern River, completed the Isabella Dam, creating the 11,400-acre lake with its 38 miles of shoreline.

With such an attraction, a few water fun seekers started infiltrating the area but the winding access road from Bakersfield restricted the visitor invasion.

Now the area is starting to plan for a bigger influx of fun seekers when the multi-million dollar Kern River Freeway project is completed.

The first section of the freeway, about 14 miles west from the lake is due for completion in 1973. The remainder has not yet been budgeted for, but the 14 initial miles will bypass the most "unscenic" spots along the road and save about one hours driving time from Bakersfield.

Entering the Kern River country from the west, you travel through about 20 miles of country which resembles the Arkansas River Country of Colorado. The river, too swift for swimming along this stretch, parallels the road with scenic spots for picnics along the way.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Kern County Board of Trade, Valley civic officials and residents, who recently hosted a Writers' Day gathering in the Valley, also note that the area will become even more of an all-year resort when the new ski area at Sherman Pass, just north of Kernville, is opened.

This resort area which sits at the 9,000-foot level will offer snow pack into April. It will attract about 400,000 visitors annually. Bids on the development of this area will be opened next year.

The people of the Kern River Valley in the principal towns, Isabella, Wooford Heights and Kernville, with its picturesque town square and river-front city park, include some retirees who have found plenty of space for their trailers.

They may feel a little nostalgic to know that their area is bound to grow by leaps, but the majority express the opinion that will all be for the good of the community.

At any rate, they feel that they and the tourists who have already "found the spot" have a few more years to enjoy the "good old days" before the gold strike sets in with development of new hotels and resorts and the start of the good new days.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Where to sail for winter

By STAN DELAPLANE

San Francisco

The winter cruise people are after you (and me).

Gorgeous color folders of sun-tanned people. A song bird wrote the brochure. They're free. (If you can't cruise, run water in the tub and dream.)

HERE'S what happened to me: Mermoz (Paquet Line) winter cruises from Fort Lauderdale to the Caribbean. A French champagne ship. Swingy discotheque. French food is great. Service spotty because of new waiters. But maybe it's better this year.

TS Hamburg—a German job now handled by Holland-America from the West Coast with cruises to the Caribbean. Service is German correct. Food heavy German, not much imagination.

P and O cruising the Caribbean from the West Coast with those enormous British ships. Via Mexico. Much experience in the cruising business. Well-priced. Bar service excellent by old-line stewards. Dining room so-so.

PRINCESS Italia (West Coast to the Caribbean-South America and a number of short trips to Mexico). High marks for this one. Great food. Excellent service. Good social program.

Pacific Far East Line runs the ships that Matson used to cruise to Hawaii and the South Pacific. Top performance on all counts.

American President Lines from the West Coast to Hawaii and the Orient. Another topper. All ways. Great program for children.

Above does not bum-rap other cruise ships. I just haven't been on them. Most ships have a fly-cruise plan. Cruise out, fly back. Or reverse it.

"What do we wear on a cruise ship? I mean how formal is it?"

Day wear is most casual. Shorts. Bathing suits. Aloha shirts.

But at 4:30, the birds disappear. They are down in the cabin feathering for the evening. And it seemed to me most of them feel they must have a different cocktail dress EVERY night.

Not so for men. Men are wearing tuxedos a lot less. Substituting a dark suit. On a seven-day Caribbean cruise, I did the black tie only twice: Once for the Captain's dinner night; the other because I felt like it.

WOMEN jitter about that Captain's dinner night because they feel it calls for a formal gown. Enough women bring one along (with only one chance to wear it) to make the non-wearers feel terrible.

But consider the nights you DON'T dress: Custom is no dress up the first night out and last night before getting into port. One night is masquerade costume. (The stewards' department has all the makings so don't pack one.) Usually one other no-dress night: A special party on deck or something like that.

Westours is a fly-cruise. Fly to the South Pacific. Cruise the coconut islands with some far-out stops. Friend of mine gives good report on this. Puts a knock on French UTA who flies you there. (Says bathrooms not cleaned. Uninspired service and food.) Cruise great though.

"Any thoughts about houseboats on the inland waterways of Europe?"

I know all about doing this on the Thames — I loved it. Small boats are for hire on the Continent. Find out who and where from Government tourist office.

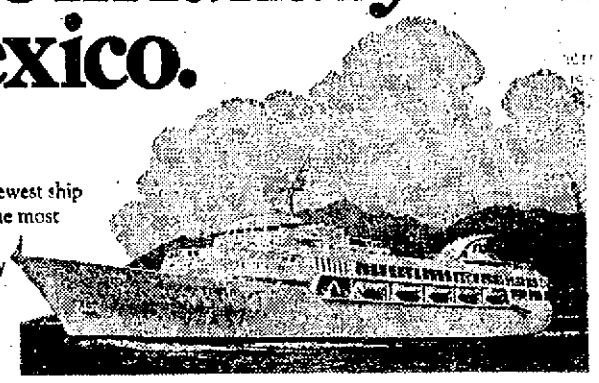

GOOD books: Englishman named Roger Pilkington has done a series of personal experiences titled: "Small Boat on the Thames" and similar titles with names of rivers for Europe. Maybe in your library. Big book stores like Foyle's in London sells them.

Cruise in luxury to Mexico.

The Princess Italia is the newest ship cruising to Mexico. And the most luxurious. She was built from the keel up for luxury cruising with plenty of deck space for every passenger. You have more room to stretch out and relax, with nobody crowding you. She's all First Class from her spacious staterooms to her richly appointed public rooms. When you swim in her beautiful mosaic-tiled pool or watch the magnificent Mexican coastline through her floor-to-ceiling windows in the Grand Salon, it's like cruising in a five-star hotel. (Economy cruise ships take the motel approach.)

Superb service

The M/V Italia is of Italian registry. Her Italian crew are all specialists. Her cabin stewards appear at the push of a button. And her waiters were trained in the finest hotels and restaurants in Europe. If you should miss a meal in the dining room you can order one at any hour in your stateroom.

Gourmet delights

Continental specialities make every meal a delight. How about Royal Pheasant in champagne for lunch? Beef Wellington followed by a choice of flambé desserts for dinner. And the wine steward will help you select just the right vintage from a cellar of over ten thousand bottles.

Romantic Mexico

The Princess Italia sails to different ports in Mexico. Acapulco? Of course. And Mazatlan and Puerto Vallarta. These are the must-see places. But we also dock in two of Mexico's newest finds. The charming little town of Manzanillo with its golden Santiago Beach. And the fishing village of Zihuatanejo where Brahma cattle wander freely among native palm-thatched huts along the water's edge.

The Princess Italia sails on 7, 10, 11 and 14 day cruises from Los Angeles: Dec. 15, 29, Jan. 14, 31, Feb. 11, 25, Mar. 6, 17, 31, Apr. 10 and May 30. Fares from $295 to $1485, subject to space availability.

Call your travel agent now while choice cabins are still available. Or mail the coupon for a free colorful brochure, covering all the details. See your travel agent for reservations.

Cruise to warmer climes this winter with P&O Lines

When it's winter in North America, it's summer on the other side of the world in New Zealand and Australia.

The month of January there, in fact, is almost as warm as Hawaii, Samoa and Fiji, other warm weather places on the itinerary of P&O Lines' popular Waltzing Matilda Circle Pacific Holiday.

The 28,000-ton British cruise line ship Oronsay will leave from Los Angeles Dec. 30 for these climes. Singapore, Hong Kong and Japan also will be visited.

ESCORTED shore excursions at most ports is the special feature of this all-inclusive seagoing holiday. So is a land tour of Japan that visits Kobe, Nara, Yokohama and takes passengers from Kyoto to Tokyo on the famous 125-mph "Bullet Train."

Optional tours also are available. One is to Dubbo in rural Australia; another is a four-day visit to New Zealand's Maori country.

Reservations may now be made through a travel agent or at any P&O Lines office. Inclusive rates start at $1,718.

Don't pack them

Articles such as acids, matches, lighter fluid and the like should not be packed in checked baggage, according to the Air Transport Association. Also, you should not use lighters with clear plastic reservoirs during flight. They could produce a burst of flame.

Reduced fares benefit of dollar freeze?

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

Southland travelers heading for Europe next year may save a little more on scheduled air fares than they stand to lose on the average continental tour if the U.S. dollar continues at its present unfavorable rate of exchange with most foreign currencies.

Lufthansa German Airlines has proposed cutting economy fares from Los Angeles by about 20 per cent and as much as 45 per cent under the going price for the popular 17-to-28-day excursion rate, bringing the cost nearly level with current charter group fares.

Other international carriers, including Trans World Airlines and Pan American World Airways, have indicated they will remain competitive if Lufthansa puts the cut-rate fares into effect. TWA has advertised flatly that it will not be undersold.

ACTUAL CASH savings on a round-trip ticket to any point in West Germany from Los Angeles under the Lufthansa plan would be $172 from present coach fares. This would more than offset the increased cost of European travel for Americans because of the recent dollar devaluation, according to Irwin Stambler, a Southland travel writer.

Back last week from a working vacation in Northern Europe, Stambler reports President Nixon's surprise "floating dollar" policy cost him $200 in unexpected foreign exchange discounts. But he points out that his family touring group was larger than average and was traveling during a period of uncertainty which caused higher dollar discounts than may have been necessary.

By next Feb. 1, when Lufthansa's reduced fares would go into effect if approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, experts predict European prices will stabilize at about 10 per cent higher in terms of American money. This would not cancel out all the substantial savings on the lower fares.

In breaking away from regulation by the International Air Tranportation Association, which has stipulated fare by mutual agreement of 22 scheduled airlines competing on the North Atlantic routes, Lufthansa said it was seeking to simplify the fare structure as well as reduce rates.

The German airline is offering a choice of only eight fares in five categories instead of the 69 different fares in a multitude of classes suggested by the other IATA airlines.

PROLIFERATION of promotional fares according to individual circumstances has become a major headache in recent years, but most airlines believe the family, youth, off-peak, standby, group, pre-paid, inclusive ground accommodation and other plans are necessary to stimulate untapped sources of traffic and revenue.

Lufthansa plans to scrap this "Boy, have I got a deal for you!" approach by offering most of the advantages of all the plans on a wholesale basis, regardless of the color of the passenger's eyes or his marital status.

Sample proposed fares in economy coach, round-trip between Los Angeles and Frankfurt are $650 basic and $770 in the peak summer season, as compared to present $822 and $922 IATA-approved fares. In each case the savings amount to $172, a little more than 20 per cent.

Lufthansa's plan for a 14-to-45-day excursion round trip fare of $325 basic and $385 peak season is also $172 lower than the current IATA 29-to-45-day excursion fares of $497 and $557, a cut of approximately one-third.

Biggest savings in the single Lufthansa excursion bracket would come in the reduction of the present IATA basic season 17-to-28-day fare of $596 by $271, or more than 45 per cent.

AN ANOMALY of the cut-rate plan is an increase of $22 to $1,246 for the year-round first class fare on the same route, which gives a clue to the scheduled airlines' problem. The upholstery up front is getting a normal healthy workout, but it's a different story in the back of the plane.

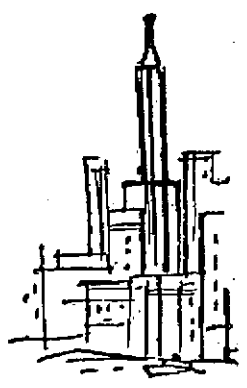

One target of the lower scheduled fares is the charter airline business, which in recent years has lured away 70 per cent or more of the Europe-bound air traffic out of Los Angeles with cheaper group rates.

Lufthansa has been careful to state that it has no intention of starting a general price war or even of withdrawing permanently from IATA. The airline maintains its program is simply an experiment designed to fill empty seats from new sources.

If it works, other foreign carriers will follow suit on their individual routes, and the U.S. international airlines will be faced with the problem of meeting the competition from all sides.

Which probably won't be all that difficult. As a Los Angeles spokesman for TWA explained last week, the reduced fares in the Lufthansa proposal are pretty much the same as those the American carrier introduced at the last two IATA meetings, except for some advance reservation and pre-payment conditions.

See New York for 60 cents

Recession-weary travelers who want to tour New York this fall but not for a small fortune can actually do it for as little as 60 cents.

Sound like a come-on? New Yorkers do it all the time. In a two-part bus ride beginning in front of the Commodore Hotel at Park Avenue and 42nd Street, visitors can travel across, up and downtown past many of New York's most interesting sights.

NOW, about that 60-cent tour:

Get on the No. 104 bus that stops in front of the hotel. All buses cost 30 cents in New York. Seats are plentiful on weekends, especially during the early part of the ride.

The bus goes across town, first over Madison and Fifth Avenues, past the marble edifice of the New York Public Library and on through the always travel

startling hubbub of Times Square.

Turning north on Eighth Avenue, the trip continues to Columbus Circle by the New York Cultural Center. This is the beginning of the Upper West Side.

Lincoln Center is just ahead on Broadway at 64th Street, New York's glittering complex of buildings for the performing arts. Quickly scan the area for Philharmonic Hall, the Vivian Beaumont Theatre, the Metropolitan Opera House and Alice Tully Hall.

THE WEST Side unfolds as the bus shuttles up Broadway past a melange of ethnic restaurants, sidewalk cafes, classic movie theatres, book shops and boutiques.

Get off at 110th Street and take the No. 4 bus which goes across town to Fifth Avenue. Some of New York's most interesting sights appear on this leg of the journey, including Central Park which extends down to 59th Street.

The Guggenheim Museum, with its striking spiral facade, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, is at 89th Street. A little further is the Metropolitan Museum of Art stretching from 84th to 81st Street.

The sidewalk on the park side of Fifth Avenue is a people watcher's paradise teeming with miniskirted girls and strollers, walking dogs of every exotic description.

NEW YORK'S celebrated shopping district starts at 58th Street with some of the most famous stores in the world soon coming in sight: Bergdorf Goodman, Tiffany, Cartier, Saks.

Be sure to see Rockefeller Center between 52nd and 49th Street. Opposite 50th Street, look down the promenade at the golden Hercules just below the towering RCA building.

The bus continues down to 34th Street which is a good place to get off. The Empire State Building is here. It is still the tallest well worth the exhiliarting ride to the 102nd-story observation deck. The hotel is just a brief stroll back to 42nd Street.

TRIP TIPS

Watch those manners in the Orient

By MARIE MATTSON

Be prepared for some unusual customs in the Orient; the following are among the most common courtesies you will want to observe:

• NEARLY everywhere your hostess will appreciate it if you remove your shoes before entering her home. If she says it isn't necessary, note whether she is barefoot or wearing slippers. If she is, take off your shoes. Remember also that shoes would severely damage delicate grass mat floors in Japan and the mulberry paper floors that resemble linoleum in Korea.

• In Malaysia and Indonesia, it's highly improper for a man to ask a Muslim about his wife — she is strictly limited to contacts with men in her immediate family. Also, the man may have several wives — four at one time are legal — so which wife are you inquiring about?

• Always shake hands upon meeting and leaving a person in Philippine and Indonesian cities — this is a legacy of centuries of European rule. In other parts of Asia, however, refrain from hand-shaking. The common greeting may be a bow, often with hands pressed together as in prayer. While this looks simple, it's actually quite complex; an inept performance by you makes local people feel you are disrespectful of their customs.

• POINTING with a hand or foot is impolite in all of Southeast Asia. So is sitting with your toe pointed toward anyone, having your legs crossed or showing the sole of a foot. If you have difficulty determining how to sit properly, take your cue from a local person who is of your age, sex and social position.

• In Thailand, you should never touch anyone's head or have your head on a higher plane than that of an important person. If a VIP is seated, drop into a chair immediately without waiting to be asked.

• Muslims — they're predominant in Malaysia and Indonesia — consider the left hand unclean because of its personal use in the toilet. It is unacceptable to eat with the left hand or pass or receive objects with it. With most other Asians, however, good manners demand that you use both hands when offering or receiving objects.

• Smoking still is not common among women in the Far East. Many Oriental women consider it an affront to have cigarettes offered to them, although if elders are not present it would be all right to ask a woman if she cared to smoke. Out of consideration for her hosts, a North American woman visiting in an Oriental home may decide to forego cigarettes. Keep in mind also that usually it is disrespectful to smoke on temple grounds.

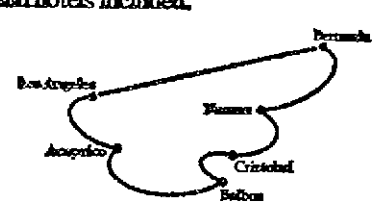

• FOOD eaten or left on your plate conveys a message to your hosts in some countries. In Korea and the Philippines, a bit of food remaining signifies that you've had enough; in Japan and Malaysia, it means you want another helping.

• The angelus—to remind people to say their prayers — sounds throughout the Philippines at 6 p.m. daily. If you hear it while in a public place, stop whatever you're doing and join in their devotion or stand respectfully. When the bells stop ringing, it's polite to say "Good evening" to anyone standing near you and continue about your business.

Princess Cruises announce sailings to Caribbean and South America

PASSENGERS FIND BEST VANTAGE point aboard the Princess Italia as 420-passenger luxury liner passes through Panama Canal lock on way to Caribbean and South American ports.

Princess Cruises will offer a pair of 17-day cruises to the Caribbean and South America this fall aboard the luxurious all-first-class Princess Italia. Each sailing will include visits to Mexico and Central America.

The first cruise will depart from Los Angeles on Sept. 27. Ports of call will include Acapulco in Mexico; Cartagena in Colombia, South America; the Dutch island of Curacao; Granada; Martinique; St. Croix; and Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

The second cruise, which will depart from Fort Lauderdale on Nov. 28, will feature calls at St. Thomas; Antigua; St. Lucia; La Guaira-Caracas in Venezuela; the Dutch island of Aruba; Balboa in Panama; Acapulco; and Los Angeles.

FARES start at $700 for both cruises. Air-sea packages permit passengers to cruise to the Caribbean and jet back to Los Angeles or vice-versa. Optional shore excursions will be available at each port.

Family fares permit children under 18 occupying a cabin with two full-fare adults to sail at half the minimum rate. A child with one adult may sail at half that cabin rate. Apartment suites, with bedroom-sitting room combinations and two baths, may be formed through adjoining staterooms.

EACH CRUISE will include, approximately, an eight-hour daytime passage through the fascinating Panama Canal. Interesting facts about the series of nautical locks, which handle ocean-going vessels, will be announced over the loudspeaker system.

The Dutch Islands of Aruba and Curacao, and St. Thomas and St. Croix in the American Virgin Islands, offer especially good shopping values. There is also a duty-free gift shop aboard the Princess Italia.

All cabins aboard the fully air-conditioned floating resort have private facilities, television, individual temperature controls, telephone and dual channel music system. The Italia also has nightclubs with live entertainment and two dance bands, cocktail lounges, a swimming pool, gymnasium, theater, library and cardroom.

Additional information on these cruises or sailings to Mexico or Alaska-Canada is available from travel agents or from Princess Cruises, 3435 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

Theater tour takes in European cities

"The Bard and the Bolshoi" tour program, combining the sightseeing and entertainment highlights of London, Paris, Moscow and Leningrad made its debut in the Fall of 1969.

Since then, nearly 2,000 Americans and Canadians have made it one of the most successful packages in the travel business.

Along with Air-India's other "Theatre Europe" presentations, it has helped to establish the concept of off-shore off-Broadway.

THE TWO and three-week packages were developed by Air-India and $5-A-Day Tours, Inc.

The two-week tour priced from $499 of London, Moscow and Leningrad includes economy jet transportation, free bus transfers from airports to hotels in the three cities, accommodations with private bath for eight nights in London, three nights in Moscow and two nights in Leningrad, with full English breakfast in London and all meals in the U.S.S.R.

The package provides orchestra or dress circle tickets to four West End theatres in London; two tickets in Moscow, normally the Bolshoi Ballet and the State Circus and two in Leningrad, usually the Kirov Opera and Ballet Theatre.

For sightseeing, the package provides a tour of the Old City of London; three escorted tours of Moscow and two in Leningrad with the services of a resident host in all three cities.

Western THE ONLY WAY TO FLY

"It's as far away from the kitchen sink as it's possible to get." P&O's Winter Mexican cruises.

This December, you can join the most popular cruise going between here and Mexico, and let somebody else take care of you for a whole long week—for as little as $36 a day.

Room. Parties. Fun.

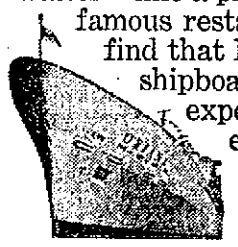

On P&O's beautiful, swift S.S.Oriana, you'll have the largest choice of companions in Mexican cruising, big open decks to roam, three swimming pools, plus roomy lounges, bars, spectacular galleries, and of course, English pubs. There'll be parties, dances, costume balls, gala nights—and everybody speaks your language.

TWO 7-DAY CRUISES TO MEXICO FROM $250.

LA FIESTA CRUISE S.S. Oriana Departs:		EL CORTEZ CRUISE S.S. Oriana Departs:
Los Angeles	Nov. 29	Los Angeles	Dec. 11
Mazatlan	Dec. 1	Mazatlan	Dec. 13
Puerto Vallarta	Dec. 3	Puerto Vallarta	Dec. 14
Acapulco	Dec. 4	Acapulco	Dec. 16
Los Angeles	Dec. 6	Los Angeles	Dec. 18

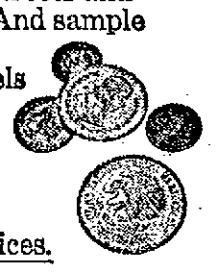

A week of posh living.

P&O's service is legendary. At meals you'll have your "own" waiter—like a prized customer in a famous restaurant. You'll find that P&O has refined shipboard service to what experienced world travellers consider perfect pitch. You are always attended to, never intruded upon. Not surprisingly, the term "posh" was coined for P&O.

Relaxation without boredom.

On the largest, fastest ship in Mexican cruise service, you'll steam to Puerto Vallarta—perhaps the most beautiful spot on the entire Pacific Coast, visit Mazatlan's quiet, shaded streets and magnificent beaches. And sample Acapulco's nightlife, glittering modern hotels and small, colorful shops (woven bags and hats and sandals go for a song).

Ski weekend prices.

Amazingly, the price of all this—international travel, meals, room, entertainment—begins at about the cost of a skiing weekend. Or the daily price of staying put in a good hotel. Come with P&O to Mexico this winter, on the cruise vacation that includes everything but the kitchen sink. For information or reservations call your travel agent or P&O.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter has a different definition for companion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Nell, a very dear friend of mine, 69, recently lost her husband. Nell has a well-to-do aunt (85) who invited her to come and live with her and be her companion. Auntie lives in a beautiful apartment with a fulltime housekeeper. Auntie has a daughter living with her. The daughter is 60 and also is widowed, and Auntie and Daughter can't be in the same room for 20 minutes without fighting.

Well, Nell moved in with Auntie and things were going splendidly until Daughter fired the housekeeper and informed Nell that SHE was to be the housekeeper!

Now poor Nell is breaking her back over there with all the work in addition to being referee for Auntie and Daughter. Nell is rather on the timid side and has asked me to help get her out of that situation without getting Auntie angry with her. (Nell is not destitute.)

I am considering playing "sick" and sending for Nell to "nurse" me for a few weeks, after which she can tell Auntie she is not returning.

My husband says if I try to pull a stunt like that I am out of my mind. What do you think?

NELL'S BEST FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: I'm with your husband. Tell Nell to remind Auntie that she was invited to be a "companion," not a housekeeper, and since the picture has changed, she's leaving.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed a letter from a husband saying his school-teacher wife wanted to go off to Europe for her summer vacation, and he said he would offer her a divorce if she went.

Well, my wife of 14 years took our kids and went to Europe for 10 weeks with my blessing and I've learned a hundred times over how much my wife means to me. I honestly never realized what a wonderful wife I had. I recommend any man let his wife take a month or two vacation. It will rekindle their love. He will soon learn how important a wife is. He will also learn what a rotten job housekeeping is.

LOVELORN IN ONTARIO

DEAR LOVELORN: It's the old story: You never miss the water 'til the well runs dry.

DEAR ABBY: A while back some young person wrote in asking why the old folks didn't prepare for their old age.

Well, I think I can speak for oldsters as I am 80. My husband's pension was based on prices as they were 50 years ago. A loaf of bread was 5 cents, eggs were 10 cents a dozen, and the best steak could be had for 15 cents a pound. Times have changed, and so have prices.

Social Security is a wonderful thing, and some of the younger ones are kicking because they have to pay so much in taxes. I wonder what they think is going to happen in the next 50 years. I will not be here to say, "I told you so." Ha!

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

DIAL-A-MOVIE

Flicks big on TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Associated Press

So you like to watch movies on television, eh?

Okay, you're going to get movies this season: old movies, new movies, minimovies, nonmovies, good movies and, of course, the usual array of bad movies.

In prime time on the three major networks alone, an assortment of programs labeled "movies" will occupy 16 hours a week and they will be around every night in the week, with two rivals competing with each other on Fridays and Saturdays.

Television's frantic eagerness to woo the viewer annually leads to this sort of over supply, inevitably followed by surfeit. Over the years, viewers indicated a fondness for Westerns, and for a seeason or so horses and Main Street shootouts dominated the screens. The audience took a fancy to some variety programs a couple of seasons back, and last winter it was almost impossible to turn the dial without running into a production number with dancing girls.

THIS SEASON it looks like time for a movie bender.

Just exactly how much of these 16 hours will be occupied by movies depended pretty much on the individual's definition of the word. A "movie" used to mean specifically a motion picture film made to be shown in theaters. As the supply of vintage films available for television re-use dwindled, there came along the "movie-for-TV," usually a two-hour treatment slipped into time spots reserved for old theatrical films. It usually has stars of medium luminosity, plenty of action but is custom tailored for TV's rigid schedules, with neatly timed plot cliff-hangers surfacing just before the breaks of commercials and station identification.

NBC has moved strongly into this area with its "World Premiere" shows, this year graduated into a full-blown Friday night series. They have done well in the ratings, indicating public acceptance, and have been especially useful as pilot films for subsequent series. This season alone Rock Hudson's mini series, "Macmillan and Wife," Peter Falk's companion series, "Columbo" and George Kennedy's "Sarge" all were launched as "World Premiere" features. CBS turned out a few two-hour features, and got two new series out of them: "Cannon" and "Bearcats."

ABC HAS cleverly married the word "movie" to a popular television form. It was once believed that a series of dramas, each a separate entity, needed some continuity. Thus an assortment of stars — Bob Hope, Danny Thomas and Fred Astaire among them — served as "host" on what was simply an anthology. The device was mildly successful, but now it appears that the magic word "movie" is the key. ABC three years ago started turning out 90-minute shows, ranging from comedy to horror tales under the title "Movie of the Week." The series has proved such a hit that the network has spun off a sister series for this season called "Movie of the Week-end."

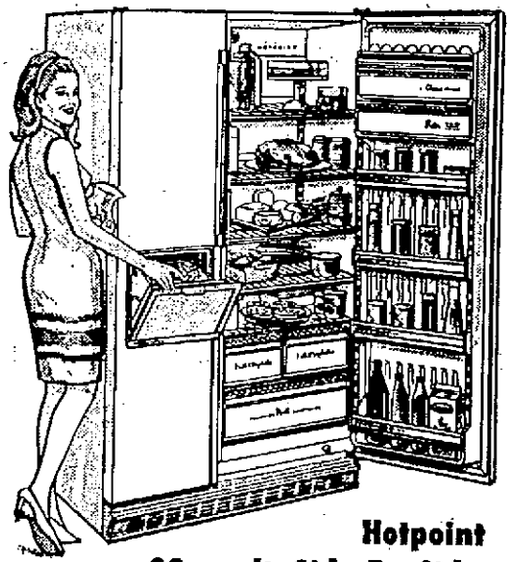

CBS, obviously impressed by the ABC operation, is now deeply involved in a string of freshly minted 90-minute film features which it calls "New Friday Night Movies."

IT REMAINS for NBC, however, to take the greatest liberties with the word. It calls one of its new 90-minute series "Mystery Movie," It really is three action shows of eight episodes each, starring the same characters. The miniseries will be shown in rotation exactly as were the three segments of its "Bold Ones" last season.

Stan Robertson, NBC vice president in charge of its made-for-TV features, has his own definition: a "movie"

World-famed violinist Yehudi Menuhin will conduct and narrate the New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert to be aired at 2 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 2.

Menuhin's musical subject matter for his guest appearance with the orchestra will be Bela Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra."

PAN AND FAN MAIL

JUST a note to find out why the filming companies will go to unlimited expense to film at authentic locations and still turn around and pull obvious boo-boos in their films.

Having been connected with the filming industry in the past, I wonder what has happened to the experts they used to keep around to make sure that the final production was not filled with little foul-ups which in the long run can distract from the art piece.

I use as a flagrant example a film on the series "McCloud" last spring which showed the star riding a horse along New York streets wearing his jacket and then switch to a scene of the star getting off the horse in his shirt sleeves . . . I believe continuity is the term . . .where is it?

The most recent boo-boo I have observed was on the two hour pilot of "O'Hara" of the Treasurer Dept. In one scene, the star was supposed to be in a town on the Mexican Border and was to guard a suit case which was being shipped on a train to LA. The problem is that the star boarded a Union Pacific train and no UP train runs closer to the border than San Bernardino. In another scene of the same film, the star was a passenger in a jet fighter out of a place in Mississippi and in contact with Memphis control. The scenes showed the jets flying over the nicest piece of desert west of El Paso, Texas which was a pretty good trick.

I like to watch the tube and relax and when these glaring faults arise it ruins the whole thing for me just like in the movie "Spartacus," when one of the Roman soldiers passed in front of the camera wearing a wrist-watch.

Let's have some semblance of order in these things especially when it costs several hundred thou to make.

WHEN PAY TV arrives I'll be happy to pay for a program like the "First Tuesday" (Sept. 7, Ch. 4). To me it was one of TV's finest programs . . .

. . . HOW OLD is Agnes Moorehead. As Endora in "Bewitched," she looks to be 50-some, but recently we saw a commercial with her in it, and she looked older than in the show. Her makeup for the role is meant to be extreme, I know, but on her it looks good! And, is she from England, or somewhere back east?

GEORGE ERES, Editor

INSIDE THE TUBE

Phil Abbot of 'The FBI'

By BILL MAHAN

"The FBI" is beginning its seventh season on television, and Efrem Zimbalist is still making us feel everything's all right out there. For added reassurance, Phil Abbott, playing Chief Ward, director of the bureau, makes a brief appearance on camera to tell Ef (usually via telephone) that the case has to be solved and solved fast, that the big boys in Washington are getting nervous. (Washington's a twitchy town anyway, and the recent FCC jitters about all network TV gives that trite old line a whole new comic dimension.)

Phil Abbott, it turns out, is just as reassuring in person because he is that rarity, the star of his own life. I first discovered Abbott in 1968 when I had been dragged by persistent friends to a small, out-of-the-way theater to see a play titled "The Web and The Rock," the Thomas Wolfe book which had been adapted for the stage and directed by Abbott. It was so sensational I began to watch "The FBI" just to get that occasional glimpse of Abbott, to ponder the talent that lay behind that matter-of-fact facade. What was he doing working as an actor in a less than vital role, with that kind of writing and directing ability?

THE OTHER day I found out. The occasional video director of "The FBI" makes very very good money, with very little effort involved. This leaves Abbott the luxury of considerable free time to devote to other projects, mainly to do with writing and direction. He's already directed three episodes of the FBI and the one airing Oct. 3 will mark his fourth. It's titled "The Deadly Gift" and stars Dana Wynter and Fritz Weaver.

Then he's deeply involved with Theater West, the Mark Taper theater at the Music Center in downtown Los Angeles. He adapted, directed and acted in Robert Frost's "Promises To Keep" when Theater West was operating out of UCLA.

Theater West Club Theater is an experimental group operating out of a small theater in West Los Angeles. The public is charged $15 per couple per year, and this allows them to see any and all shows put on by the group. They are guaranteed a minimum of two productions, and last year five were presented. That means the cost for seeing five shows was a paltry $1.50 per person. Abbott not only administrates, but writes, directs, produces or acts in most of the presentations.

THEN, TOO, he's considering going into a group of educational films that would run approximately 15 minutes each. Abbott would direct and produce, and the basic theme would be law enforcement, showing the detective's and policemen's rights. (The time Abbott did on the FBI wasn't wasted after all.)

Finally, he said, there was this lost project he was trying to recover. I would have guessed it was a good night's sleep, but no, it seems he directed an independent feature motion picture for television in 1969 with the working title of "Kansas City I Love You" and starring his good friend Efrem Zimbalist. As often happens, business problems developed and Abbott's labors have yet to see the tube. He wasn't paid much to direct, and the business problems didn't include him — they were between the producer and the backers — but nevertheless, he suffers until his efforts as director are aired for the public and the reviewers. If he's successful in obtaining the rights, I've a hunch we might, for a change, see a superior movie that's made specifically for television.

If you don't watch "The FBI," you most likely don't know what Phil Abbott looks like or who he is. He is not a star in the public sense, and by and large the public has not yet recognized his talents. But he's making it on his own terms, by building slowly through learning and studying. He is unique in an industry that is mostly run by fear and is faltering because of it. If the art of listening is ever revived in this business, Phillp Abbott is a man who has something to say.

JACK BENNY is speechless when confronted with $1 million in cash. It's when Benny appears on "The Funny Side of Money," 9:30 p.m., Tuesday, Ch. 4.

JACQUES COUSTEAU'S UNDERSEA WORLD

Unsinkable sea otter!

"The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," begins its fifth season with "The Unsinkable Sea Otter!" 7 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 7.

Capt. Cousteau and the divers and crew of the Calypso, for the first time, film the underwater life of this shy sea mammal.

Today, only scattered groups of sea otters still live off the coasts of California and Alaska. Once there were vast colonies of otters ranging freely from lower California, up through the Aleutian chain to Siberia.

TWO HUNDRED years ago, the sea otter's glossy fur was first coveted by Japanese nobles and feudal lords. Fur hunters from Russia discovered rich concentrations of otter in Alaska and for a hundred years the Russians competed with the Spanish, British, Japanese and Americans in a fur-hunting rush that all but wiped out the species.

Finally, the sea otter was considered extinct south of Amchitka. But 30 years ago, the sea otter began to reappear in small numbers.

TO FILM sequences for the season premiere program, the Calypso entered frigid Alaskan waters, following the sea lanes of early fur traders to search for the sea otters who are thinly scattered over the vast Aleutian chain where kelp beds are their natural habitat.

Following the study of the Northern sea otter, the Calypso heads for Monterey Harbor, hub of central California's fishing industry. It was amidst this bustling off-shore traffic that the "extinct" California sea otter made its miraculous reappearance.

ARTHUR GODFREY

Goodbye to radio

ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's coming to an end — that long, long time when Arthur Godfrey dominated the airwaves, made headlines with every move, and probably earned more money for CBS than any other performer.

Godfrey is quitting CBS Radio next April 30, on the 27th anniversary of "Arthur Godfrey Time." In all, he has been a performer more than 50 years.

He will devote his energies now to four television specials a year, his 2,500-acre farm in Virginia and to plumping for ecological reforms.

"I'VE BEEN thinking about quitting for a year or so," said Godfrey, who at 68 still has a full head of red hair and the booming foghorn voice that pleased his listeners and terrorized network vice presidents.

Godfrey, the last of an era, who thrived long after the collapse of network radio as an entertainment force, finally fell victim to changes in radio formats.

He said, "In the last year or so the affiliated stations became more independent and less controllable as to where they were putting my program. My show is for the late morning or early afternoon, but some stations were putting it on at five in the morning or six at night.

"They claimed that when they have a rock format a program like mine loses their audiences. So I figure what the hell is the use of all this work."

IN THE 1950s Godfrey was virtually a one-man network. For six years, until 1959, his show was broadcast daily for an hour and a half over both CBS Television and Radio. In addition, two other television shows were on once a week — "Arthur Godfrey and His Friends" and "Talent Scouts."

It was estimated that he earned $22 million a year for CBS and kept 10 per cent of it. He had a great influence over his audience and his views were listened to at the White House during the Eisenhower Administration.

One oldtimer mused, "So Arthur Godfrey's leaving. That means fear will no longer stalk the halls at CBS. He's still a big power and a big moneymaker. At one time they had a vice president who did nothing but look after Godfrey."

IT WAS an era marked by his abrupt firing of some of his most popular performers — Julius La Rosa the singer, was fired right on the air in 1953 — his buzzing of the control tower at the Teterboro, N.J., airport, a hip operation and a triumph over lung cancer.

Was he a willful, unpredictable tyrant who turned on the charm only before the camera and microphone? Or a warm, generous, misunderstood perfectionist? It depends on whom you ask, and the debate continues to this day.

GODFREY stayed at the top for years and he usually did it by tossing away

TV NOTEBOOK

Recently Katharine Hepburn sued a pickled herring maker for $4 million, charging that her distinctive voice was usurped for radio commercials.

Her fans, Miss Hepburn claimed, had been led to believe that she had "stooped to perform below her class, stature, prestige and prominence." The voice, she said, was an imitation.

Henry Fonda, whose voice has also been imitated by the huckster, declines to follow suit.

Fonda's distinctive Nebraskan tones have been faked to sell tires, headache pills and other products on radio and television commercials. His friends are astonished to learn that the voice is not his.

"I've done a lot of public service commercials — for the heart drive, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy and other causes," he reports. "But I've done real commercials for only one company, G.A.F."

Fonda first learned of the imitators' use of his voice on other commercials when he was starting his television series, "The Smith Family." Potential sponsors of the series visited him on the set and one remarked, "We're not sure we are interested in sponsoring the show if Fonda continues doing commercials."

He assured them that the voice they had heard was not his.

Despite this potential loss of revenue, the actor is not considering a suit a la Hepburn. His explanation:

"It would be embarrassing to me to attempt to argue that I had a voice that was so distinctive and valuable that I could sue over somebody else's use of it. I simply couldn't do it.

"Besides, I think it might be a debatable legal point as to whether a man's voice can be copyrighted. The defendants might say, 'We can't control this man's voice; he just happens to sound like Henry Fonda'."

A NEW method of distributing the free tickets to top network television shows being taped at the NBC Television Network studios in Burbank has been announced today by Tom McInerney, manager, Guest Relations, West Coast.

"The tickets will be handed out at 2 p.m. each Monday from now on. When people arrive to seek tickets we will have a page on duty to tell them which line they should get into — and to tell them exactly how many tickets we have. This will prevent the situation whereby 150 people spend three hours in line waiting for a total of 75 tickets."

In the past, the tickets were handed out on a first-come, first-served basis starting at 8 a.m. each Monday morning. The demand for tickets to such shows as "The Dean Martin Show," "The Flip Wilson Show," "The Funny Side" and, during its West Coast visits, the "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," was so heavy that the lines often began forming before sundown on Sunday.

As a result, the Burbank studio area often looked like an abandoned picnic area by the time the ticket windows opened — and when the 500 or 600 people in line found out there were only 100 tickets available, they left disappointed.

McInerney announced that ticket requests arriving by mail will be honored in most cases, but not for "The Dean Martin Show" and "The Flip Wilson Show," which get such heavy demands that there would be waiting lists of more than a year.

SETTLE down to watch a television movie this season and chances are you will see not less than 32 commercials — nearly twice as many as a year ago.

The networks are not selling more time for commercials, but they are running more commercials in the same time.

The 60-second commercial has become a rarity on the tube this season. The 30-second commercial, from a toehold a year ago, now dominates the medium.

The voluntary code of the National Association of Broadcasters limits networks in prime time to three minutes of commercials a half hour, six an hour and 14 minutes during a two-hour movie.

Until January, 60 seconds was the shortest time the networks would sell a sponsor, although some advertisers were sneaking in 30-second "piggyback" spot by splitting a minute. Then CBS began to sell 30-second spots and the rush was on.

The TV Bureau of Advertising says that by June 65 per cent of the commercials shown on the networks were 30's. The figure is believed to be even higher with the opening of the new season.

"It came about because the advertisers wanted it," said a bureau spokesman. "The networks didn't want it. But the advertisers said it was more efficient to use 30's. Survey showed that viewer awareness of a 30 was 75 per cent that of a full minute."

The advertisers figure they are getting three-quarters of the attention for half the price.

Outside of prime time the networks are permitted 12 minutes of commercial time an hour.

SPECIAL

YOUNG PEOPLE'S Concert (2), 2 p.m. — Renowned violin virtuoso Yehudi Menuhin is guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic, narrating Bela Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra". (Three more "Concerts" are due this season, two with Leonard Bernstein.)

CALIFORNIA Shakin' Away? (11) 6:30 p.m.—Pete Miller looks at the real and present dangers from earthquakes, probing the Van Norman Dam site and the new VA hospital being planned astride a fault. Excerpts from a 1969 documentary of the same title are incorporated.

JACQUES COUSTEAU (7), 7 p.m. — 5th season premiere. Cousteau travels to Monterey and the Aleutians for a look at the heartening saga of the survival of the sea otter, an engaging creature nearly wiped out by fur hunters earlier in this century, and now threatened by poachers, pollution and abalone fishermen. (Upcoming are studies of the octopus, manatee and dolphin.)

DORIS DAY (left) and Jackie Joseph play a scene from "The Doris Day Show," 9:30 p.m., Monday, Ch. 2.

SPORTS TODAY

NFL FOOTBALL, 6 p.m. (7), has Frank Gifford, Howard Cosell and Don Meredith at Busch Memorial Stadium where the New York Jets face the St. Louis Cardinals.

SPECIAL

LAUGH-IN (4), 8 p.m. — Screen queen Rita Hayworth camps it up as a heartless nurse and as a very tipsy film star. She also reads poetry with Rowan and Martin, does a Sadie Thompson dance with the show's gals and duets with The Tasteful Lady (Lily Tomlin) in some special material by Billy Barnes. Jill St. John makes a cameo appearance, and Ernestine romances Frank Sinatra.

Flicks big on TV

on television is any film program longer than an hour in length — if it costs more. He defends "World Premiere" as movies because they come in on budgets of around $750,000 each.

Besides, after making the off-network rerun rounds, some of them are available for theatrical use — in foreign markets.

Budgets for ABC's twin "movie" series run around $500,000 for each 90 minutes, and so do CBS's. Stars of the shows receive between $15,000 and $25,000.

WHERE ONCE the Universal Studios dominated the movie-for-TV market, the bonanza now is spread around many film factories of Hollywood. ABC's deal—typical—with its producers gives the network the right to two broadcasts. Then the property reverts to the studio—which sells it for more reruns.

ABC movies have attracted stars of the caliber of Bette Davis, Jane Wyman, Shelley Winters, Barbara Stanwyck and the late Van Heflin. CBS has Mia Farrow signed for one show.

On fast-shooting schedules and strict budgets, a lot of the product is bound to have the look of theatrical films designed to fill out the second half of a double feature. There will be, inevitably, some memorable shows, as evidenced by NBC's "My Sweet Charlie" two seasons ago. Television actors enjoy working in them when they have a break in their own production schedules — it gives them a chance to step out of their familiar TV character and stretch some atrophying acting muscles.

This season viewers will have available around 100 made-for-TV movies. Added to the regular two-hour theatrical film rebroadcasts, movie fans should be quite content.

Maybe next season it will be the time for the Western to turn up again. Television travels on a big wheel of formats.

Unsinkable sea otters

nia otter is Dr. James Mattison Jr., underwater naturalist, and Judson E. Vandevere, who is engaged in sea otter research at Stanford University's Hopkins Marine Station.

THE FUR TREATY of 1911 protected the otter's skin but in no way begins to cover the perils that abound in the world to which he has returned.

Capt. Cousteau finds that small boat traffic and oil spill accidents are great threats to them.

In a filmed interview with a pair of Monterey's concerned citizens, Cousteau is told that a cloud of controversy continues to hang over the fate of the California sea otter. Today, for the second time, the sea otter is at the mercy of man.

Rod Serling narrates.

CUSTOM WIDE TREAD WHITE STRIPE POLYGLAS

The Custom Wide Tread Polyglas tire has the low, broad look that says "action." It has a 7-rib wrap-around tread — the traction design is carried right around the shoulders — to resist side slip on curves, corners and sudden stops. The tread is 1" to 2" wider than comparable conventional size tires. The body construction is 2 plus 2 — 2 polyester cord body plies for cushioning flex, 2 fiberglass cord belts to suppress tread squirm and to hold tread grooves open for good traction-grip. Tread elements are arranged so that traction angles are alternated in each rib for a balanced, stabilized traction design.

CRITICS' CORNER

THE CHILDRENS' SHOWS, Saturday morning, "Take A Giant Step," "Curiosity Shop," "You Are There," "Mr. Wizard," "The Jackson Five."

The promises made by the television networks to improve children's programs began to take shape with the premiere of the fall shows Saturday morning.

Prodded by the government, parents and critics, and outshone by the success of "Sesame Street," ABC, CBS and NBC set out 18 months ago to upgrade the quality of the shows.

NBC's "Take A Giant Step" is a phenomenal show in which three teenage hosts take a subject of interest to children — in the opening show "beginnings and ends" — and explore its facets through film and discussion.

The show, broadcast live with different hosts and subjects each week, was spontaneous and reflected both the searching of the youthful hosts for answers lebrity Register, Miss Moorehead was born in Clinton, Mass., Dec. 6, 1906.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

THIS MAY sound morbid and even frightening, but I would like to see more violence on TV. My taste for TV is cloyed to the hilt by all these inane comedies and placid, uneventful dramas. The people who clamor against violence on TV are hiding their basic animal instincts behind a facade of "civilization and intelligence" and are in actuality suppressing just as many lions as their pugnacious counterparts. And what better release than a visual one? A lot better than direct participation.

Debby Butcher,
Bellflower

. . . WHO DO I write to about the fouled up TV shows?

Four of our favorite shows come on at the same time, 7:30 p.m., Tuesday: Glen Campbell, Ch. 2; "Ironside," Ch. 4; "Mod Squad," Ch. 7; Bill Burrud, Ch. 13.

This is just one example of the mixed up mess this year.

Lillian Thiesing,
Carson

(For network shows: Ch. 2—write CBS, 51 W. 52nd St., NYC, 10019; Ch. 4—NBC, RCA Bilding, NYC, 10020; Ch. 7—ABC-TV, 1330 NBC, RCA Building, NYC, 10019. Non-network Ch. 13's address is KCOP, 915 N. LaBrea, Hollywood, Calif., 90038).

. . . AS FOR Australian newsman Kevin Sanders (leaving Ch. 5) . . . there are plenty of good newsmen (there) we can understand, such as Larry McCormick, Larry Burrell or Barney Morris.

V. Price,
Long Beach

THE U.S. Surgeon-General has just reported that violence on TV may contribute directly to aggressive activities in children.

I feel there is still room for improvement in this area of violence on TV, and some sort of stand should be taken to prevent more of the rot from invading the tube and rendering it intolerable.

Nelsena Hann,
Lakewood

I CAN understand why Mrs. W. E. Thomas (TeleVues, Sept. 19) would be irritated with someone putting down Lawrence Welk, and if that is who she likes, fine. But why does she have to bring in "young people and their raucous music, attire and four-letter words crammed down our throats"?

Why do older people, when they get mad, pick us or our music to refer to? Maybe it is loud, but if we enjoy it — what's so wrong? As for the four-letter words, I cannot understand why she said that. A lot of people older than I curse a lot and for no real reason. One time, I wish older people would leave us out of their arguments!

Billie Stevens,
Long Beach

. . . LAWRENCE WELK can have his millions and I hope he makes more in thanks for happy hours I've spent listening to his programs . . .

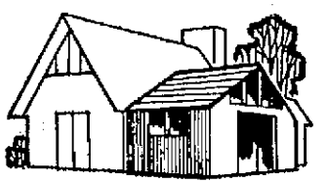

N.F.B.,
Long Beach

(This concludes the Welk music correspondence. Peace!)

Year of the 'Old Goat'

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Take heart, men of America! This is television's Year of the Old Goat.

Look at the line-up of video's leading men. You'll find few pretty young guys on the air. Last year they gave us downy-faced doctors, lawyers and cops by the score.

They bombed. Bombed. Bombed. No one could remember their faces from week to week.

This is the year of machismo, maturity and Geritol.

WE'VE GOT Anthony Quinn, Jimmy Stewart, George Kennedy, Glenn Ford and William Conrad starring in new weekly series.

None will ever see 40 again. Some would welcome age 50 once more.

And look who they're joining: Jim Arness, Lorne Greene, Raymond Burr, Robert Young, Jack Lord, Efrem Zimbalist, Mike Connors, Tony Randall, Jack Klugman, Carroll O'Connor and Peter Graves.

They too are past or approaching the half century mark.

Think of the joy their presence on the tube brings to toupee manufacturers, hair dyed tycoons and the vitamin industry.

A SPRINKLING of younger males has sneaked in: Dean Jones, Bobby Sherman, Jim Franciscus and Glen Campbell and one or two others.

But there is an augury, portent, in the explosion of virile older men in the most mass of mass media. Why would viewers prefer to see old veterans to adventuresome young bucks?

Wherein lies their magic?

For one thing, they can be distinguished from the leading ladies. Their voices are deep, the whiskers are barbed wire and they don't take any guff from effeminate males who worry about the crease in their pants.

It is a time for the verities of maleness in the face of women's lib. A reassertion of masculinity.

NONE OF them wears hair to their shoulders. Nor is there a lisp among them. They reflect strength, integrity, character and poise. None of them, saints be praised, are "trying to find themselves" or "soul searching."

They know who they are. They know where they are going.

These factors appeal to male viewers because the guy drinking a beer on the receiving end of the tube can identify with them. Females say, "Yeah, there's the kind of man for me."

IT MAY be fantasy, but it is heartening in a sense.

The unsure boy, the drug addict, the guy who visits his analyst for advice on whether to seduce the leading lady are, for the moment, passe.

Can you see Tony Quinn or George Kennedy, for instance, telling a shrink he can't face life because his teddy bear was filched?

Psychiatrists may say the move to older men is a father-figure manifestation. That in these days men are unsure of their masculinity and these Quinn-Kennedy types reassure them.

Truth is, women rule the tube at home, and they find men in their 40s and 50s more attractive and sexually stimulating than kids with a cause. Most women are happier with men than causes or kids.

If they want young men, they can tune in football games, the world series or the wonderful world of sport.

and the preparation they had made.

ABC's "Curiosity Shop" is a commendable effort and it also has one theme throughout each show.

CBS revived "You Are There," its noteworthy recreation of historical events. The "Children's Film Festival" follows at 1 p.m. and brief news items called "In The News" are shown eight times during the morning. Other than that, CBS chose not to tamper with its profitable string of animated cartoons.

The commercials seem muted from the frenetic pace of last season. Of course, there are still too many and too frequent interruptions of these shows.

"Curiosity Shop," for instance, was never able to gain momentum before the next load of commercials was dropped in. Particularly in NBC's "Mr. Wizard" it would have been better if a complete train of thought could have been completed without interruption.

Don Herbert's "Mr. Wizard" is in another revival. There is more electronic gadgetry, but Herbert's demonstrations and explanations remain as thoughtful and remarkable as before.

ABC's animated "Jackson 5" was clever, colorful and filled with the music of the singing group. Most of the other animated cartoons, as before, rely heavily on the chase and physical violence and the presence of the showcase productions serves also to point up how much remains to be done.

—Jerry Buck, AP

NIGHT GALLERY, aired Sept. 22, Ch. 4; CAROL BURNETT SHOW, Sept. 22, Ch. 2.

SOME WEIRD things are turning up on Rod this season expanded into a weekly series.

Tacked on the end of Sterling's "Night Gallery," NBC's Wednesday night schedule, the hour seems to be the flip side of "Love, American Style," a number of short, unrelated pieces but with the macabre substituted for love and gruesome for comedy.

The most recent contribution opened with E. G. Marshall playing a gentle funeral home proprietor who collected corpses. Another long segment had Vincent Price play a professor training a seminar of robot students to become racists and bigots. Its message was lost in the shuffle.

There were two short blackouts. One, which telegraphed its ending early, had Imogene Coca building herself a suicide cell. The other, presumably designed for grisly humor, involved cannibalism.

Maybe the whole thing is in fun. But for some the program seemed a tasteless exercise in horror, light years away from the sort of thing Alfred Hitchcock produced with sly grace.

MICHAEL SHEA, who plays son of Dick Van Dyke (top) brings girl friend Ta-Tanisha home for dinner on "The Dick Van Dyke Show," 9 p.m., Saturday, Ch. 2.

CAROL BURNETT and her company of comedians have moved to an earlier time period on CBS but are keeping the same format. It opens with her question-and-answer period with the audience and moves into the body a show strong in sketches laced with musical numbers. Most pleasant interlude of the evening Wednesday was a Burt Bacharach medley by Carol and the Carpenters.

Dreariest was an operating room sketch with Tim Conway overdoing things as a senile, palsied surgeon.

Carol's clothes, a highlight for the female audience, are more chic and elegant than ever.

The BIBLE Says

Question:
Does the Bible condemn men wearing long hair?

There is a very plain New Testament passage to which we must go to see what the Bible says on this question from a reader, "Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame to him? But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her . ." (1 Cor. 11:14-15).

The word "nature" suggests that which is "natural." Thus, it is normal for men to have short hair. The emphasis in the passage suggests that a clear distinction is to be made between male and female in the length of hair. Read the passage again. Notice that the same thing that "is a shame to him" (long hair) "is a glory to her." The Bible says, then, that there is to be a distinction between male and female in the length of their hair. This distinction would make it equally wrong for a woman to wear her hair so short as to appear as a man.

One may argue that Jesus had long hair, but such conviction seems to be based more on tradition, motion pictures, and Renaissance paintings than on any solid evidence. The evidence that we have shows busts of Roman emperors, who were the style-setters of that time, all with short hair.

The Bible also condemns effeminacy (1 Cor. 6:9), and this would seem to be a form of it. Those who wish to do what the Bible says will be less concerned about an artist's conception of Jesus, or what George Washington looked like — and more concerned about the inspired apostle Paul's forthright statement: "... if a man have long hair, it is a shame to him."

(NOTE: We have received numbers of questions from our readers, and they will be answered chronologically. We appreciate your interest in what the Bible says!)

Introducing New Excitement in Interior Design

Wait till you see the new Regency/Oxford furniture by Continental! Furniture so new . . . so fresh you can't keep from smiling when you see it . . . And it's exclusive with Carl's.

The complete line includes living room, dining room, bedroom and den furniture. Upholstery fabrics are available in a wide variety of colors and textures. Woods are available in four custom finishes . . . Regency blue, white and yellow and Oxford.

There are dozens of carefully coordinated items. Sofas, chairs, tables, chests and accessories. All are beautifully finished and tastefully accented to compliment each other.

Each display is a completely new experience in furniture design and decorating. Besides the room pictured here, there are three others to excite and stimulate your imagination. An elegant dining room, a luxurious bedroom, a handsome den. See them everyday, 10 to 5:30. . . . Monday and Friday nights 'till 9 and Sunday 10-5. They're also on view in our windows any time.

The cost of this beautiful new line? That's another delightful surprise!

8 Big Band Reprise — Tex Beneke Going Strong
As the wave of nostalgia swells in America, big bands of the Golden Era are emerging from near dormancy to again fill ballrooms and concert halls. A leader in the return of the big bands is Tex Beneke, who recently performed at Disneyland. Bill Lee Shelton of The Press-Telegram's news desk interviewed Beneke.

14 A Honey of a Business
Honeybees pose one of nature's great mysteries. Although scientists say they have little intelligence, they are superb architects, possess a marvelous memory for places and have a sophisticated guidance system. Charles J. Haluska, a freelancer from San Rafael, writes about honeybees and the business of beekeeping.

16 Debut '72: The Total Look in Home Fashions
The home furnishings industry is putting it all together this fall for Debut '72, a nationwide program designed to let consumers view coordinated room settings representing various lifestyles. Hundreds of Southland stores are cooperating in the project. Judy Hazlett, L. P-T home furnishings editor, looks at the Total Look. With color photos.

Days of Wine and Roses

These are the days of truth in the wine country from now until past mid-October, the harvest days when the white grapes, the green grapes, the gold grapes, the ruby grapes, the black grapes are cut from the vines by hooked knives in skilled hands, piled high on the huge lumbering gondolas and carried from field to platform.

This is the time to visit the wineries, to sniff the heady, musky, primeval odor that perfumes the air of entire counties as the grapes are dumped into the Garolla crushers that separate them from their stems and leaves and gently bruise them in preparation for the presses.

If you have already used up all your vacation time in Las Vegas, you can drive out the San Bernardino Freeway of a Sunday to the Cucamonga district where there are almost 30 wineries open to the public. Stop at the Brookside Winery in Guasti, just off the Archibald Avenue freeway exit, and visit the wine museum. The round trip is less than 100 miles.

But if you really want to celebrate these days as they should be celebrated, travel to the Napa-Sonoma country north of San Francisco, where America's finest table wines and some of the finest in the world are produced. Take at least two days and go north on Highway 29 from Napa to Calistoga then over the wild and winding Mark West Springs Road to Napa and down Highway 12 to Sonoma.

In Northern California, the autumnal changes are more pronounced and the carpenter Gothic homes and churches of Napa sit amidst the red and gold flames of autumn elms and aspens and cottonwoods. Napa and St. Helena and God knows how many other places hold wine festivals during this time of year, but the whole country has an air of festival as the gondolas dump their loads and the fermenting juices bubble and froth in the huge vats.

No matter how busy, most of the wineries still have time to show visitors through their facilities, explain the complex process of making wine and to pour samples in their tasting rooms. No one knows how long this fine old tradition of hospitality will continue. The family-owned vineyards are being bought up one by one by large corporations such as Heublein and Nestle.

Man started cultivating the wine grape about 6,000 years ago, give or take a few years. The Bible notes that Noah planted a vineyard and promptly got bombed on the product. The Greek poet Anacreon considered wine an aphrodisiac. He died at age 85 from choking on a grape seed. Plato, nearly as old, gave up the ghost with a cup in his hand at a banquet.

Andre Tchelistcheff, the Russian-born, French-raised winemaster of Beaulieu Vineyard at Rutherford, north of Napa, is in his 70s and appears to be good for another 20 or 30 years. He credits his vigor to lots of good wine taken frequently. Dr. Theodor Heuss, president of the West German Federal Republic from 1949 to 1959, started each day of his adult life with a cocktail composed of equal parts of chilled champagne and orange juice. He didn't retire from office until he was 75.

In deference to the palates of their visitors, the wine-tasting rooms ban smoking. Curiously enough, Winemaster Tchelistcheff has been a heavy smoker all his life. A few years ago, his physician banned cigarettes and Tchelistcheff dutifully quit. He found, however, that the wines tasted differently. It was sort of like switching from the English system of weights and measures to the metric system. Rather than go through the long process of re-educating his palate, the winemaster went back to smoking.

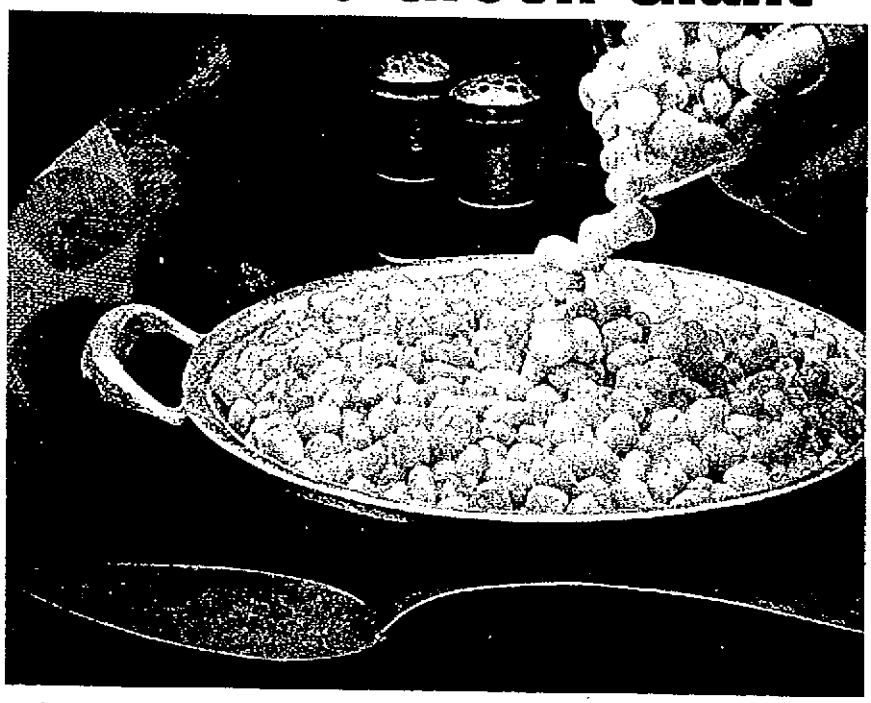

Beaulieu is perhaps the most French of the California vineyards. Nearby Inglenook has a tasting room with stained glass windows, goblets and carved oaken casks from the 1500s. The Beringer Brothers winery at St. Helena has limestone caverns hewed out by Chinese coolies labor. Over them was erected a replica of the house in Mainz, Germany, where the Beringer grosspapas learned the art of oenology. At Mayacamas Vineyard, the glorious purple fruit lines the slope of an extinct volcano, and at Buena Vista at Sonoma is the place where it all started — where Agoston Haraszthy, the "farher" of California wine making, brought his 200,000 cuttings of European vines in 1862.

The wineries all have bottles and cases of their product on sale at the tasting room. Indeed, the only way you can buy the very good Zinfandel and other fine wines produced at Windsor Vineyards north of Santa Rosa is at its tasting rooms or by mail order; it bypasses the liquor stores and sells directly to the consumer. At any rate, a very civilized way to survive in the wine country is to buy a bottle at a tasting room, some cheese from any of the small but excellent cheese factories in the area, some french bread at a bakery and have a picnic at some beautiful spot such as Bothe-Napa Valley State Park on Highway 29 south of Calistoga. Many of the wineries also have picnic grounds and tables.

But watch it. Wine can sneak up on you. By the time you have visited half a dozen vineyards and picnicked over a fifth, you will have consumed the equivalent of five or six highballs. That's enough to stone some people, or to make some drivers sleepy. □

Taste "something special" from the Green Giant

FROZEN VEGETABLES YOU COOK IN BUTTER SAUCE, NOT WATER.

The Jolly Green Giant grows the best-tasting vegetables this side of summer. And freezes them his own special way—in a flavor-tight cooking pouch, with delicately seasoned butter sauce.

The pouch seals in freshness and flavor, keeps out cooking water. You cook the vegetables in butter sauce, not water. The delicate buttery flavor accents the garden-fresh flavor of the Giant's vegetables. And the taste is something special.

Try any of the Green Giant's special frozen vegetables—in butter sauce or elegant creamy sauces. And enjoy a special savings, too. Ho ho.

Glad you asked that!

By HY GARDNER

John and Christine . . . another hitch together.

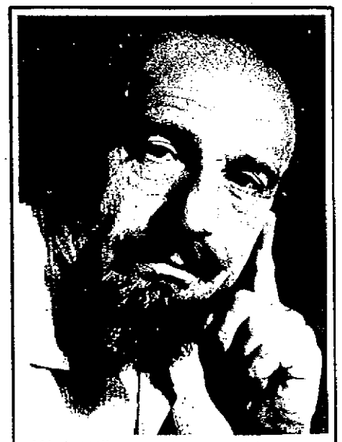

Richard Nixon . . . in college, he was "Gloomy Gus."

Orson, Marlon and Woody . . . guess which one most closely resembles Napoleon?

Mae West . . . the game, not the score, interests her.

Mitch Miller . . . a theory on violence in New York.

Q: I hear that Mitch Miller, who still likes living on New York's West Side, has a theory on the violence there. What is it? Gordon S., Pasadena.

A: He blames it on inflation. "I've noticed," Mitch muses, "that whenever the cost of living (the price of apartments, food, clothes, medical bills, etc.) goes up — the incidence of violence goes up with it." About Mayor Lindsay cracking down on the hordes of prostitutes patrolling the streets, Miller says: "If they jailed them all, it would cut the population in half!"

Q: I've read that Mae West has had many lovers in her time. Did she ever keep count of how many? — J. Thomas (of the Doubting Thomases), Cleveland.

A: As recently as a year ago Miss West told a reporter: "I don't remember how many lovers I've had, there were so many. I was never interested in the score, though — only the game. Like my famous line, 'It's not the men in my life that counts but the life in my men!' "

Q: Did Richard Milhous Nixon, when he went to college, have a nickname? If so, what was it?—L.M.E., Washington.

A: "Gloomy Gus" — playfully purloined by pranksters from a comic-strip character who looked at the world through morose-colored glasses.

Q: The young man who played Christine Jorgensen in the movie of her life story — isn't he now serving with the Army in Vietnam?—DonnaMae T., Seattle.

A: No. John Hansen is serving another hitch with Miss Jorgensen. They're co-starring in "Oh, Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad" at the Forbidden City in Honolulu. "Madame Rosepettle" is a role Christine relishes so much she pops up in the play summer after summer.

Q: Has anyone ever broken Ernie Nevers' 1929 record of six touchdowns in one professional game?—J.T., Birmingham.

A: No. But two players have tied it: Bill Jones of the Cleveland Browns (in 1951) and Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears (in 1965). However — Ernie still holds the record for most points scored in one game. Playing for the Chicago Cardinals against the Bears, he not only scored six touchdowns but kicked four points after touchdown — a total of 40 points.

Q: A Napoleon buff insists Josephine was a black woman. Was she? Also, did he look more like an Orson Welles or a Marlon Brando?—Clement R., Denver.

A: More like a Woody Allen! Napoleon was described as "small, thin, yellow-faced, a sloppy dresser." And yes. The Empress Josephine (his first wife) was a Creole of mixed blood. After her first spouse was guillotined, the Emperor, struck with her breathtaking beauty, lost his head and married her.

Q: Didn't President Franklin Roosevelt once threaten to abolish football? If so, why?—Ricky S., Richmond, Va.

A: It was President Theodore Roosevelt. In 1905 he warned the Big Three of college football (Yale, Princeton and Harvard) that if they didn't create rules to reduce injuries to players he'd order the game abolished. Which (according to Herb Kamm and Will Mullins Jr.) led to the formation of the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee.

Q: How come Richard Burton is letting his wife play a topless waitress in their new film?—Douglas R., Amarillo, Tex.

A: He's not. Though Elizabeth does play a waitress in the Mexico-made movie, "Hammersmith Is Out," she's not topless. It's an over-endowed rock group (whose name is unprintable) who sing and swing topless. Richard plays a nightclub owner, an escapee from a criminal asylum.

BIG BAND REPRISE

the beat goes on for Tex Beneke

By BILL LEE SHELTON

Once again the music spotlight smiles warmly on the big bands.

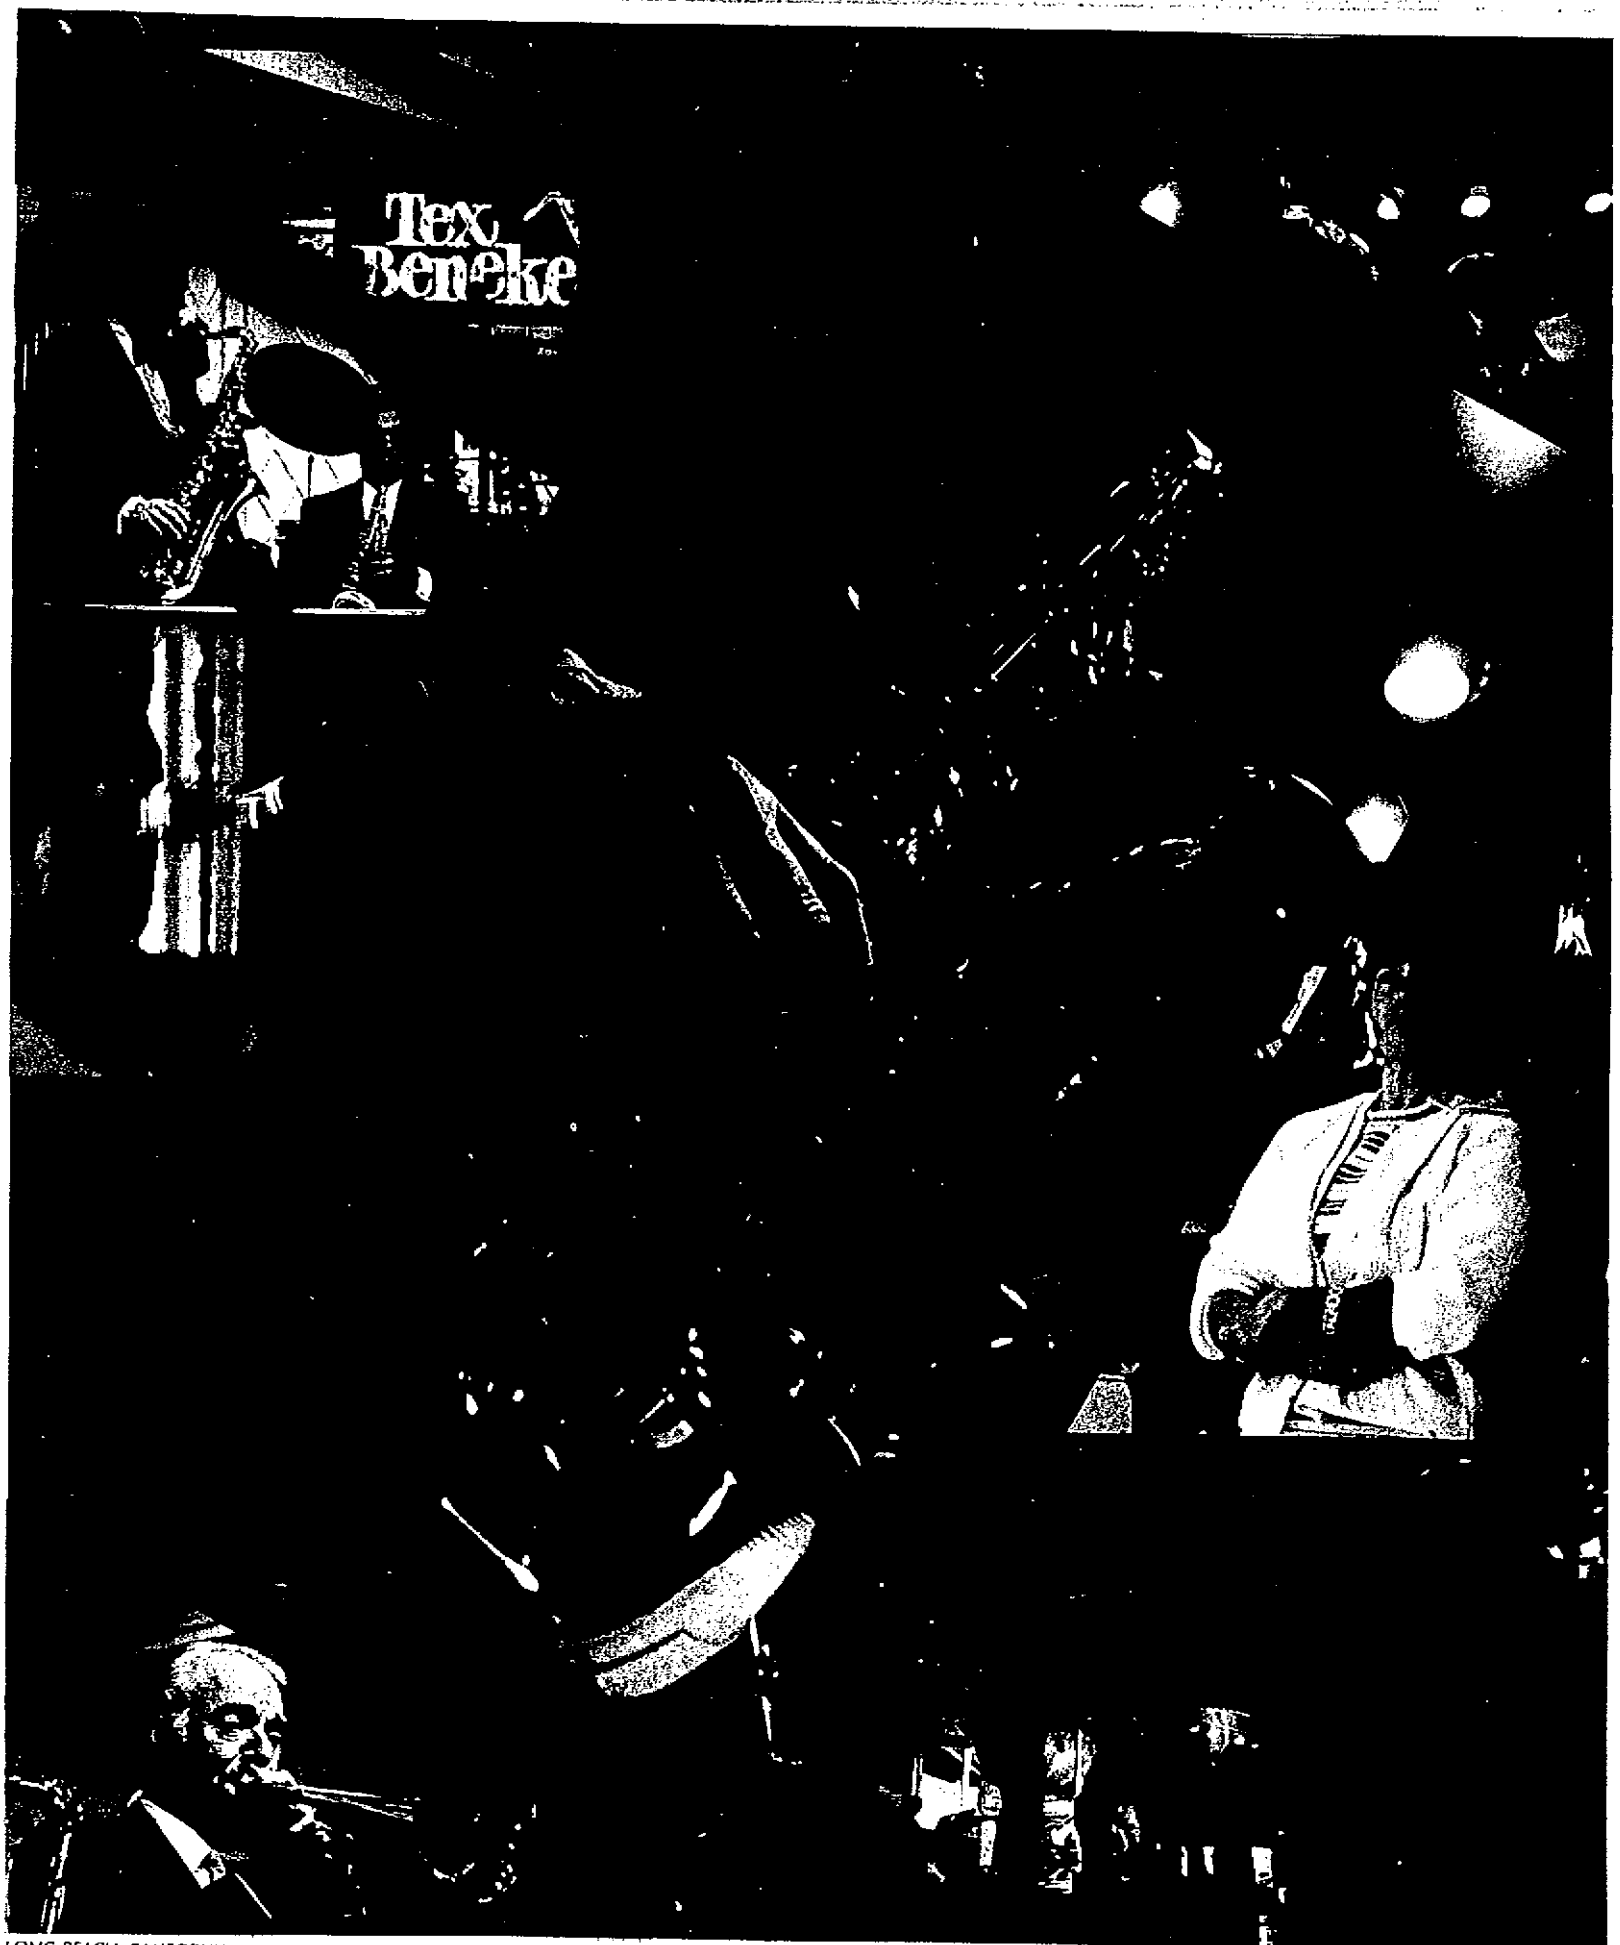

More and more couples throughout the land are turning out to dance and listen to tunes that arouse in them pleasant memories, a magical moment, a certain place, a special person.

A World War II veteran in Dallas, holding the hand of his now matronly wife, shyly edges to the bandstand and asks Guy Lombardo to play "Boo Hoo," an old standby that even outdates the war. Freddy Martin at a Nevada spa gets repeated requests for "Tonight We Love," a pop version of a classic that swamped juke boxes and radio when the Forties were new. Bob Crosby, fronting the Bobcats he first formed way back in 1935 A.D., brings down the house every time he sings "Basin Street Blues," a hit that goes back almost to the birth of jazz in the Delta Country. Harry James says he plays "Sleepy Lagoon" so often the wails of his trumpet haunt his sleep.

The wave of nostalgia is swelling. Big bands of the Golden Era are emerging from near dormancy to again fill ballrooms and concert halls. The night-club and private party circuits are flourishing.

Albums are appearing and selling well with cover names like Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington,

BIG BAND

Charlie Barnet, Shep Fields, Paul Weston, Henry Mancini and Les Brown.

The trend isn't limited, either, to middle age couples. Youths, often accompanying their parents just for laughs, are coming away impressed and with a new respect for rhythm and melody. They are finding out there are good sounds besides the loud, jarring beat of rock. They are discovering there is more to a good tune than three chords. Once again the jargon of youth rings with references to brothers Ray Eberle and Bob Eberly, Pete Fountain, Glenn Miller and Tex Beneke.

Anaheim's fabled Disneyland, with its year around outdoor climate, is contributing much to the resurgence of the big bands. Recent bookings at the fun emporium read almost like a who's who of show and band business. Wayne King, the old Waltz King, has been a big hit at Disneyland. Others are Xavier Cugat, Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Ray McKinley and Bob Crosby.

Perhaps the unofficial leader of the return of the big bands is a big, affable native of Fort Worth, Gordon Lee Beneke, who for some reason in the trade and to fans is known as Tex. With the Modernaires and songstress Paula Kelly, Beneke in August was back at Disneyland to thrill thousands of Southlanders with his book, plus the sounds of the great Glenn Miller for whom Tex played tenor saxophone through the Golden Era of the Big Bands.

When Tex chugged away on "Chattanooga Choo Choo" last month, the place was bedlam. Thousands of young and old Disneylanders stomped, whistled and cheered and requested a repeat of the tune that was No. 1 on the radio Hit Parade the weekend the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

"I've Got a Gal in Kalamazoo," another oldtimer, brought raves from the dancers and listeners and was repeated by demand.

"I have enough requests to last three days," said the smiling maestro during a break in the program. "And that's the only problem. There just isn't enough time to play what everyone wants to hear and what I would like to give them."

The kids were loving it, too. "I saw a young couple dancing the jitterbug and they couldn't have been a day over 16," Tex observed. They must have learned it in a studio somewhere. They really were good. I stopped one young couple and couldn't resist asking, 'Hey kid, where were you in 1942?'"

On one occasion elsewhere, Tex says, he was confronted with a pure hippie type -- long hair, facial adornment, beads and all -- listening with open mouth.

"I was sure he was there just to put me down. But, when I asked him how he liked it, his response was a surprising, 'Man, that's great . . .'"

Adds Tex: "The present reception to big band music, and to mine in particular, is very heartwarming." He disclosed that just before his Disneyland appearance he played at Blossom Music Center in Cleveland to a smiling, cheering mob of 10,239 fans. He said a standing ovation there brought tears to his eyes.

A class reunion in Duluth, earlier, greeted the Beneke band with red carpet treatment from 7,000 faithfuls. The year before, 6,500 paid admissions at the Hollywood Palladium shattered all records.

Why all this renewed popularity? Everybody's emotional. People like to remember and laugh and cry, says Beneke.

"And it may be they are fed up with an overdose of rock. Most likely it is a cycle.

Nostalgia isn't the sole property of older people, philosophizes the Texan. "When a schoolgirl buys her high school album, she is buying something she can look back upon fondly. There's little difference in that and someone older wanting to remember how he courted his wife to the strains of Ray Eberle and the haunting lyrics of "Serenade in Blue."

BIG BAND

Beneke says he has all the engagements he can handle. He jets from place to place from his home in St. Louis, the city he chose because of its central location. His musicians are selected by one of several agents located strategically in and around cities where engagements are likely. Few bands, says Tex, travel intact any more because of the high costs while producers expect bands to perform at rates of 10 to 15 years back.

Beneke believes the big band decline in the Fifties can be attributed largely to the demise of the big ballrooms and not so much to the advent of TV. There are too few rooms left where a producer can house enough people to make it pay, he says.

The big pavilions after the war, Beneke laments, were turned into bowling alleys, a horrible fate he considers an affront to music in general.

Beneke plays numerous private parties and country club dates. Disneyland is one of his favorite spots. He will fill several dates in the Southland this fall.

During his August stand at Disneyland, Tex Beneke and Betty, his charming, statuesque, red-haired wife, were guests in the Long Beach home of Dick Hecker, a recording specialist, also a compositor for the Long Beach Independent and Press-Telegram and longtime friend of Tex.

Beneke and Hecker also have in common the fact that Tex's father, Frank, for years was pressroom foreman for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. Thus, the bandleader still has more than a trace of printer's ink in his blood.

While the Benekes and Heckers visited, the busy Tex spared time for an interview about his career, the Miller legend and other things musical.

Beneke was destined to be a leader, if only at the head of a band. Beneke is German, he says, and his mother named him for Maj. Gen. John Brown Gordon, the Confederate corps commander who led the last attack upon Union forces in front of Appomattox, and for the great Southern gentleman and war commander, Robert Edward Lee.

He was christened Tex by Glenn Miller, who used to stand in front of Beneke while directing with comments such as, "Hey, Texas. How do you like that? Let's do it again."

What does he think of the sobriquet? "Well," drawls Tex, "you know that everyone, once he leaves Texas, is called Tex. But, sometimes it has had amusing side effects.

"For example, I have been mistaken for Tex Ritter, the Western song man of 'High Noon' fame. Also, once a patron requested me to play 'Smoke, Smoke, Smoke That Cigarette,' a novelty tune made famous in the Fifties by another Tex, one Tex Williams."

Beneke says when he was a little boy he had a big harmonica he had fashioned with a wire so he could play it and a guitar at the same time. Then, one day at a school homeroom program he heard a boy play a saxophone. "I knew right then the sax was for me," he recalls.

He told his father of his desire. On the Christmas when he was 9 years old Tex got his first saxophone.

"Unlike most other kids," says Tex, "I liked to practice. And when the other boys were out playing ball, and the like, I was inside busily tooting. My father paid for lessons and I went to an old German in Fort Worth three times a week.

"The teacher would give me a lesson to learn at home and I would memorize it. At the next session he would play along with me and, as was correct, keep his eyes on the sheet music spread before us. He noticed, however, my eyes were straying, but went along with me.

"One day, though, the teacher lowered the boom with this highly understandable rejoinder, 'Goddamit, don't memorize. And what's more, don't pat your foot. It doesn't look good. If you have to mark time, wiggle your big toe.'

"Of course I heeded the advice on both scores," Tex recalls, "and it helped my sight reading. But my mother always wondered why I wore out the toes of so many socks."

Tex was an accomplished musician by the time he entered Paschal High School in Fort Worth. He says he got his first good job with the Ben Young Orchestra playing at the Texas Centennial in Fort Worth in 1936. They had a ready-made audience. Paul Whiteman and Joe Venuti were playing alternately at the Casa Manana and when it closed for the night the bandsmen and their crowds would converge on the Pioneer Palace to mix and mingle with Ben Young and his boys.

Tex was appearing in Detroit with Young in 1938 when he joined Glenn Miller. He tells of the monumental development thus:

Gene Krupa was interviewing prospects after having left Miller to form his own band. The drum impresario chose three members of Young's group, but had nothing for Tex.

Miller later called Krupa for some tips on good saxists and Krupa recommended Tex. Miller asked why, if Tex were so good, he didn't hire Beneke for his band. Krupa answered that he simply had no need for him.

"I received a personal call from Miller," Tex remembers. "I was sort of undecided. I was having a good time, but I asked Glenn how much he paid."

"I'll pay you $50 a week, the same as I pay everybody in the band," was Miller's answer.

"For some reason . . . I don't know why I did it," says Tex, "I told Miller I would join him for $52.50 a week." There was a long and pregnant pause, Tex recalls.

"All right, you sonofabitch," Miller howled. "I'll give it to you."

Tex says that when the other members of the Miller band learned he was getting $2.50 a week more than they were, it made them all "mad as hell." Tex here added the economics history note that, in those days, $52.50 was a lot of money.

Tex grins as he remembers playing dates in New York with his name on a marquee that also bore in smaller letters the notation: Extra added attraction — Martin and Lewis. He says he still chides Dino about it every time he sees the now-world famous singer and actor.

Shortly after Tex joined Miller, but not necessarily for that reason, says Tex, GM's band shot to the top in popularity. His reedy sound and unusual arrangements became the rage of the nation.

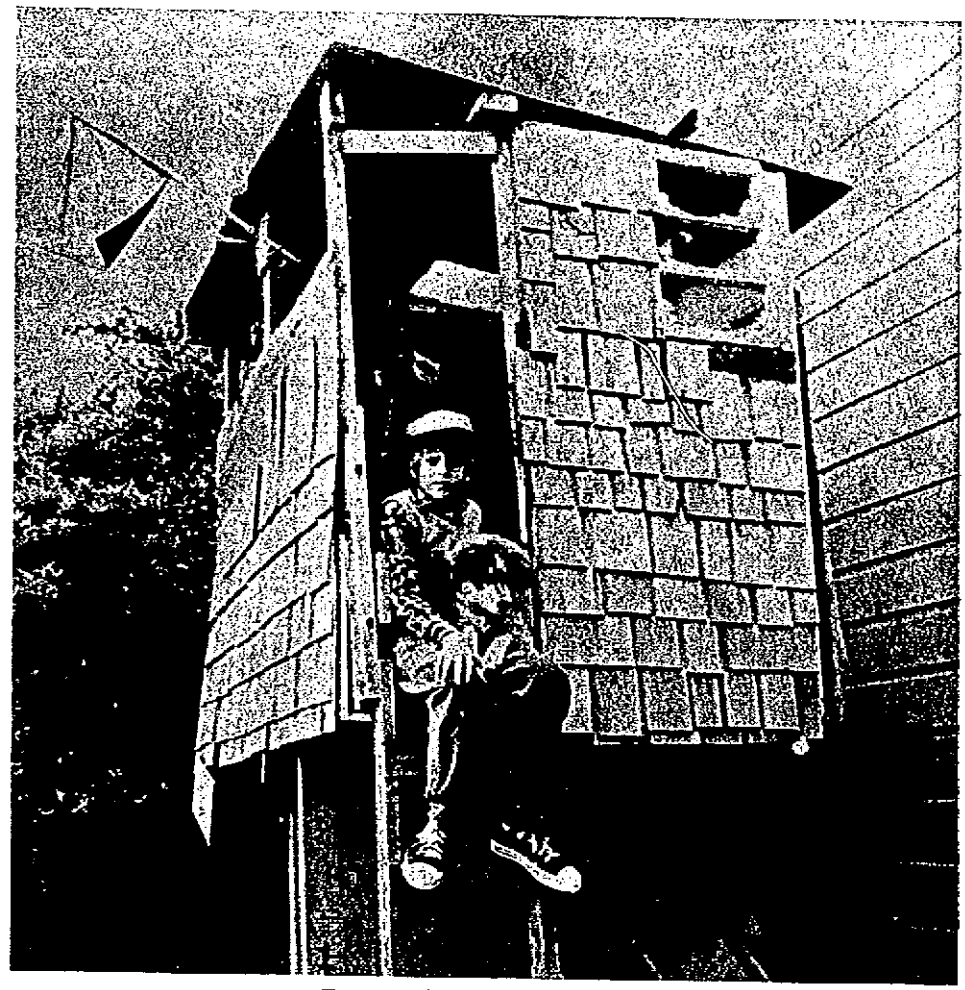

"But, playing with Miller was not great fun. His band was a huge, flawless, no-nonsense organ," Tex says. "Any of us would rather have been with the Dorseys or Benny Goodman. They were the swinging, hopping bands of the time. At least we thought so.

"But Glenn liked me," says Tex. "Once he and I framed up a stunt that backfired. Miller came over one night and said, 'Beneke, if that's the best you can do you can leave.' I fired back at him, of course being in on the joke, that if he didn't like it I would quit. So I picked up my sax and clarinet and started walking off.

"The trouble was," adds Tex, "the two men beside me jumped up, too, saying that if I left so did they. This misplaced loyalty didn't set very well, you can be assured."

In the book, "The Big Bands," author George T. Simon writes that Miller thought his tenor saxist "was the greatest." Simon was the former editor-in-

A HONEY OF A BUSINESS

By Charles J. Haluska

Beekeeping is big business in California, which means that beekeepers often are as busy as a bee.

The sweet part of being a beekeeper is that demand exceeds supply. America's honeybees produce 280 million pounds of honey annually — an impressive amount, but still well below the annual consumption. Imports make up the balance.

This honey of a business is shared by 700 registered keepers in California alone, 200 of whom maintain a large enough operation to be classified as commercial beekeepers.

Each year (depending on the weather) California's honeybees produce between 19 million and 46 million pounds of honey, plus tons more of beeswax. And a wet winter, which depresses picnickers, elates the beekeepers of California. For the hard rains produce an abundance of the wildflowers which provide the greatest source of honey.

Honeybees not only produce honey, they also play a vital role in California's giant agricultural industry, with billions of these insects being leased by their keepers to pollinate field crops and orchards.

Honeybees have been cultivated for about 5,000 years, according to the best estimates, and drawings found on the walls of prehistoric caves in Spain indicate that our cave man ancestors were familiar with this toothsome delicacy.

Oddly enough, in spite of man's long experience with these insects, he has many more questions than answers about them, because honeybees pose one of nature's great mysteries.

Scientists say bees have little if any intelligence, yet their capabilities are fascinating. They are superb architects, possess a marvelous memory for places and have a sophisticated guidance system, an extraordinary sense of smell and can distinguish some colors — blue, blue-green, yellow and ultra-violet.

To compound the mystery, a bee colony living under a highly complex system of government has no leader, the queen being merely an egg-laying machine — yet each bee knows exactly what her duties are (except for a small number of drones, all bees are non-egg-laying females) and she does them based entirely on instinctive knowledge.

Whatever might be said of a honeybee's lack of intelligence, there is no denying her dedicated industry. "As busy as a bee" is not a bit of idle prose. During the working season the honeybee's short life span of six weeks is spent: three weeks working within the hive and three weeks as a field bee gathering nectar and pollen. From sunup to sundown she seldom stops, usually carrying loads equal to her own weight and sometimes ranging up to 7 miles in her search for food.

It is in this all-consuming effort in gathering honey and pollen that the honeybee becomes nature's — and man's — ally. As she struggles to reach the nectar at the base of the blossom, some of the pollen present in the flower becomes lodged on the tiny hairs of her body while at the same time pollen caught from another bloom is dislodged onto the stigma within the blossom, thus doing the job nature so admirably designed the bee to do.

While the honeybee is not the only pollinator — other insects, passing animals, wind and even hummingbirds contribute in the job of plant pollination — the honeybee is the main, universal pollinator.

Many plants and flowers simply could not exist without honeybees. Consider the delicious cantaloupe of California. This melon has blossoms that bloom for just one day. During this one day the blossom must be visited by a bee every 15 minutes for the entire daylight period to insure full pollination of just one cantaloupe. When you think of the trainloads of these luscious melons which are shipped around our country each year, the job done by these hardworking insects is awesome indeed.

It is obvious that the pollination of our field crops and orchards requires more than a chance passing of a swarm of bees, and this is where the role of beekeeper comes in. Each year commercial beekeepers lease out billions of these willing workers. It is a highly organized business based on contracts which specify the number of colonies required per acre for the pollinating period. Growers pay by the colony usually from $4 to $6 per crop.

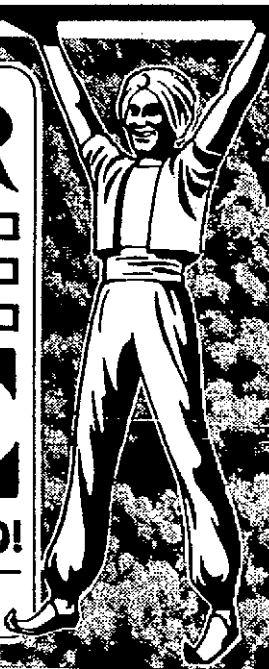

Beekeepers are busy most of the year, and it is hard work indeed. The wooden hives are

DEBUT '72

Take a well-proportioned corner sofa grouping and cover it in a subdued oatmeal and parchment colored plaid — then jazz it up with graphics on a ceiling panel and custom-made table. The result is POW. Designed by Darrell Howe for Mode, Motif and Modline.

For years, the fashion world has shown its collections with hats, accessories, gloves and bags — fully "ensembled." Now, home fashion is being shown in the same realistic light.

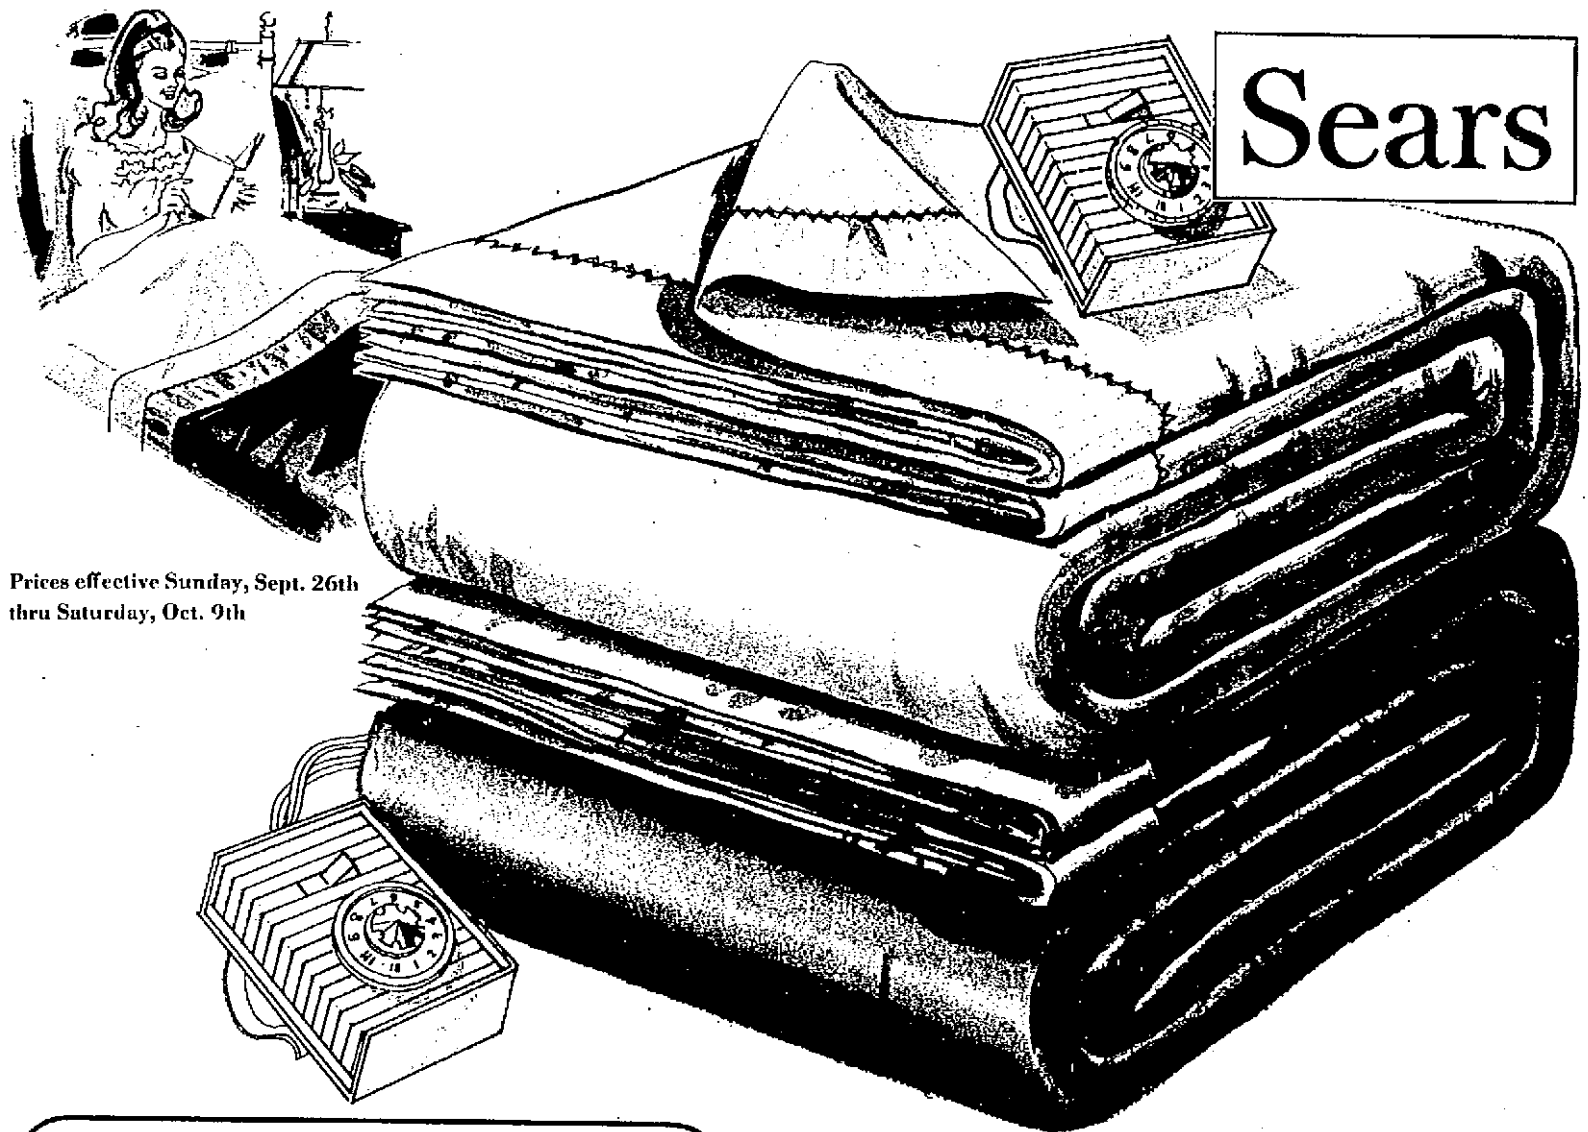

You get the feel of how a room looks "put together" — you can "try it on" — a way of fully demonstrating the importance of home fashions in settings rather than in segments.

This is what Debut '72 is all about — the Total Look in home fashions.

Now in its second week locally, Debut is in full swing to help homemakers achieve an attractive and satisfying home more easily.

Social prophets are forecasting a renaissance in the home for the '70s. Whether it's a high-rise apartment, condominium, sprawling ranch-style home or small bungalow, home is where we are going to spend much of our time this decade.

Traditional, sleek, goopy, equisite, fun, functional, way-out and definitely IN is new light trend selected for Debut '72 by Sunset Lamp, Sonneman, Design Line, Tyndale and Laurel.

Fortunately, the manufacturers who produce those items which furnish our homes are more tuned in to the dawning of the age of the consumer than ever before. They realize that relatively few of us live in grand scale houses, some of us live in mobile homes, others of us actually have attic apartments and many of us need help in decorating.

Now, through the local participating furniture dealers and decorators, the consumer can actually see this whole new way of living — through total-look home fashions.

Debut '72 is for the consumer — to help see the importance of an attractive and comfortable home — then create a satisfying interior.

Research has shown that coordinated room settings, designed to represent current lifestyles, are the most significant aid to the homemaker, helping her visualize how home fashions will look in her own rooms.

This visual key to home fashions is a new way of displaying environmental settings for many stores but a way that will unlock the decorating gap for many consumers.

Room settings are being directed toward the new lifestyles of four groups — the nearlyweds, the newlyweds, the on-the-way-ups and the home-free-agains.

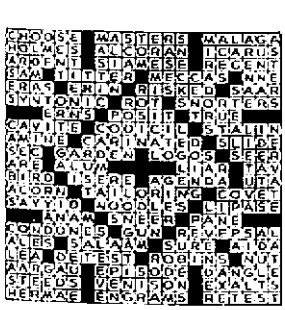

Encompassing the gamut of consumers, these four lifestyles are being featured with the latest ideas, trends, colors, designs and materials.

Local participating dealers have a variety of events in store for the consumer. In addition to myriad room settings to "try on," contests, seminars and panel discussions on decorating are making the stores a beehive of activity.

Debut '72, the first of a five-year program in the home fashions industry, is the most exciting happening ever planned by the industry on a nationwide basis.

The home is really getting "with it," and home fashion is fast becoming the glamour industry of the '70s. □

THE ORIGINAL DEEP Steam CARPET CLEANERS
WALL TO WALL CARPET CLEANING OFFERS YOU:

THOROUGH GENTLE CLEANING . . .actually removes soil from the carpet pile. It does not scrub it deeper like the old shampoo method. No brushes, scrubbing action, or harsh chemicals are used to damage your carpet pile.

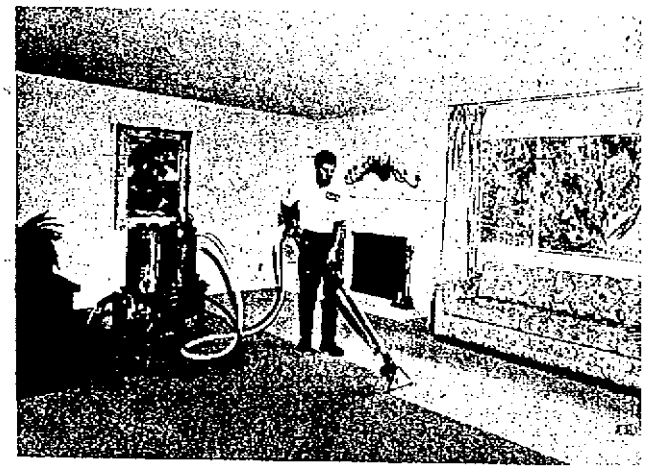

BEAUTIFIED CARPET PILE . . . wet steam with a cleaning agent and powerful extraction process help to lift matted pile, and restore color and texture, leaving your carpet really clean.

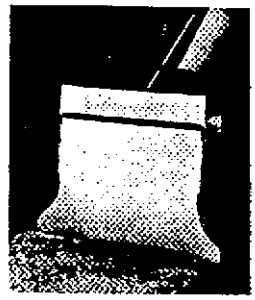

MOISTURE CONTROL . . . powerful extraction action insures fast drying and minimizes carpet shrinkage.

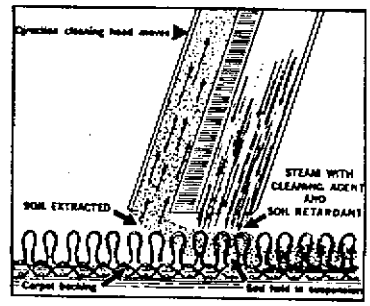

SOIL RETARDING, DEODORIZING, MOTH PROOFING . . .during the cleaning operation, every fiber of your carpet is coated with a soil retardant, deodorizer and moth proofing.

LONGER CARPET LIFE . . .because the need for frequent professional cleaning is greatly reduced, and thoroughly cleaned carpets wear much longer.

YEARS AHEAD IN EXPERIENCE . . .Since 1960 we have DEEP Steam cleaned over 30 million square feet of carpet and have gained valuable information (that only experience can bring) in the effective use of Wet Steam for carpet cleaning. Over these years we have constantly maintained our high standard of excellence by developing more effective cleaning agents, techniques, and equipment to improve our service. Be sure to accept only the Original DEEP Steam Carpet Cleaning.

The Old Method

HOW DEEP Steam SOIL EXTRACTION WORKS

DEEP Steam Soil Extraction equipment applies wet steam with a professional formula and soil retardant under pressure deep into the carpet fibers. The two cleaning agents combine to break down soil and the static electric charge, which holds the soil deep in the pile of the carpet, and brings this soil into suspension. Then, instantly, the moisture and soil are removed by the powerful continuous extraction process into a separate stainless steel container. During this cleaning operation every fiber is coated with SOIL RETARDANT, DEODORIZING, and MOTH PROOFING to keep your carpet cleaner and protected longer.

THE OLD METHOD

The conventional shampoo scrubbing method uses preliminary vacuuming to remove some loose soil. The shampoo equipment, with harsh brushes, utilizing different types of liquid detergents or powders, scrubs the remaining soil DEEPER into the carpet . . . and even with the help of a wet vacuum fails to remove most of the soil or residue. This residue which is left in the carpet then works its way to the surface and attracts more soil. Soon your carpet may appear more soiled than before!

ONLY DUNN CAN OFFER YOU A MAXIMUM OF SAFETY AND A MAXIMUM OF QUALITY — BECAUSE ONLY DUNN —

1. Helped develop the deep steam cleaning process.
2. Has more years of experience in steam cleaning.
3. Has cleaned millions of square feet of carpeting in Homes-Apartments and Offices.

HONEY BUSINESS

heavy — even before being loaded with honey and from 40,000 to 90,000 bees. It is not surprising, then, that commercial beekeeping is dominated by men. With one exception — Mrs. Pauline Quinlan of Bakersfield. She rents or leases about 1,000 colonies to growers in her area during the pollinating period. With the aid of a winch on her truck and a couple of fork lifts, she does the work herself except for an occasional assist from her husband or son.

She prefers that her husband not work around the bees with her because he has a slight acid condition that the insects, with their acute sense of smell, find irritating. This irritation causes them to sting more than usual. Another oddity is that if she is working with bees and her mother is in the vicinity, the bees, for some strange reason, find the timbre of her mother's voice very annoying and react by stinging anyone nearby.

Normally, honeybees are "gentle" and will stand for a surprising amount of handling and discomfort before reacting by stinging. One of the projects of the University of California at Davis is the breeding of bees with a high degree of gentleness by artificial insemination of the queen. Ward Stanger, extension apiculturist, and his co-workers are reasonably hopeful that in the not-too-distant future a stinging bee will be a rarity.

Of course, even a very gentle bee will react under certain conditions, as when a tractor driver drove his machine over six of Mrs. Quinlan's hives. The tractor treads smashed down one half of each hive as neatly as if the driver had used a saw, leaving one-half of each hive buzzing angrily with startled bees. The driver spent a week in the hospital nursing the results of the bees' anger.

I asked Mrs. Quinlan why bears aren't stung when they raid a hive. "Oh! but they do get stung," she protested, "but their love for honey helps them tolerate the discomfort."

If there is one thing that upsets a beekeeper, it is to be asked, "Are you stung often?" "No one," sighs Mrs. Quinlan, "asks a carpenter, mechanic or steelworker if he smashes his fingers often. A beekeeper accepts the occasional sting as an occupational hazard and tolerates it."

In spite of an occasional sting, Mrs. Quinlan is very happy with her chosen career of beekeeping. In 1960, a friend impressed her husband with the money-making possibilities of beekeeping. "He neglected to mention the hard work," Mrs. Quinlan said with a chuckle, "or how much equipment we'd have to buy." After two years Quinlan found that being a full-time postman and a part-time beekeeper was too exhausting, so he decided to give up on beekeeping.

Not so with Mrs. Quinlan, who had grown to love bees and beekeeping. Taking over her husband's 200 colonies of bees in 1962, she gradually built up an operation now boasting over 1,000 colonies.

During the pollinating season she works long hours. One day she will "rob" 100 colonies of their honey and on the following day extract it. For months she will follow this procedure, with seldom a day off until the need for her bees slackens.

While Pauline Quinlan derives most of her income from the leasing of her colonies to growers, she doesn't neglect her sales of honey, and at the last Kern County Fair she managed to win 10 first-place and 10 second-place ribbons for the quality of her honey entries.

To those puzzled by the method by which nectar becomes honey, Mrs. Quinlan explains that as the bee flies homeward with her load of nectar the chemical factory within her body changes the nectar into the substance we know as honey.

Not all honey is amber in color. While amber is the color commonly associated with honey, shades of brown, water-white, yellow and green also are found. Ward Stanger has seen honey which was reputed to be 40 years old and had turned almost black, but still retained its delicious flavor.

The uses of honey are almost unlimited. In addition to tasting great on hotcakes and biscuits, honey fills many other needs. It is used in huge quantities in the baking and confectionery industries, in canning, curing hams and as a feed for horses. It goes into pharmaceutical preparations, chewing gum and anti-freeze solutions and is even used as golf ball centers.

Mrs. Quinlan found to her surprise that honey has a high bactericidal factor. Shortly after embarking on her beekeeping career, she noticed that a bothersome skin allergy had disappeared. Any cut or burn heals very quickly while she is handling honey, she has found.

When and how did honeybees evolve — if they ever did evolve? Dr. Karl von Frisch, an authority on bee behavior, has said: "The bees, with their hexagon cells, have in fact discovered the best and most economical plan conceivable. How they arrived at this, none of our learned men has so far been able to discover. Their writings and discussions are many, but they have not yet solved the riddle."

Another naturalist says: "The bee of course has no knowledge of geometry nor any way of comparing the storage capacities of variously shaped containers. Then how did bees ever stumble upon the neat, hexagon rows that make up their combs?"

Another raises this question: "Which came first, the plants needing to be pollinated by the bees or the bees needing to manufacture their life's source — honey — from the nectar of the plants?"

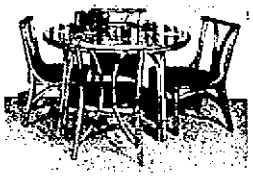

Hard questions, indeed. With no easy answers.

As one beekeeper puts it, "I have trouble enough understanding them, let alone trying to figure out how they happened to be." □ chief of Metronome, the band trade bible and the equivalent to the show business publication Variety.

"I could never decide," wrote Simon, "whether Glenn was completely convinced himself when he came out so strong about certain men in his band. Beneke was one. Another was Ray Eberle."

"Just before the war Miller offered to back me with a band of my own," says Tex. "But I didn't feel like I was ready. He did back Charlie Spivak, Claude Thornhill and Hal McIntyre on their own.

"As the war clouds got thicker, we could see what was coming. Then came the draft and Miller disbanded after trying to enlist the band as a unit. Miller joined the Air Force and we went out on our own.

"The irony of this was that shortly after Miller's offer was turned down by all the services, the Navy signed up the Clyde McCoy band intact and sent that group to Memphis."

Tex joined the Navy and was made a chief petty officer in charge of two bands at a base near the University of Oklahoma campus at Norman. He led the regular Navy band and another made up of young students involved in Navy training.

When Maj. Glenn Miller vanished on a plane over the English Channel on Dec. 15, 1944, his

"crown prince," Tex Beneke, fell heir to the bulk of GM's library of fabulous arrangements.

Miller's widow knew that Glenn had wanted Tex to have a band, so on Jan. 1, 1946, he took over the old Miller Air Force Band. They played as civilians until the start of the Fifties when Elvis Presley ushered in the rock era and travel costs and television crowded the big bands off into limbo.

Tex believes that, if Glenn Miller had survived the war, his big band and sound would be as popular now as it was in 1940. "That one man had the music business and the public so wrapped up he would have made the difference," he says.

The former Betty Woirhaye and Tex have been married only a few years, the second outing for both. She lived a while in Westminster, via Montana, and was a model. Although she had known the family, she first met Tex at Disneyland so the place has an extra-special meaning to her.

The vivacious Betty travels with Tex and almost never misses one of his numbers. She does the packing and helps with the mountains of correspondence that comes with the enterprise.

The Beneke home, an acreage in a St. Louis suburb, is tended by a caretaker when the couple is on the road. They have three French poodles, Sambeaux, Count Napoleon and Dolly Valentine, who help to keep the home fires smoldering.

Betty tells a comic-book sounding anecdote involving Tex and his cousin Joe Beneke, a Houston schoolman who had a small band that played in a Cut and Shoot, Tex., beer tavern.

When Tex asked Cousin Joe how much he got paid, he answered by saying mysteriously he worked for caps.

What Joe meant, Betty explains, was that whenever the tavern keeper sold a bottle of beer he tossed the bottle cap in a container. At the end of the night's business he counted the beer caps to determine how much Joe had earned.

"But Joe was no dunce," says Betty. "Out of his own pocket he stocked the bar with a goodly supply of salty peanuts and his pay went up sharply."

Alas, the school officials decided it was unbecoming for one of theirs to be so engaged, and they ended a blossoming business.

Discussing likes and dislikes, Tex says he isn't too high on country music. Nor does he like hard rock. "They just aren't my book."

He likes Western swing and most other music. He says "Body and Soul," probably, is his all-time favorite tune because of its beautiful melody and the things an instrumentalist can do with it. He likes the tune especially the way Coleman Hawkins plays it.

Tex has good things to say about Pete Fountain and Stan Getz. He praises Buddy Rich as the greatest of drum men, a master showman and a real good bandsman.

"Yes," admits Tex, "I finally learned to like Guy Lombardo. It's a good sound and Guy's "Auld Lang Syne" on New Year's eve has become a national institution.

"One night," Tex recalls, "Glenn Miller huffed into band practice and tossed out to the boys: 'You'll never guess where I have been. For months and months my wife has been pestering me to go hear Guy Lombardo, so tonight I took her.

"'We got a table near the band. We could talk over the music and still listen.

"'Then I danced with my wife, which I never do.

"'We had a damn wonderful time. In fact, I never had so much fun in my life. I wound up making love to my wife, so I don't want to hear you guys ever again putting down Guy Lombardo.'"

GLENN MILLER . . . fashioned the famous Miller sound from a special mix of sax, clarinet and brass.

Beneke generously mixes Miller arrangements with his personal book. Such notables as "At Last," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," "I Never Knew I Could Love Anybody," "Adios," "In the Mood," "Sunrise Serenade," "American Patrol," "Moonlight Serenade" and, of course, "Kalamazoo" and "Choo Choo."

Beneke sometimes will favor fans with a vocal solo, usually "I Never Knew . . ." This is a treat and another Miller "discovery."

Once while Tex was driving to a date with Miller presumably asleep in the back seat, Tex started singing "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider" to stay awake. Miller, apparently with one eye open to not miss anything, heard him. A while later Miller did an arrangement of "Ida" and made Tex sing it with the band. "Thus a star was born," Tex quips. "I can't sing and furthermore I hate singing."

The Beneke package includes Ray Eberle and the Mondernaires, with songstress Paula Kelly, an original member of the Glenn Miller band. Her daughter, P.K. Jr., also sang with the organization prior to marrying Michael Cole of TV's "Mod Squad."

Tex, for those with more than a layman's knowledge of music, explains the Miller sound:

It is achieved with a clarinet on top and one tenor sax an octave lower, both playing melody with other saxes in the band filling in the harmony.

Add to this the "boo wah" brass sound that is done by the manipulation of "derbies" and "plumber's helpers" over the bells of trombones and trumpets.

"This sounds good and looks good," says Tex, "and it all was perfected by Miller after long experimentation."

This, then, is the almost revered Glenn Miller sound that lives on under his able disciple, Gordon Lee (Tex) Beneke. □

GOURMET GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

ANDRE MOSKALENKO
Robust or Mild Sauces

Most people visit a fine Italian restaurant with one idea in mind. They want their veal and other meat entrees to be swimming in robust sauces, red or brown.

I know a restaurant in Downey which offers such sauces with dozens of entrees. It's Rocco's, 8060 E. Florence Ave. near Paramount Boulevard. Those sauces are so great that people drive from Long Beach, Palos Verdes and as far south as Laguna simply so they can smack their lips and say with a sigh: "Wonderful. Really worth the trip . . ."

There are people, however, who prefer Italian cuisine with a less robust character. Their demands require perhaps even greater skill. Rocco's delights them, too, offering such delicate dishes as scampi a la Rocco.

Scampi Rocci is never served with a red or brown sauce. It consists of pampered, tender shrimp sauteed gently in garlic butter until they have a light, fragile crust. They are served atop a bed of fettucine Alfredo, gourmet noodles with a rich, white cream sauce. The scampi are $5.25 on a generous dinner with relish tray, salad topped with garbanzoes, croutons and splendid dressing; vegetable du jour; hot garlic bread and beverage.

Andre Moskalenko, knowledgeable host and general manager at this fashionable, Mediterranean-decor establishment, recently introduced a new entree which has won high praise. Named for Frank Sinatra, whose love for Italian cuisine is not as widely publicized as some of his other pursuits, it is called Steak Sinatra. It consists of strips of prime filet miguon cooked with mushrooms, bell peppers, sherry and butter. It is $5.95.

Another Rocco's favorite is cioppino, the hearty Italian bouillabaisse, $5.45. Served in a steaming tureen, it features lobster, crab, clams, shrimp and whitefish cooked in a reddish broth which is nectar to Italian sea food lovers.

Rocco's, which serves dinners Saturday and Sunday starting at 4 p.m., is open every day. Luncheons, which attract executives and professional men and women, are served Monday through Friday. The complete pasta dinners, such as mostacciole, rigatoni, ravioli or spaghetti with meatballs or Italian sausage, are $3.50 to $4.25.

The nightly entertainment is by Mel Norfleet, who's 6 feet 3 inches tall, plays organ and piano and sings in a rich baritone with deep basso notes. Sunday is his night off.

RAY JOHNSON
Chosen by Queen Tours

Caricatures by Larry LaVoie

All over Southern California people have suddenly started to hear about the Queen Cafeteria in Long Beach.

A couple of months ago the restaurant was chosen as a food stop for bus tours en route to the Queen Mary, which is only a few minutes drive away. The cafeteria's food is so fresh, delectable and modestly priced that more and more bus companies are taking their customers there. Some days from 12 to 20 buses visit the cafeteria, Alamitos Avenue near Broadway.

Occasionally a passenger complains, saying: "How come we're stopping here? I thought we were going to a cafeteria aboard the ship." After tasting the restaurant's roast beef, baked ham, halibut or fried chicken, he's apt to change his mind quickly and say:

"By golly, I'm glad we came. How can you beat this?"

The Queen, which has a large parking lot and seating for hundreds of guests, is owned by Ray Johnson. Its cheerful young manager is Lee Baker and the No. 1 chef, talented and industrious, is Emery Crossland. The restaurant has luncheons for a few cents over a dollar, including entree, potato, vegetable, roll and beverage. The big complete dinner (three salads, entree, potato, vegetable, roll and beverage) ranges from about $2 to $2.25.

Ray — a nice guy liked by everybody — also owns Arnold's Family Restaurant, 3925 Atlantic Ave. in the Bixby Knolls section of Long Beach. His staff there is headed by two experts who have worked with Ray for many years — manager Tim McMillan and No. 1 chef Uvon Bole.

The entrees and specialties at Arnold's are similar in price to those at the Queen and the high quality is the same. Ray's business philosophy is simple but effective: "We buy the best food ingredients obtainable. And we try to give people the kind of service we'd like to have ourselves."

Closed Mondays, both restaurants are open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Arnold's is a popular gathering place for church groups who drop in regularly after their Sunday services. On a recent Sunday, 10 such groups arrived at Arnold's almost simultaneously between 12:30 and 12:45 p.m.

One group included 20 persons. Two consisted of 13 persons each. All were served and seated promptly, thanks to the thoughtful efficiency of Ray's staff. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A new disease afflicting at least 3,000 known persons has been reported by government medical researchers.

The report is being termed by some medical observers as one of the major medical advances of the year.

The newly recognized disorder is characterized mainly by decreased taste acuity. For the patient, certain common foods develop a foul taste.

The disease has been named idiopathic hypogeusia.

The words mean decreased taste acuity of unknown origin.

The new disease may also involve dysgeusia, hyposmia and dysomia. To explain:

—The patient may also experience unpleasant, obnoxious and perverted perception of food and drink. This is called dysgeusia.

—There may be decreased acuity of the sense of smell. This is called hyposmia.

—There may be unpleasant, obnoxious and perverted perception of odors. This is dysomia.

Other symptoms may occur, such as persistent sensations of saltiness, sweetness, sourness, bitterness or metallic taste in the mouth in the absence of food. Also, the patient may be aware of the sensation of a persistent foul odor.

The researchers, affiliated with the National Institutes of Health, describe three patients to illustrate the new disease:

Case No. 1: A 53-year-old white male pizzamaker who suffered a severe bout of respiratory infection which lasted six days. Afterward, he noted sudden loss of ability to taste and smell. On returning to work, he noted profound, obnoxious odors associated with certain foods. Foods which smelled bad and tasted "rotten" included meats, eggs, fish, sharp cheeses, bread, coffee, tomatoes, onions, garlic and other spices.

Also nauseating were the odors of soap, shaving lotion, dust, frying grease, perfume, automobile exhaust and tobacco smoke.

The man restricted his diet to lettuce, rice, bland cheeses and fresh apples, and lost 15 pounds body weight. He had to quit work.

Case No. 2: A 48-year-old white male professional soldier who underwent surgery on the large intestine for cancer. Soon after the operation, water and all food — particularly pork and beef — tasted foul and smelled "disgusting." Sugar tasted repugnant and salt had a metallic quality. He lost 10 pounds.

Case No. 3: A 67-year-old white male building contractor who suffered gradual onset of loss of taste and smell coupled with progressive increase in the sensations of obnoxious tastes and odors. Particularly foul to him were meats, eggs, salad dressing, vinegar, tomatoes, onions, cheese, nuts, coffee, garlic, any foods fried in fat, and odors from soap and perfume. He lost 30 pounds.

The report describes a total of 35 patients with the affliction. In general, the patients became mentally depressed, and eating for many was described as similar to chewing and swallowing flour paste or sawdust.

Patients commonly ate unusual food in an effort to find some food which had an agreeable quality. This failed and was followed by major changes in dietary habits as the search continued.

Doctors say the dangerous part of the ailment is the inability of some patients to distinguish spoiled food from fresh food and to smell smoke or escaping natural gas.

The bizarre malady has led most physicians to overemphasize the psychiatric complaints of such patients, the researchers note. No obvious physical changes can be observed. But the electron microscope shows changes in the taste buds. The ordinary light microscope is unable to show these changes.

Fortunately, it appears something can be done about the new disease.

Zinc sulfate taken by mouth has been able, so far at least, to reduce the magnitude of symptoms within a short time.

Further studies with this treatment are now in progress.

At least two patients with the novel disease are being treated in Long Beach at the present time.

Doctors may read details about the new disorder in the Journal of the American Medical Association (Vol. 217, No. 4, Page 434).

Remember the name: hypogeusia. You'll be hearing and reading a lot about this disorder in the days to come. □

WALTER SCOTT'S
Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. What is the true inside story about the forthcoming presidential election in South Vietnam? Is it, as Senator Mansfield claims, "a farce"? Is this what we fought the war for?—Mac McMahon, Berkeley, Calif.
A. After ten years of sacrifice, 50,000 young American lives lost, 300,000 Americans wounded, $200 billion of the taxpayers' money spent, thousands of young American soldiers addicted to heroin—the U.S. public is presented with a sleazy musical comedy election, stage-managed by Ellsworth Bunker and starring his protégé, Nguyen Van Thieu. Thieu is a classic example of self-determination. He is self-determined to occupy the presidency of South Vietnam indefinitely.

Q. Diahann Carroll and David Frost—does she really have him by ten years?—Marlene Weiss, Hempstead, N.Y.
A. Diahann is a minimal 38. Frost is 32.

Q. Has the U.S. State Department abolished the loyalty oath required of all passport applicants? —Harold W. Franklin, Ann Arbor, Mich.
A. A U.S. district court judge has ruled that the State Department must require all applicants to take the loyalty oath or to abolish it. The loyalty oath has been optional since 1966, and some Americans have refused to sign it. They were given passports anyway.

PRINCESS ANNE

Q. Is it true that Britain's Princess Anne is not particularly bright and that the British don't like her? —Mabel Crocker, Miami, Fla.
A. None of the British Royal Family is particularly bright. Princess Anne is probably the least bright. Neither Oxford nor Cambridge, it is safe to say, would admit her unless they had to. The result is that she has gone to no university. She is considered spoiled and surly in contrast to her brother, Prince Charles, heir to the throne, who is well-liked. Like her mother, Princess Anne is most interested in horses.

TRUMAN MacARTHUR NIXON

Q. When President Nixon was a U.S. Senator didn't he accuse the Truman Administration of withholding classified documents for political reasons? Didn't he, in fact do the same thing with the SST report? —E. Thomas, Laguna Beach, Calif.
A. On April 22, 1951, in an attempt to learn the truth about the secret talks between Gen. Douglas MacArthur and President Truman which took place on Wake Island on Oct. 15, 1950, Richard Nixon, then a Senator, insisted that the American people had the right to the full story.

"Certainly," he declared, "if classified documents are now to be made public, the committees of Congress and the American people should be entitled to see not only those documents which might reflect against MacArthur, but also those which reflect in his favor . . .

"The new test for classifying secret documents now seems to be not whether the publication of a document would affect the security of the nation but whether it would affect the political security of the Administration."

The Truman Administration thereupon declassified the documents.

In 1969 President Nixon ordered a committee of scientists headed by physicist Richard L. Garwin to prepare a report on the supersonic transport plane. Such a report was prepared. It advised against government support in developing an SST on grounds of excessive cost, pollution, unprofitability, and unacceptable sonic boom characteristics.

Because Nixon was in favor of going ahead with the SST, his Administration refused to make public or available to Congress the Garwin report on the SST. It was finally made public on Aug. 21, 1971, after a year of legal battle by Peter L. Koff, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney, on behalf of the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth. On April 13, 1971, the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington agreed that the Garwin report came under the 1966 Freedom of Information Act unless the President invoked his executive privilege to keep it secret or unless it met one of eight other exemption categories under provisions of the act.

The Justice Department and the White House counsel thereupon decided to abandon the legal fight to keep the report secret, and it was released to attorney Koff by the Office of Science and Technology, Edward E. David Jr., director.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE PETE HAMILL

Q. Has Shirley MacLaine dumped Sandy Vanocur of NBC for Pete Hamill of the New York Post? I understand Shirley goes through men like a dose of salts. Isn't she partial to writers?—T.Y., Richmond, Va.
A. Shirley MacLaine and journalist Pete Hamill recently shared a country house in Windsor outside London. Actress MacLaine does not cultivate her men on the grounds of vocation but rather on the basis of intellect.

Q. Who said, "Every woman waits for the right man to come along, and while waiting she gets married"? —Mitchell Elliott, Cambridge, Mass.
A. The line was first written by Connecticut Walker of PARADE.

Women's Liberation rally in New York's Central Park ends a day (Aug. 26) marking anniversary of women's suffrage. For second year in row supporters—an estimated 6000 including a scattering of men—marched on Fifth Ave.

A Special Roper Poll on Women's Rights

The Women's Liberation movement is making headlines, but seven out of ten American women feel they are not being discriminated against. What's more—seven out of ten men agree with them.

These are the findings of a special Roper Poll to determine the effects of Women's Liberation on the thinking of Americans.

Perhaps the most startling result uncovered by the poll is the close agreement of men and women on many key issues.

The survey put various questions to a large equal sampling of men and women, with this introduction:

"A lot has been said about the rights of women—in fact, there is a movement called 'Women's Liberation,' as you probably know. I'm going to read you several different statements and for each one I'd like to know whether you agree or disagree."

The results follow:

Zooming along is Mike Finamore who's living on borrowed time. A leukemia sufferer, he's been kept alive for seven years thanks to medical advances.

Mike keeps busy, has no time to feel sorry for himself. He's working with father and learning his construction business.

'I'm Lucky To Be Alive'

by Theodore Irwin

GLEN RIDGE, N.J.

A tanned, lithe athlete, 20-year-old Michael Finamore, goes surfing and scuba-diving, plays tennis and football, races a motorboat and jauntily varooms around on his motorcycle.

"If you met me on the street," he says, with his quick, easy smile, "you'd never guess my problem."

Mike's "problem" is that for seven years he has had acute lymphocytic leukemia, a cancer of the blood-forming tissues. It is the foremost killer-disease of children and second only to accidents as the cause of death.

When, at 13, his case was first diagnosed, Mike recalls that "they thought I'd last only about six weeks without treatment." At the time the average leukemic child had less than one chance in 20 of living another three years.

Example of progress

By surviving, thus far, for seven years, Mike is a prime example of how medical science is scoring dramatically against the dread ailment. He is one of a very small but growing number of patients who endure beyond five years. Yet Mike realizes that at any time he could have a fatal relapse.

Experimental drugs keep him going. Every Monday he rides his motorcycle 30 miles to the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases in New York. There, for four hours, he undergoes a battery of checkup tests and receives a combination of eight different pills and injections. The shots make him nauseous for two or three days.

"I have to force myself to go," he confesses. "I know that if I don't, I might be dead in a month or so. And when I get back home all I ask is to be left alone."

Hates self-pity

Remarkably self-assured, Mike insists that he never feels depressed about his leukemia, that he has never asked, "Why me?" He abhors self-pity. "I don't feel sorry for myself, so why should anyone feel sorry for me?"

Is he scared? "I've never had a fear of death," he says. "Subconsciously, I suppose, I still have not accepted the fact I have cancer.

"It's a miracle I'm still alive," he says, "and I'm very lucky to respond to the medicines."

Still, Mike admits to some hard moments, mainly when he becomes fed up with the tests and the needles stuck into him. He restrains himself from yelling, "Let's stop it and see if I'm cured!" and he is apt to break into tears. As his doctors calm him, Mike recognizes "how stupid I am and I come back to my senses."

A few weeks ago, sitting back in the comfortable living room of the Finamores' modest brick home here in Glen Ridge, Mike expounded on his personal philosophy:

"So much depends on a patient's mental attitude and drive to live. The rest of the battle is medicine and medical care. I look upon my leukemia as a test, to see what type of human being I am. By being strong and facing up to my problem, I'm a better person.

"I don't think anyone can be complete if he hasn't had problems and learned how to deal with them. My leukemia is just another problem I must buck, live with, and try to solve.

"I see people rant and rave, and get into fights over something like a dent in a car. They don't realize what troubles they could have. I have a broader perspective, a seat above everyone else and I'm watching what's going on.

"The more problems a person has, the more he should appreciate what is right with him. No matter what I do I appreciate it, enjoy myself, feel good and alive."

Mike finds it hard to explain precisely what sustains him. One factor he can pin down: he believes that much is due to how he was raised at home. As a small child he was never babied by his parents. If he fell off his bike, for instance, he was merely told to get back on it. Even today, his parents try not to hover over him, treating him naturally. "Mother and Dad don't let me get away with anything," he says, with a grin. Nor does his 17-year-old sister Debbie. "Though she goes out of her way for me, she also sometimes tells me to go to hell."

Mike is fully aware of the unpredictability of his leukemia. Early in 1968 he suffered a relapse when his leukemia cells built up immunity to one of the drugs. The ordeal still clings in his mind. "For the first time I felt very conscious of how sick I looked."

Placed on massive doses of other toxic drugs—to kill the fastest-growing cells in his body—half of his hair fell out. When another drug was substituted, he blew up "like a balloon," gaining 40 pounds. As he tensely awaited results, doctors had to keep reassuring him. After six weeks the side effects faded, his hair and weight returning to normal.

Today, Mike keeps constantly busy. After a freshman year at nearby Bloomfield College, he is not sure he'll return, to aim at a law career. "Law takes a long time, six or seven years of schooling," he says.

So Mike is taking this semester off, to give him time to think ahead. Now working full time, he is learning his father's construction business, acting as a coordinator of materials as he travels from one construction job to another.

Evenings and on his days off, Mike hits the road with his motorcycle or his new fast car. Besides his variety of summer sports, on winter weekends he goes skiing in Vermont.

"Subconsciously," he reflects, "I guess I'm trying to pack everything I can into my life. A lot of my friends lie around for hours, wasting time. To me, time is very, very precious. I don't ever want to say that I wish I had last year to do over again."

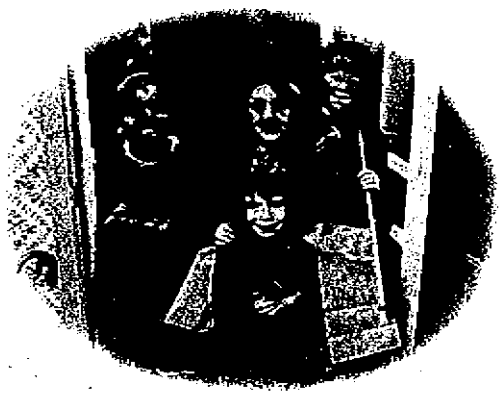

One of the favored

With a disease that was virtually without hope a decade ago, Mike realizes he is among the favored few. Only about one out of five U.S. youngsters and adolescents with his kind of leukemia (other types are far less responsive to therapy) can now receive the latest forms of treatment. One reason is that less than 50 major leukemia-treating centers exist in the country and not all of them are fully equipped to render the elaborate therapies. And relatively few physicians are specially trained for the experimental programs.

Cost is a second reason: up to $2000 a week (plus doctors' fees) for periods of hospitalization. Mike's first year as a private patient set the Finamores back about $5000. Now, as an outpatient using experimental drugs, his treatment is paid for through cancer research grants.

How much longer can Mike expect to live? Today, with the utmost in available intensive treatment, the medical survival rate of children with acute lymphatic leukemia is no more than three or four years. In the judgment of Dr. Joseph Burchenal, of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research, "It is fair to say that if they

Do You Feel You Look. More Than a Year Older This Summer?

Summer can be the cruelest season for your skin. When you were younger and nature bountifully supplied just the right amount of moisture and oil to keep your complexion dewy-moist and blossoming, the summer months brought a young and healthy-looking bloom to your appearance. But now that nature's own secretions may have diminished, summer sun and wind and heat and outdoor activity can make your skin look dry. This dryness accentuates wrinkles that make you look older than you are.

Clearly, nature needs help to counteract the deleterious effects of summer weather. Such help is Oil of Olay moisturizing fluid, a remarkable beauty blend used by youthful-looking women in all parts of the globe and available from druggists here in the United States. Your sun- and wind-dried skin thirsts for the gentle attentions of this unique blend with its moisturizing-oils.

Oil of Olay is compatible with the skin and so blends easily with skin fluids. The beauty blend penetrates the important surface layer of the skin rapidly and evenly, helping to replace the oil and moisture robbed from your complexion by summer weather. Very quickly wrinkle-accenting dryness and flaky patches will begin to ease away.

Most women who care about their complexion use Oil of Olay in a twice-daily beauty ritual, once in the morning and once at night. But when your skin is exposed to the rigors of summer weather, it needs extra indulging. Lavish on the precious beauty blend whenever your skin feels dry or tight...when you've been exposed to sun or wind, after a fresh-up bath or shower, or when you've returned from any outdoor activity. Even air-conditioning can cause sensitive skin to become unnecessarily dry.

However frequently you use Oil of Olay during the day, never neglect the morning and evening beauty ritual. When applied generously to your face and neck before retiring, the blend does its good work during the quiet sleeping hours. In the morning, smoothed on before makeup, Oil of Olay provides a superb base. Because of its rapid penetration and even spreading, the beauty blend helps prevent your cosmetics from streaking, separating or discoloring. And all the while it continues to protect and pamper your complexion.

Hints That Beauty
Specialists Recommend

Whenever you have been exposed to the sun, apply Oil of Olay soothingly over rosy skin. The beauty blend will help keep your complexion from appearing dry, without stealing away the flattering skin color.

go five years, half of them will not relapse." That means, according to the chief of leukemia research at Memorial Hospital, Mike has a little better than a 50-50 chance of surviving indefinitely.

To Mike, "cure" is "the most beautiful word in the English language." Can leukemia be cured today? Leading specialists sharply disagree. Some, including experts at the National Cancer Institute, come right out and maintain that certain leukemics are curable and are being genuinely cured. Recent reports from some leukemia centers point to an increasing number of cases of long-term remissions — with no evidence of the disease. Other authorities, highly skeptical, contend that proof is lacking, still too few are affected, or that "cure" is not the right word.

A word of caution

Dr. Sidney Farber, the pioneering head of the Children's Cancer Research Foundation in Boston, while hailing the progress against leukemia, cautions:

"If we accepted the present data that leukemia is being cured, I would hate to face the parents of the 99.5 percent of children who die within five years."

The big question is when to stop treatment. Thus far, doctors have little scientific basis for a decision. After seven years, can it be assumed that all of Mike's leukemic cells have been eradicated? If he went off his drugs, would he go into relapse? How much longer must he wait to "graduate"?

Mike looks calmly to the future. "My doctors tell me," he says, "there's always a chance the disease will come back. If I don't make it, I can do nothing about it. There's so much to live for, so many things I want to do and places to go—if I'm given the gift of time.

"Of course, I keep hoping for a surefire permanent cure, for everyone, not only for some patients like me."

Because he wants the public to realize what's happening, early this year Mike agreed to appear in a 60-second TV message for the American Cancer Society. Millions of viewers have glimpsed him, seated on his motorcycle, as he talks about the need for more leukemia research.

"Too many people are still dying of leukemia," he told PARADE. "Those medical scientists are so close — I'm walking proof that they're on the right track. They ought to have more money, even if it means giving up war.

"Meanwhile, I'm so happy to be alive and enjoying every minute."

A HOPEFUL NOTE

"The gift of life to a 20-year-old youth reported in this article would not have been possible without recent advances in leukemia research. Progress in this complex field is going forward at a rapid pace, helping to make what once was the most hopeless of cancers the most hopeful. Mike's story offers a glimpse of the promising outcome which may be in store for many leukemia patients in coming years." —Jack W. Milder, M.D., research administrator for clinical investigation, American Cancer Society.

On the Road to Macramé

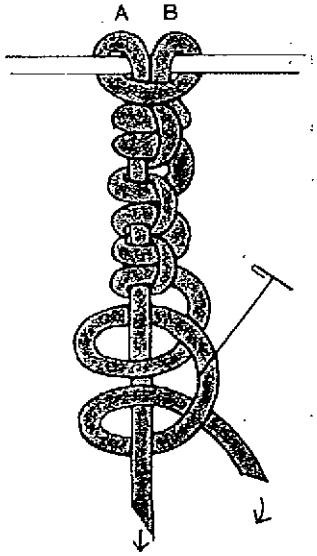

■ What's new in home crafts is something old. Called macramé, it's the ancient art of decorative knotting, given some modern twists. You've seen macramé everywhere—as clothing accessories and as home decorator items. Necklaces, belts, tote bags, wall hangings—even dog leashes—there are stylings for all.

Such accessories and decorations can be costly to purchase, but you can make them inexpensively.

There's a book that tells you how. It's entitled Macramé, is written by the expert Betty Alfers, and is available to PARADE readers for only $1.

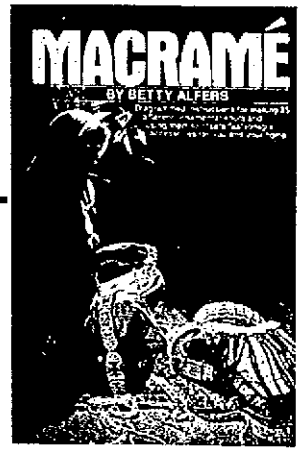

Sure, there are things you have to know. What materials to get and where to find them. How to tie the knots. What designs to follow, and how to invent your own. Miss Alfers' book gives you all the answers, utilizing easy-to-follow diagrams.

It also gives detailed instructions for 11 basic projects, and prepares you for many others to follow. You'll be surprised at the many materials you can use, such as yarn, cord, beads and leather.

Lark's Head Braid—an illustration from book. Instructions come with the diagrams.

For the bargain price of of $1 you'll have hours of pleasure and create decorations for yourself and your home that your friends will envy. Don't miss out on Macramé—order your copy of the book today.

BIRTH CONTROL BY ASTROLOGY?

Would you believe, birth control by astrology?

The Czechs are experimenting with a form of birth control by "cosmogram" which they claim is 98 percent effective--as effective as the pill, and no side effects, of course.

Moreover, they claim, "cosmograms" can be utilized to prevent miscarriages and birth defects, to choose the baby's sex, and to help sterile women bear children.

The author of this new system of cosmo-gynecology is Czech psychiatrist Dr. Eugen Jonas. In 1956, Dr. Jonas noticed in his practice that some women experience heightened sexual desire in a recurring cycle. An astrologist by avocation, he began to correlate this cycle with birth data and astrologic charts.

Dr. Jonas decided that the position of the sun and moon at the time of a woman's birth offers the key to her fertility. It indicates the days on which she may conceive for the rest of her life. By abstaining from intercourse on these days she may avoid pregnancy; or, if she wants to conceive, she has only to choose these days.

Furthermore, Dr. Jonas claims, miscarriages and birth defects result when conception occurs at a particular junction of the sun, moon, and planets. Similarly, he believes, the sex of a child is determined by astrologic data at the time of conception. With knowledge of these periods, a woman can avoid tragedy and bear healthy children of the desired sex.

At the Astra Research Center for Planned Parenthood in Nitra, Czechoslovakia, Dr. Jonas and his colleagues work out "cosmograms" for the thousands of women who write to them with birth control and fertility problems. So far, Astra claims 98 percent effectiveness in planning birth control and 95 percent success in sex prediction and other problems of pregnancy.

Skeptical scientists all over the world are now examining Dr. Jonas' system of cosmo-gynecology. UNESCO, the Max Planck Institute in Heidelberg, Germany, the Leningrad Institute of Gynecology are looking into the subject. Meanwhile, in Czechoslovakia, birth control by astrology is widely and successfully practiced.

IRONY

Japan and Germany, our leading enemies of World War II, now boast two of the strongest economies and currencies in the world. Bankers have far more confidence in the Japanese yen and the West German mark than they do in the American dollar.

THE CHINESE NEEDLE

The Royal Dutch Family is a most adventuresome, gung-ho group, apparently willing to try anything. Several years ago Queen Juliana shocked the old palace guard by consulting a woman faith-healer in Amsterdam, Greet Hofmans.

Now, her husband, Prince Bernhard, is taking acupuncture treatment from a Chinese physician in London.

Acupuncture involves the insertion of hair-thin, stainless-steel needles into the skin. Prince Bernhard has been suffering from arthritis and bursitis in his shoulder and arm joints, and apparently two needle sessions with a Chinese physician in London's Harley Street have worked wonders for him.

There are two large Chinatowns in this country, one in San Francisco, the other in New York City, where Chinese medical practitioners use acupuncture. A handful of U.S. doctors also employ acupuncture, especially in their study of "trigger points" and "nerve blocs," but these American physicians insist upon absolute secrecy for understandable reasons.

Says one in Los Angeles: "Once President Nixon returns from mainland China and we begin a professional exchange of knowledge and personnel with the Chinese, you will see a surprising boom in this country in the use of acupuncture. The Chinese have been using needles for more than 1000 years, and they've learned a lot."

OATH CHANGES

The Hippocratic oath, once as sacred to the medical profession as wedding vows to a marriage, is going out of style.

Medical schools throughout the country are rejecting the traditional oath in favor of a more modern statement of professional ethics.

Dr. Ralph Crawshaw, Portland, Oreg., psychiatrist who has made a study of medical oaths, reports that only 17 percent of U.S. medical schools still use the classical form of the Hippocratic oath which begins "I swear by Apollo Physician and Asclepius and Hygieia and Panacea, and all the gods and goddesses...."

A further 29 percent of medical schools have modernized the language of the Hippocratic oath, occasionally deleting such provisions as the prohibition against abortion.

Still other medical schools have abandoned the Hippocratic oath, substituting instead the Declaration of Geneva, drafted in 1948 by the World Medical Association, or the prayer of Maimonides, a simple ritual statement of professional faith which recent graduates of the University of Miami School of Medicine chose as having "relevance in a modern world." Herewith the Maimonides pledge:

"Thy eternal providence has appointed me to watch over the life and health of Thy creatures. May the love for my art actuate me at all times; may neither avarice nor miserliness, nor thirst for glory, or for a great reputation engage my mind; for the enemies of truth and philanthropy could easily deceive me and make me forgetful of my lofty aim of doing good to Thy children.

"May I never see in the patient anything but a fellow creature in pain.

"Grant me strength, time and opportunity always to correct what I have acquired, always to extend its domain; for knowledge is immense and the spirit of man can extend indefinitely to enrich itself daily with new requirements.

"Today he can discover his errors of yesterday and tomorrow he can obtain a new light on what he thinks himself sure of today. Oh, God, Thou has appointed me to watch over the life and death of Thy creatures; here I am ready for my vocation and now I turn unto my calling."

NEW FRONTIERS FOR THE BLIND

Playboy magazine, famous for its eye-filling displays of female pulchritude, is now available in an edition for the blind.

Published by the Library of Congress Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, Playboy in braille is available free upon request to any blind U.S. citizen.

Asked if the braille edition contains a tactile version of the famous centerfold, a magazine spokesman replied, "No, I'm afraid they haven't gotten that far in their technology."

That day is coming, however. Elizabeth Freund, who taught at the Overbrook School for the Blind in Philadelphia, has already succeeded in making braille models of maps and biology charts as educational aids. With materials such as sandpaper and cord, Mrs. Freund creates a model which is then glazed over in plastic, leaving the bumpy tactile impressions of the original.

The most traditional method of educating the blind, reading aloud by volunteers, is also expanding and profiting from modern technology. Recording for the Blind, a national non-profit organization, now has a library containing master tapes of 14,562 books in all fields of human endeavor. Tapes are loaned free of charge to blind borrowers, and new titles are continually recorded by specially trained volunteers.

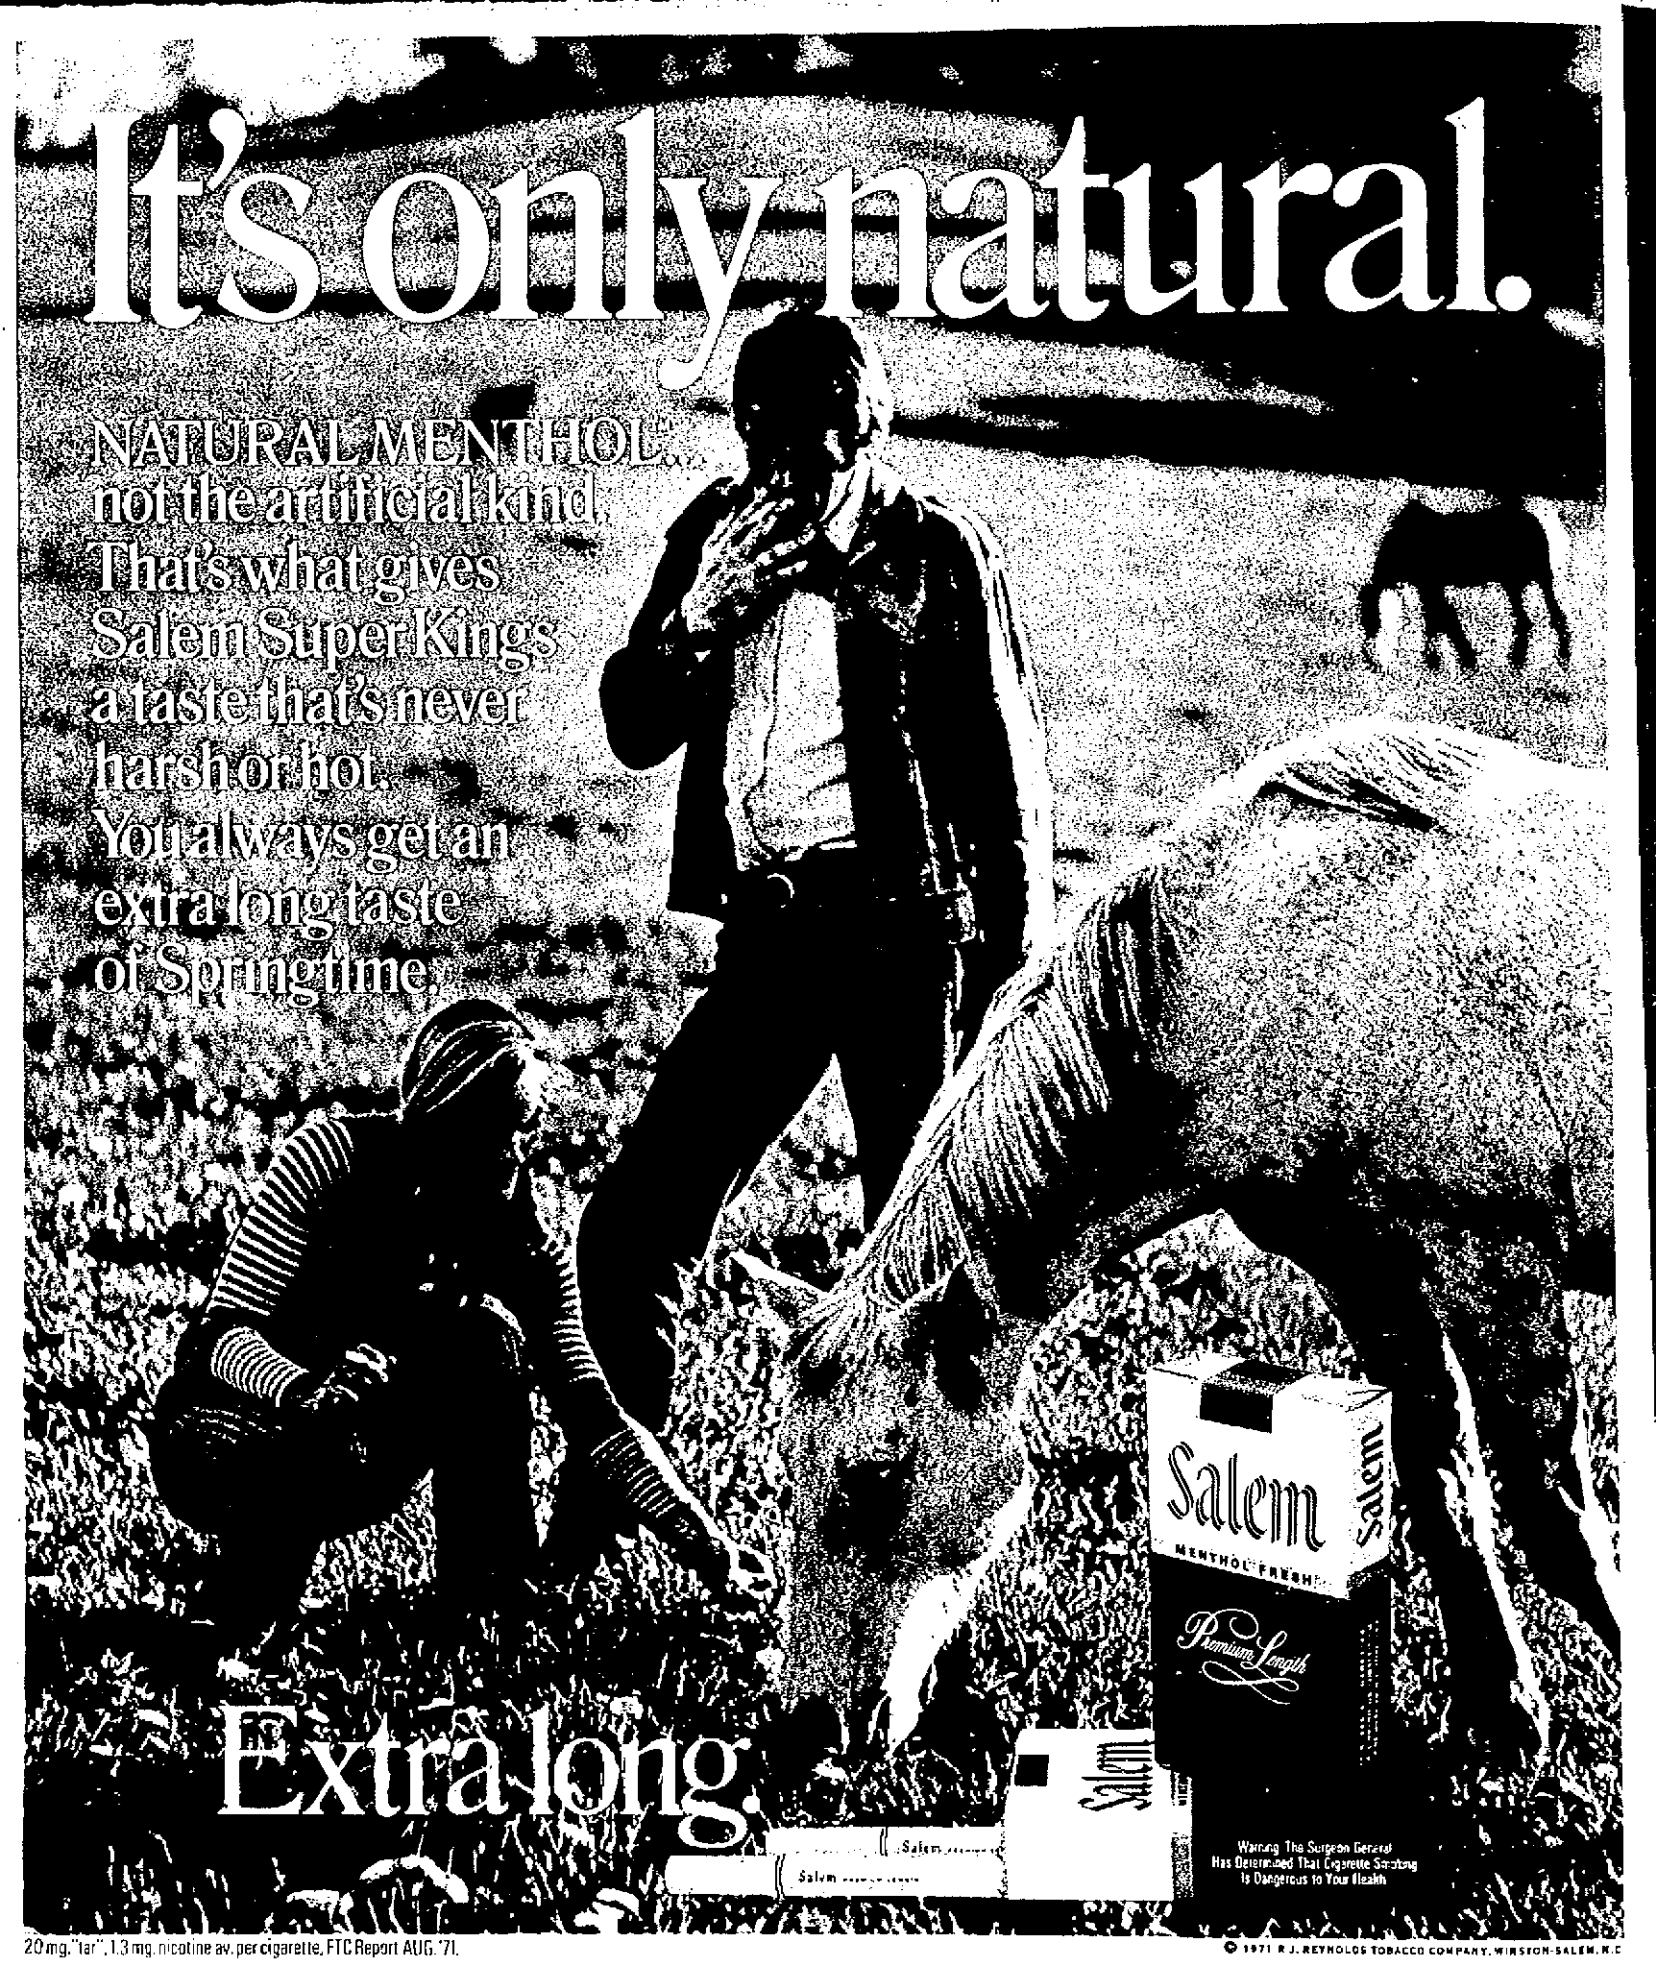

Photographing pinups is traditionally an all-male preserve. Only men, the theory goes, know how to get the best out of female models.

But like all the other male bastions, pinup photography is yielding to the feminine challenge.

Pirelli, European tire manufacturers who issue a yearly calendar prized by photographers and girlie fans alike, have chosen a woman to photograph their 1972 edition. She is Sarah Moon, 31, former French fashion model.

Explains a Pirelli spokesman: "We picked Sarah because she is the best photographer for the job."

PROF. SCOTT WARD

CHILDREN AND COMMERCIALS What is the long-range effect upon children who watch television commercials year after year?

Instead of becoming super-consumers, as advertisers hope, they become cynical. So reports Professor Scott Ward of Harvard's Graduate School of Business Administration.

In a project cosponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Marketing Science Institute of Cambridge, Professor Ward monitored the commercial-watching behavior of over 1000 children and teenagers aged 5-17. He found that very young children often fail to distinguish between commercials and regular programming, but that by the second grade they understand the purpose of commercials--to sell products. At all ages, however, he reports, they suffer decreased attention span during commercial spots.

By the time they reach the fourth grade, moreover, most children express distrust and even contempt for TV commercials. Seventy percent agreed, for example, that "most commercials are in bad taste and are very annoying." Others called commercials "an insult to the intelligence," "stupid," or "false."

All children seek entertainment rather than information from commercials, Professor Ward found, and prefer those commercials which are "funny" rather than serious. When asked to name their favorite commercials, they listed drug, medicine and soft drink ads as most entertaining.

Black children, Ward believes, are most receptive to commercial messages because they consider material goods more important to personal happiness than white children do. For black children, large numbers of whom belong to the "have-nots" of our society, commercials may be a means of vicarious participation in a desired life style, a means to identify with others more fortunate.

Professor Ward is searching for financial support for more research using larger sample sizes.

GLUED TO TV, SOLD ON THE SHOWS, BUT NOT THE COMMERCIALS.

PASSION FRUIT A young South African was recently convicted of sexually assaulting two women nine times in rapid succession.

At his trial the accused claimed that he lost control of himself after eating a number of fruit from the marula tree.

Marula pips, it turns out, are used by African tribesmen in the Transvaal as an aphrodisiac that they believe confers prodigious sexual powers.

Moreover, the tribesmen claim, the sex potion enjoys the added property of acting as a birth control agent when taken by women.

Farmers of the region corroborate both claims, reporting that their cows become infertile after eating the fruit and highly aggressive on a full stomach of marula pips. Elephants in marula country relish the fruit as do other animals. It makes them aggressively potent.

SPANISH CENSORSHIP The Franco government in Spain bans all publications which mention the succession of Juan Carlos to the Spanish throne.

Most recently, the Spanish government has banned Time magazine and the Paris Herald Tribune. Official sources say that Franco will not permit the sale of media containing mention of the succession.

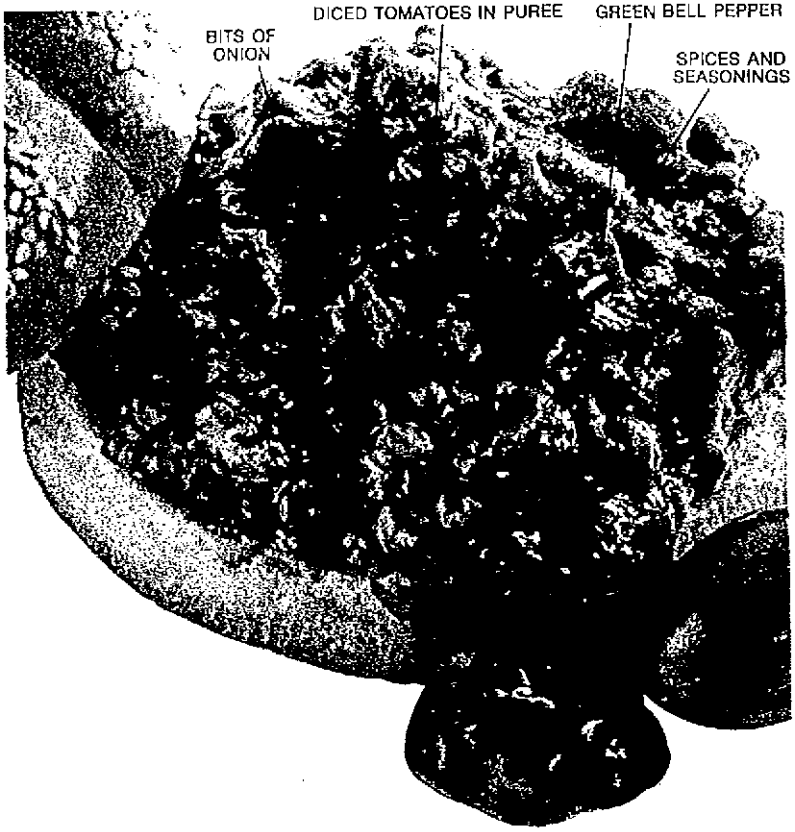

THREAT TO U.S. MEAT SUPPLY Veterinarians with the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) of the Department of Agriculture warn that at least two devastating animal diseases have become threats to the U.S. meat supply, could wipe out part of it almost overnight and send prices soaring.

One is African swine fever--the most deadly of all hog diseases. It has been reported just recently in Cuba--only 90 miles offshore. Until 1957 African swine fever was just that--an African malady. Then, with the emergence of newly independent African nations, relaxation of export regulations and greatly accelerated travel with the outside world, the disease began to move. It turned up in Portugal, went on to Spain, France, Italy and now Cuba. In Spain it claimed 10 percent of the swine population in a single year. Such losses scare U.S. producers. A comparable outbreak in this country could mean the loss of 5 million hogs in a year, sending pork prices way up.

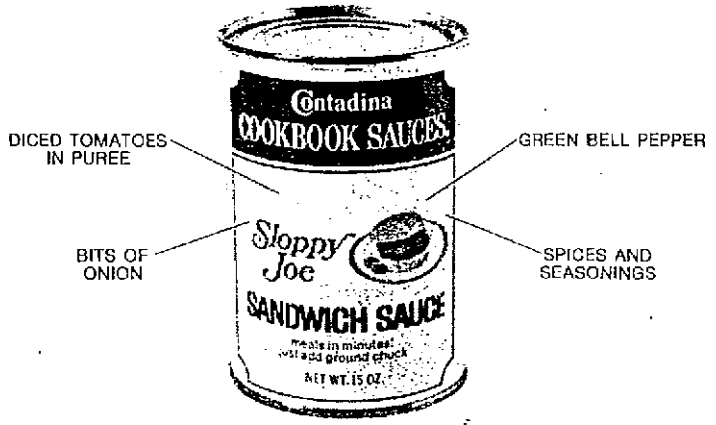

Another potential threat to U.S. livestock is foot-and-mouth disease, according to Dr. E. E. Saulmon, ARS deputy administrator. This is found throughout South America and the coming completion of the Pan-American Highway will mean more northward traffic, more risk of disease introduction into Central America, Mexico and the United States. Also, the disease is prevalent in Europe, Asia and Africa, and Dr. Saulmon says the U.S. is extremely lucky to have had no outbreak since 1929.

The diseases may enter the country in many ways--on a traveler's luggage, his shoes or clothing, in a souvenir packed in straw. Farmers who go abroad, particularly livestock producers, are warned about visiting foreign farms. If they go near livestock, they are urged to have clothes cleaned and shoes disinfected before returning. Also, they should not go near their own animals for at least seven days.

Spread of disease is so likely because of the speed with which meat animals move these days. In a recent three-day study, 20,000 animals traced through dealers, auction markets and stockyards came in contact with 1.2 million others by the time they reached destinations. And if one of the diseases is discovered, the action must be drastic--immediate slaughter not only of all infected animals but also of all those exposed.

Handsome Party Cake

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

For a special occasion such as a birthday or anniversary, make this beautiful cake with its unusual flavor. True, you can't make it in a minute, but when it's finished you'll agree it is well worth the time you invested in it.

Three Layer Raisin Cake

4 eggs, separated
2 cups sugar, divided
1 cup shortening (half butter or margarine)
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1¼ teaspoons salt
¾ cup milk
¼ cup brandy
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¾ cup dark seedless raisins
¾ cup golden seedless raisins
½ cup chopped pecans
Raisin Brandy Filling*
Butter Cream Frosting*

Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Beat in ½ cup sugar gradually, beating until stiff. Set aside. Cream shortening with remaining 1½ cups sugar. Beat in egg yolks. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add to egg yolk mixture alternately with milk and brandy. Fold in beaten egg whites. Grease and flour three 9-inch layer cake pans. Turn approximately ⅓ batter into one pan. Add cinnamon, raisins and pecans to remaining batter, mixing well. Divide between remaining 2 pans. Bake at 350° about 50 minutes, or until layers test done. Let stand 5 minutes. Turn out on racks to cool. Put layers together with Raisin Brandy Filling. Spread Butter Cream Frosting over top of cake. Garnish with whole pecan meats if desired.

*Raisin Brandy Filling

Blend ½ cup sugar with 4 tablespoons cornstarch and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Stir in 1 cup water. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until sauce boils and clears. Stir into 1 beaten egg. Return to very low heat; cook 1 minute longer, stirring briskly. Remove from heat; blend in 2 tablespoons brandy and ¾ cup chopped seedless raisins. Cool thoroughly.

*Butter Cream Frosting

Blend 2½ tablespoons soft butter or margarine, 2 cups sifted confectioners' (powdered) sugar and 1 tablespoon brandy with 1 to 2 teaspoons milk to make good spreading consistency.

The admissions officers at Union College, l to r: Peter J. Logan, 21; Jay Shupe, 24, the director; LeRoy O. Moore, 23, and John W. McMichaels, 25. They feel that being close themselves to the problems of prospective students is an asset in their work.

Students? No- They're College Officials

McMichaels (l.), the old man of the admissions team, welcomes an applicant.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

A father with his high school senior son walked into Union College's admissions center here recently and, encountering what seemed to be a student, asked, "Young fellow, where do we find the director of admissions?"

The young man laughed—he's getting used to this sort of thing—and said, "I'm Jay Shupe, the admissions director. What can I do for you?"

When the father recovered from surprise, he and Shupe, who's only 24 years old, got down to discussing the status of the son as an applicant to enter the college.

Union College, founded in 1795, is one of the nation's oldest but it's in the forefront of a new trend among U.S. colleges and universities—a trend of giving to youth a decision-making voice in many aspects of institutional life.

And in the matter of admissions—deciding just who may and may not enter the freshman class—Union is believed to be the U.S. leader in enlisting the talents of the young. Shupe, for example, has three assistants—one 23 years old, another 21, and one old fogy who's all of 25. Together this staff recently sifted 2200 applications, conducted nearly that many personal interviews and selected which 900 high school seniors to invite to Union for the school year that has just begun.

Growls one crusty alumnus: "These kids are too young for all that responsibility. The admissions staff should be older and more experienced."

Union College president Dr. Harold C. Martin does not agree: "That's nonsense. This young team has the whole admissions operation under smooth control. And in many ways there's an advantage in having young admissions people dealing with the high school students who are so close to the same age."

Adds Shupe: "Obviously a high school kid is more comfortable talking to someone of his own generation rather than a greybeard. The administration part of admissions can be handled by an intelligent person of 22, 32, 42, 52, or what have you. But I feel that we in our early and middle 20's are closer to the problems and concerns and worries of high school kids. It was only yesterday that we had them ourselves."

Feel free to ask

Further detail comes from one of the assistants, LeRoy O. Moore, 23, a Wesleyan University psychology major and a handsome bearded black from Memphis: "In the interviews these kids are extremely curious about the college they might be attending. They ask me all sorts of questions I don't think they'd ask an older person about dating customs, whether the campus has a drug problem, are there any liberal student organizations. In this way we find out much more about the applicant than an older interviewer could do in one of those wooden exchanges of question and answer between the Establishment and the youngster."

The old man of the team—25-year-old John W. McMichaels, Amherst graduate and former Navy officer, concedes that being young and new to the admissions job leads to occasional emotional involvement with applicants that might not be felt by a seasoned oldtimer.

"Sometimes you do carry remorse around with you when you've had to reject somebody who seemed to have some good points but just didn't measure up overall against the competition. It would be a lot simpler if you could just feed cards into a computer and let it make the decision."

Peter J. Logan, the other assistant, 21, Dartmouth '70, notes a problem that arises frequently: "Sometimes a kid looks great on paper—fine grades, good test scores and lots of school activity. And then in the personal interview he comes out as something of a dud. Or, the other way around—very ordinary on paper but when you meet him, you're very impressed with his attitude, expression, enthusiasm. In these cases you have to wonder which is the real person as an applicant."

Union began accepting women undergraduates a year ago by sending out to 2000 high schools a poster reading: "Girls are imaginative, beautiful, coy, clever, funny . . . and accepted at Union College starting in 1970." Well over 20 percent of the applicants Shupe's team has just selected are women. Why then, he is asked, don't you have one woman assistant in admissions?

"When we put this staff together," he replies, "we asked about 300 women whether they'd feel better being interviewed by a woman. Nearly all said it wouldn't make any difference. So, for the two places open we interviewed six women and 12 men. We hired the two best and they happened to be men."

Out of his work in admissions—Shupe was an assistant here until last year when he became the nation's youngest director at a four-year college—he has developed a list of hints for prospective college applicants. He advises all such young people to clip this list and be mindful of it:

- Visit any school you are interested in and have long talks with students. Ask lots of questions.
- Use the application forms to present your statistical self but by all means follow up with an interview if that's possible. Again ask lots of questions. The more good ones you ask, the better impression you make. Many applicants are asked to write an essay. Be sure to pick a subject that interests you.
- If two candidates are equal in grades and only one place is available, the one with the best extracurricular record will be chosen. Hence, search your field of true interests, and get involved in relevant activities, hopefully to a point of leadership. Don't join activities "just for the record." Superficial involvement will soon show itself.
- Make a thorough assessment of the college that attracts you—its environment, size, location, curricular offerings. Remember, the college that's just right for one person is not so for another.
- Don't try to misrepresent yourself in any way before the admissions officers. Even those as young as the Shupe team know all the tricks.

Message for educators

These five points are for the benefit of future college applicants. But Union's young officers, largely through their closeness to high school students, also have a message for the educators who run the nation's high schools. More and more applicants for college are telling admissions officers that their last year of high school was a big bore.

Speaking for the Union team, Peter Logan says: "We're getting that word here very clearly. Kids are maturing more quickly these days and the high schools have got to figure more ways to keep them involved. The most frequently asked question we get here is: 'How much opportunity is there for student involvement at your college?' "

And a final question for the young admissions officers: If youth is such an advantage, what will happen to them when they are old men of about 30? "The only possible answer to that," says Shupe, "is to keep thinking young."

Betty Grable:

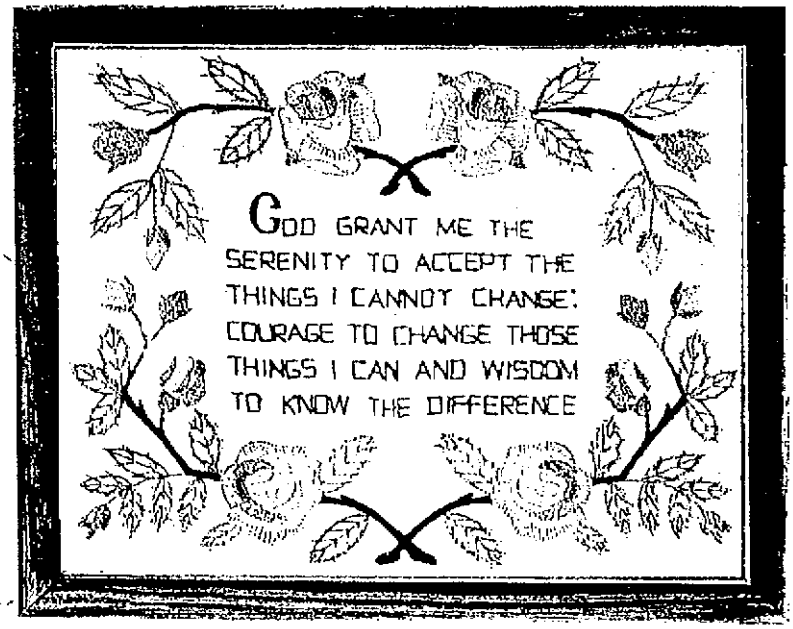

then... now

"I made the movie, Mother Wore Tights, over twenty-five years ago, but I've been in show business a lot longer than that," says Betty Grable. "My friends say I'm still looking good. (My enemies say I'm very well preserved.)

"Would you like to know what I do to take care of myself? Nothing very mysterious. I exercise regularly. I eat the right food and get enough rest. And there's one more important thing. I start each day with a Geritol tablet, to be sure I get enough iron and vitamins. Geritol is one of the nice things I do for myself."

Lion Island at Bronx Zoo typifies the new look in better zoos today. By simulating natural habitats, they hope to give visitors a feeling of contact with the wild.

The Changing Zoo

by Edward Riccitui

Moving so lightly that its feet seem hardly to touch the ground, a kit fox hurries through the desert twilight. Nimbly detouring around a hognose skunk that is shuffling along on its evening rounds, the fox darts to the top of a rock outcropping. Then, pausing for a moment against a sunset sky, it scrambles down a gully and up the far bank to meet a second kit fox in the shadow of a saguaro cactus.

It all looks so real—just the kind of episode you might expect to see on the Southwestern desert. But it is not the Southwestern desert, it's the Bronx Zoo in New York City, and neither the sunset nor the gully, nor the rock, nor the cactus are real. The foxes and the skunk, however, are live wild animals, and so are the pack rat, armadillo, bull snake and lizard that live with them.

All these creatures inhabit a man-made arroyo that is one of 30 exhibits in the "World of Darkness," a new building at the Bronx Zoo. Each exhibit houses wild creatures that occupy ecological niches dependent on darkness—the darkness of night or the cave. The animals live in surroundings which through the use of modern exhibits techniques closely simulate their natural wilderness habitats.

Moreover, because of special lighting and reversal of the day-night cycle in the building the animals are up and about. Normally, zoo visitors see nocturnal animals only as sleeping lumps of fur or feathers tucked in half-hidden corners.

A revolution

The World of Darkness and its simulated habitat exhibits typify the new look in better zoos around the country. Essentially, they are trying to give visitors a feeling of contact with the wilderness and wild creatures. The objective is to help people understand the relationship between wild animals and the environment, and this is causing a revolution in zoos today. At a time when public understanding of environmental subtleties is critical, zoos are striving to fill a new role in ecological education.

The Milwaukee Zoo exhibits predators and their natural prey together but separated by a cleverly hidden moat. With ecology an issue of the day, zoos are playing a growing role in environmental education.

A good zoo, says William G. Conway, who heads the New York Zoological Society and Bronx Zoo, should bring a taste of the wilderness into the heart of the city. It can provide recreation and a respite from urban stresses. Committed to conservation, Conway views a zoo as a place where posters, publications and exhibit graphics should proclaim the links between phenomena such as increase in human population and diminishing wildlife populations.

Leading zoos also take an active part in the struggle to keep threatened species from extinction. Many zoos are trying to breed rare animals in captivity. Several species, in fact, remain on this earth only because of captive breeding.

Various zoos have their breeding specialties. The Bronx Zoo's prime male snow leopard has sired about a dozen cubs by females from the Oklahoma City and Milwaukee zoos, as well as its own females. The Milwaukee Zoo breeds moose, the Portland (Oregon) Zoo produces Indian elephants, and the Honolulu Zoo leads in breeding Galapagos tortoises.

Animals, not freaks

The new zoo philosophy mandates that animals be exhibited in normal social groups in natural surroundings rather than as freaks in solitary confinement. This is a marked departure from the time when at the Bronx Zoo, so the story goes, a starchy official directed that only lions of the same sex should be exhibited together. This, it was noted, would protect public sensibilities. Today a pair of lions lives on the zoo's Lion Island and has produced more than 16 young.

The new Milwaukee Zoo features a number of panoramas in which animals are exhibited according to their continental origins. Predators and the animals on which they dine are exhibited together, separated by cleverly hidden moats. The moats keep the tigers from the deer, the lions from the zebra and the jaguars from the tapirs.

By watching wild animals acting normally in the new zoo exhibits people should gain insight into the way all organisms, including man, fit into the natural scheme of things.

Zoo men point out that it is likely the urban vote in years to come will influence high-level decisions on the fate of wilderness areas and wild animals. Says Conway: "The preservation of foxes and armadillos on the Western desert will not be determined by fragmentary rural populations but by the dwellers of crowded cities. These people will form their opinions at the zoo."

Ironically, when zoos promise to become full-fledged cultural and scientific institutions many of them are in serious financial trouble. Some are in a life-and-death struggle against increasingly large deficits.

Costs soar

The reason for this dollar dilemma is in many cases drearily simple. The municipalities that partially or fully support most zoos are diverting money to more pressing social needs. At the same time costs of zoo operation are zooming.

As traditional sources of income dry up zoo executives are after new ones. They now aggressively seek grants formerly reserved for museums and purely research institutions, increased private donations, and are attempting self-support by concessions and admission charges. Increasingly, too, business is becoming a source of aid for financially pressed zoos.

More than 90 million visitors passed through the gates of United States zoos last year, a fact that has not gone unnoticed by promotion-minded businessmen. In June 1970, for instance, Western Airlines inaugurated non-stop San Diego-Denver service by flying a pair of agoutis, large South American rodents, and ten pheasants from the San Diego Zoo to the Denver Zoo. A pronghorn antelope rode on the return trip.

New project

The size of the zoo audience also means that firms wishing to promote a sensible approach to ecology can reach great masses of people by providing funds for new zoo exhibits.

San Diego Zoo, built on a terrain of natural canyons and mesas and blessed with a near-perfect outdoor climate, is going afield for its newest project. It is actually a new zoo in itself, an 1800-acre game preserve near Escondido in northern San Diego County. The preserve, the San Pasqual Wild Animal Park, is scheduled to open next Easter.

Dr. Charles R. Schroeder, San Diego Zoo director, talks of a "new direction in exhibit design—the establishment of zoos involving hundreds, even thousands of acres, providing greater opportunity for visitors to see animals living as they do in their native habitats."

Owned by the city and operated by the zoo, the new preserve will cost $25 million to develop.

Income source

Most of San Diego's income comes from its admission charge—$1.50 for visitors age 16 and up—and its extensive facilities operation. It is the most commercially oriented of the nation's public zoos, with a large number of shops, restaurants and a skyride.

Local business also has chipped in its share. Says Schroeder: "Many capital improvements made over the years are possible by way of contributions from local companies and businessmen."

San Diego, of course, is not the only town where businessmen help their local zoo. One Milwaukee brewery bought three white rhinos for the zoo there, and another brewery purchased three gorillas.

By and large, however, most zoos lack substantial business support. This is unfortunate because a good zoo, particularly in a smaller city, can be a great drawing card, bringing in trade as well as providing education and recreation.

Zoos are emerging at long last as environmental education centers. But those zoos largely dependent upon municipal support will not realize their potential as long as the cities are caught in an increasingly severe fiscal crunch.

A scene at the San Diego Zoo, one of the nation's best. Local businesses are chipping in, and a new preserve is planned at a cost of $25 million.

WESLEY RIDLON: POLICEMAN OF THE YEAR

He Builds a Bridge Between Kids and Cops

by John G. Rogers

On the youth beat: Wesley Ridlon, the Policeman of the Year, believes that "kids are the most important resource we have."

PORTLAND, MAINE.

When Officer Wesley W. Ridlon of of the Portland Police Department recently came to the end of a rap session on drug abuse at a school for delinquent boys, one of the wayward teenagers approached him and mumbled, "If I'd had a chance to meet you a year ago, I don't think they'd had to send me to this place."

Wes Ridlon was touched because nearly all his work as a law enforcement officer is trying to build a bridge between kids and cops, trying to convince skeptical schoolchildren that the police are "human guys" vitally necessary to the orderly conduct of society.

New trend in police work

More and more police departments all over the country are assigning full-time officers to this same assignment. And because it's thus acknowledged by lawmen to be important duty and because Wes Ridlon has been a model performer, he has been selected as the 1971 recipient of the symbolic Police Service Award conferred by PARADE and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

This sixth annual award is made in appreciation of good work done by peace officers everywhere. It also is made in an effort to dramatize the great variety of police work which is not all chasing "bad guys." In Ridlon's case it's dedication to making friends.

"Kids are surely the most important resource we have," says Ridlon, himself the father of three. "Personally I shudder at the thought of alienating them and I can't see any reason why police work should be performed in a way that turns them off. We have got to show them that we're important to each other."

This week, in Anaheim, Calif., at the annual convention of the police chiefs' association, Ridlon will be awarded a plaque, and honorable mention plaques will go to ten other officers as symbolic awards recognizing the many ways in which police make themselves useful.

Ridlon's usefulness to the school kids of Portland, and by extension to the entire community, can be seen in many ways. He recalls that when he first began going to schools, he would hear mutters: "There's a cop. Wonder who he's chasing." But now they run up to him with a "Hi, Mr. Ridlon. Are you gonna give us a talk today?" And everywhere he goes about the city, he is greeted by his young friends. He visits them at schools and playgrounds for all sorts of group activity—lectures, film and slide demonstrations, bicycle rodeos and just plain rapping. And they come to him, more and more of them, as individuals with problems.

Says Assistant School Superintendent Clyde Bartlett: "As good a way as any to measure the success of Wes Ridlon's work is in the numbers of youngsters who seek him out after school hours and ask his advice. They'll often go to him rather than their guidance counselors. That's pretty fine praise for a police officer."

Ridlon recounts: "I never cease to be Clears walks and driveways—even the heaviest drifts—so quickly, so thoroughly, you may never have to lift a snow shovel again!

In summer, your Jiffy-Jet Flame Gun burns out weeds instantly, without stooping, squatting or straining . . . and without staining your clothes. In less time than it takes to tell about it, you can edge walks and paths . . . destroy weeds and grass from between patio flagstones and bricks—even in cracks in walks and driveways. Get rid of insect nests—even inhabited ones . . . at a safe distance. Keep flower beds edged more neatly and attractively than ever before. And use your Jiffy-Jet to light barbecue charcoal and campfires, too.

Fine-Tuning Adjust-A-Flame Valve Adapts To A Variety Of Uses

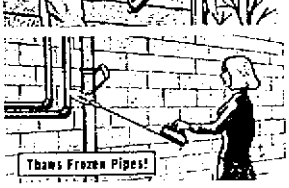

Turn the valve fully open . . . and Jiffy-Jet instantly produces a wide, powerful jet of flame. Or turn the valve nearly shut . . . and tune down the flame to a thin wisp. So you can handle all sorts of jobs—easily. This remarkable flame gun is extra-light in weight (less than 3 lbs. when fully loaded with a propane cylinder) . . . yet so effective, it performs real heavy-duty jobs without wincing!

Jiffy-Jet's long barrel lets you do just about any job without bending or stretching. And this astounding flame gun runs for up to 12 hours on a single standard cylinder of propane gas—readily obtainable at most hardware, paint and department stores.

POLICEMAN CONTINUED

amazed at the variety of problems bothering kids today: How far can the police go in searching a car for beer cans? If a young fellow drinks moderately at a school dance, can he still get in trouble? If you're at a party and drugs are being used, but you don't know it, why is it the police can still arrest you? Frankly, I can't answer all their questions to their satisfaction. And if I can't, I level with them. You have to do that. A kid can spot evasion immediately."

PARADE watched Ridlon in action before a group of disadvantaged young women and saw an example of his honest approach. One of them said, "You people make a big thing against narcotics but still you'll use alcohol. Aren't you a hypocrite?"

"All right, you've put me on the spot," Ridlon conceded. "I'd have to admit that if it's true the heroin user starts on marijuana, then you can say the alcoholic starts on beer. I won't defend the use of alcohol but I will say that on the average it doesn't have the savage destruction of narcotics or the need to turn to crime to get it."

'Schoolteacher,' too

Ridlon, 39 years old, a member of the Presidential Honor Guard during his U.S. Army days, probably works harder than a conventional policeman in his devotion to Portland's 17,500 schoolchildren. Last year he gave nearly 600 talks. His rap sessions in the high schools—called Problems of Democracy—have proved so popular that the youngsters have asked that they be converted into a formal course with academic credit. As a result, Ridlon is now a "schoolteacher" as well as policeman, teaching a Community Awareness Program. The kids insisted that they wanted to put questions to "the people who run the community" so Ridlon is bringing in the city manager, finance director, public health officer, city councilmen and others who can answer the students' searching questions.

Having three children of his own makes Officer Ridlon sensitive to the needs of the young. Here the Ridlon family poses at the entrance of their house.

He constantly tries to give the youngsters a piece of the action: "At a parochial high school I asked them to tell me how the police department could be administered better. One of the things they came up with—they actually figured out that we could save several thousand dollars a year by buying smaller but more deluxe patrol cars because we'd get more money when we turned them in."

New climate

Says Portland Police Chief Douglas W. Steele: "Wes Ridlon's enthusiasm in working with school youngsters is creating a new climate among them as far as police work is concerned. Obviously we can give the community better service if we have the cooperation of our young people. Wes Ridlon may create a whole generation of law abiding citizens."

Ridlon doesn't pretend to aim that high. The other day at the delinquent boys' school, he encountered some of his former "customers" from Portland High School. They're now inmates.

But other cases give great satisfaction. Recently he "took charge" of a 16-year-old girl whose family had left her at loose ends. Shy and nervous, she'd taken to marijuana and speed pills. After she took an overdose, Ridlon helped place her in a mental health clinic. When she emerged he had a supermarket job waiting for her. First she worked behind the scenes, then was moved out to face the public as a cashier to overcome her shyness.

"I think she's made it," says Ridlon.

Amusing incident

Recently he experienced an incident that amused him. Two boys were riding patrol with him while making a "documentary" on police work with camera and tape recorder. A pair of young toughs came along and began to yell provocative taunts at Ridlon. The documentary makers had become so identified with Ridlon, the policeman, that they urged angrily, "Let's arrest those guys."

Perhaps the most poignant moment in his career with kids came after he'd noticed that one long-haired, sloppily-dressed boy always seemed to sneak furtively into Ridlon's Problems of Democracy class. This went on for weeks. Finally a teacher at the school happened to see the boy. The teacher came straight to Ridlon and told him the boy had been expelled from school a month ago. But he was still coming back to rap with a cop. That indicates the caliber of performance that has made Officer Wes Ridlon the Policeman of the Year.

The Ten Honorable Mentions

Sergeant Harry J. Chinn Jr., Honolulu, Hawaii. A policeman with imagination, he has invented novel methods of teaching traffic safety to U.S. Marines and schoolchildren. For youngsters he put on a play called "Who's Guilty?" and devised a prize-winning float. Result: a sharply decreased crime rate among students.

Officer Nicholas Demperio, Syracuse, N.Y. Off duty and unarmed, Demperio was in a restaurant when two robbers entered. One put a knife to Demperio's throat, the other pointed a rifle at the proprietor. Ordered to hand over wallet, Demperio jumped for the gunman. He was shot in leg, but overpowered his man.

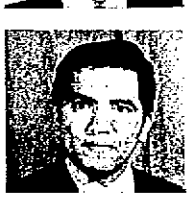

Officer Edw. Gamble, California Highway Patrol. Gamble saw a dune buggy in a California recreation area skid, roll over, and burst into flames, with the driver and a passenger strapped into place. Gamble dashed into flames and managed to extricate one. The other died. Badly burned, Gamble spent a week in a hospital.

Sgt. Billy Joe Hudson, Tallahassee, Fla. Helping people is Sergeant Hudson's specialty. He once raised $700 and 68 pints of blood for a child about to undergo heart surgery. A Baptist deacon, he "adopts" and finds gifts for poor families at Christmas, directs a rehabilitation center for alcoholics, works with delinquents.

Special Agent Dan Nuckolls, Riverside, Calif. This investigator demonstrated the value of determination and persistence in police work. Using as his takeoff the theft of two refrigerator meat trucks, he worked more than six months, solving 40 cases. As a result, 19 arrests were made for burglary, receiving stolen goods, etc.

Patrolman Herardo Rangel, San Antonio, Tex. On being sworn into the force in 1970, 23-year-old Herardo Rangel went underground to live among dope addicts and pushers, searching out firsthand evidence. After ten months, his work led to 108 indictments and 77 convictions, with sentences for the offenders totaling 150 years.

Patrolman Robert L. Ray, Mansfield, Ohio. Wearing plainclothes, Patrolman Ray was confronted by two stickup men clad in women's clothing. One held the officer at gun-point while the other tried to rob a man and his wife. Reacting swiftly, Ray managed to disarm one thug, wound the other, and capture both.

Sgt. Jerry F. Shockley, Alexandria, Va. A policeman who cares, Jerry Shockley has "adopted" the underprivileged and retarded children of one public school, arranging parties and treats for them. Last Christmas he raised a fund to give every child in the school the article of clothing he or she most needed.

Trooper Richard Terlikowski, Wisconsin Patrol. On a December day this former Green Beret saw a car skid into Lake DuBay. He dove into the water and swam to the car, which was afloat. He struggled to open a door, but finally the car sank and the trooper barely made his way to safety. The woman driver was drowned.

Patrolman Ralph Tescar, Cleveland, Ohio. Tescar captured an armed man barricaded in a building. First he talked the man, who was drunk, into allowing him to enter in exchange for a promise to divest himself of his body armor and gun. Then, when he came close enough, he grabbed the man's rifle and subdued him.

Behind Britain's hamburger boom is Peter Morton, 24, an American who wanted to give U.S. tourists a taste of home, and built a $500,000 business.

What Europe Needs Is the American Hamburger

by Connecticut Walker

LONDON.

Hamburger joints are old stuff to Americans, but not to Americans abroad or to Europeans.

Hamburger parlors are opening up all over London and will soon follow in France, Germany, and Switzerland.

The entrepreneur behind the hamburger boom is Peter Morton, 24, a brown-haired, brown-eyed American from Los Angeles.

A year and a half ago, after a postgraduate tour of Europe and North Africa, Morton, freshly graduated from the University of Denver, was wandering around London. "I couldn't find a decent hamburger," he recalls, "in this whole, wide wonderful city. I asked other American kids, and they came up with the same complaint.

"Since millions of Americans visit London year after year," Morton continues, "I figured a restaurant offering quality hamburgers would be a natural. My family—Morton's on Lake Shore Drive in Chicago—has been in the restaurant business for more than 40 years. My father, Arnold, is a vice president of the Playboy clubs. So I had an 'in' to begin with, plus some background knowledge of the business.

"Anyway, I flew to Chicago and talked with my father. I didn't have to sell him at all. We raised $50,000 pretty quickly, and I flew back to London.

"I'd been raised in Los Angeles where there's a marvelous chain of restaurants called Hamburger Hamlet, and I decided I'd model my restaurant in London after them—tasty hamburger buns, only quality meat, hamburger baskets, fresh vegetables, great sauces.

"We opened in April of 1970 flying in our own meat and you won't believe it, but in a restaurant that seats 52 people we began serving 5000 customers a week. The word-of-mouth advertising was terrific, and the publicity amazing. The British went crazy over our name, The Great American Disaster, which I'd heard many times as a description of the hamburger.

"Even on rainy nights we had waiting lines a quarter-mile long. We became the in place not only for Americans in London but for Londoners as well.

"I thought that after the tourists left London, our business would slump, that ours would be largely a seasonal business. But it's been going great guns all year long."

22 percent profit

Peter doesn't like to quote figures, but The Great American Disaster grossed approximately $500,000 from April, 1970, to April, 1971, with a 22 percent net profit. In fact, the restaurant has done so well that Morton has been bought out by one of his partners, Jules Lederer, head of Budget Car Rentals and husband of Ann Landers, the advice columnist. Lederer plans to franchise a chain of Great American Disasters all over Europe.

Morton, however, says, "I couldn't care less what Lederer does. From now on I want to stay in business with people in my own age group. They're not so quick to give advice. They're easier to get along with."

Young Morton has just opened a new restaurant here which he calls the Hard Rock Cafe. In addition to hamburgers, it features exotic alcoholic drinks.

Whether it will do as well as The Great American Disaster is difficult to tell, especially since so many other London restaurateurs have copied Morton's formula. London now boasts the Yankee Doodle, Hamburger Haven, the Hungry Years, the Long Island Expressway, each offering hamburgers, milk shakes, hot dogs, and apple pie.

According to Peter Christian, 23, manager of the original American Disaster, "There are basically two types of Americans who come to our hamburger parlors—the American student who lives here and hasn't tasted a good hamburger in months, and the American tourist who's just arrived and needs a hamburger to make him feel secure and at home.

"In addition, we get the English people who came originally out of curiosity and now keep coming back because the food is good, simple, well-prepared and relatively inexpensive."

Morton claims that he doesn't want to make a career out of the restaurant business. "All I want to do," he says, "is to make a lot of money. You know how parents are. If they can't tell their friends, 'my son is a doctor or an engineer or in the wallpaper business,' they throw a fit.

Idea, luck, timing

"I always figured that no one had to be a great genius to make a lot of money. All one needs is an idea, a little luck, and some good timing. The Great American Disaster is a success because it fills a need. I think the Hard Rock Cafe will also be a success.

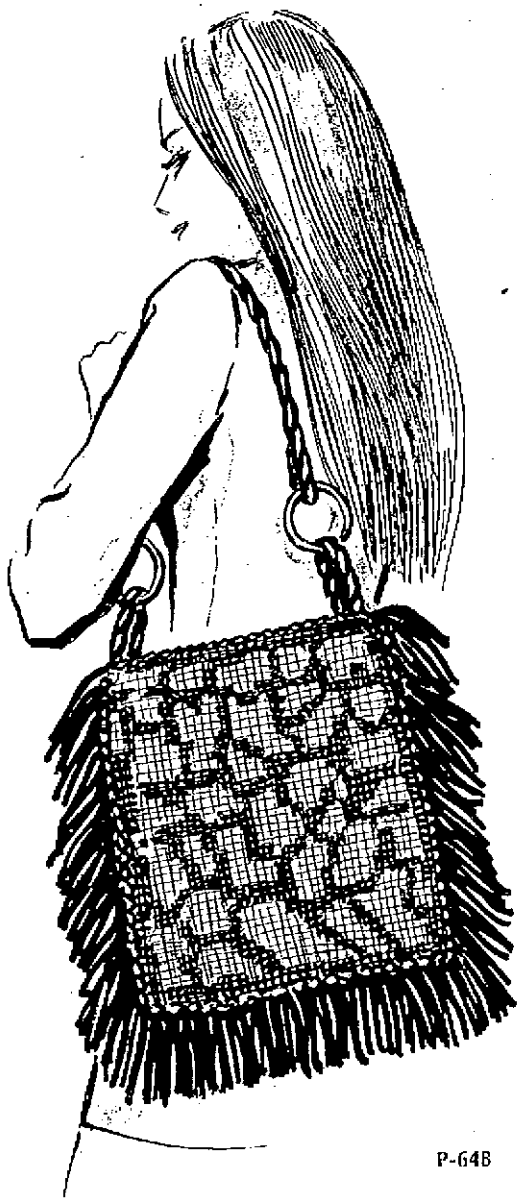

"To make a London restaurant work, you need three things: good food, good disco-music, and an attractive theme. I think we've got all three. I sure hope so. I want success lightning to strike twice because I like to travel, and travel takes money."

Satisfied patron consumes burger, with meat flown from U.S. In addition to traveling Americans, Morton found hungry British customers queuing up.

New Reynolds Brown-in-Bag™ bastes meat brown 'n juicy without basting your oven!

Juices that get out of the meat can't get out of the bag. Pan and oven stay clean.

Meats brown savory and tender. Economy cuts, too. Even well-done meats stay succulent.

Brown-in-Bag — great for poultry, fish, ham steaks, even pot roast.

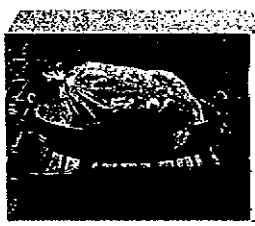

Love juicy roasts and clean ovens? Satisfy both cravings with new Reynolds Brown-in-Bag—transparent cooking bags.

You'll get juicier roasts. More gravy makin's.

The idea behind Brown-in-Bag? Beautifully simple (as you'd expect from the people who give you Reynolds Wrap). When you cook in Brown-in-Bag, the juices that used to splatter out on your oven and stick to your roasting pan now stay in the bag.

The juices condense at the top of the bag, then rain back down on your meat. So meat bastes itself, not your oven. Your oven and pan stay clean.

TWO POPULAR SIZES: 10" x 16" bag holds 3-6 lbs. Pot roast, chicken, other favorites. Recipe folder in each carton of ten. 14" x 20" bag holds 6-12 lbs. Two chickens, ham, roast, many others. Cartons of eight, with recipe folder.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

GI'S LINE UP IN VIETNAM AT HEROIN DETECTION CENTER TO GIVE URINE SAMPLES.

Service Addicts

So much has been written about drug addiction in the U.S. Armed Forces that it is difficult to separate truth from fiction.

Here are a few facts, however:

In the first six months of 1971, nearly 16,000 U.S. servicemen voluntarily turned themselves in as drug users and asked for curative treatment.

The vast majority of these men, 14,736, were Army men.

The other services reported fewer men, largely because their amnesty programs were not begun until a few months ago.

The Air Force notes that between March 8 and July 28 of this year, 977 men requested rehabilitation from drug use.

The Navy reported 179 men as of Aug. 13, and the Marine Corps 99 men as of Aug. 16, but this was only a few days after their rehabilitation programs had gotten underway.

It appears that between 5 percent to 10 percent of Army men have been addicted to drugs, and much lower percentages in other services. Duty in Vietnam is the single major cause of drug addiction in the Armed Forces.

Quarter System

Summer has always been the season of freedom for American youth, freedom for three months to work or play, free from the constraint of attending school.

What if you had the choice of taking your "summer vacation" during the fall, winter, or spring instead?

Starting this year, the Baltimore city school system will offer this choice to students in four city junior and senior high schools which will convert to the quarter system on an experimental basis.

"The need for a summer vacation," explains Wilmer Bell, Baltimore's assistant superintendent of schools, "goes back to the rural economy when boys were needed to help out on the farm during the summer.

"This, of course, is no longer the case in an urban society."

The Board of Education's primary motive for trying the quarter system is financial: year-round utilization of existing schools will reduce the need for new construction. The student will also gain certain advantages:

(1) He may choose his vacation quarter, and staggered vacations will alleviate the rush on summer jobs.

(2) He may choose to take a heavy course load for four quarters a year and graduate in three years instead of four.

(3) He may choose to take a light course load for four quarters in order to hold down a job or just to have more free time, without falling behind.

(4) The greater number of courses offered will permit students to advance at a faster pace or to repeat courses without waiting a year.

Olympic Response

The organizing committee of the 1972 summer Olympics in Munich issued a call last spring for 27,000 temporary employees.

So far, the committee has received anywhere from 10,000-20,000 applications from PARADE readers alone.

The committee has asked this column to clarify the following two points: knowledge of the German language is a prerequisite for employment, and the committee pays travel expenses only within Germany, not from the U.S. to Germany.

The committee apologizes for the fact that due to the pressure of time and paperwork, it is unable to reply to applicants who do not specify a knowledge of the German language.

GI Bill

Next year 1,115,000 men will leave the U.S. military, according to Pentagon figures.

A good many of them will probably end up in the army of the unemployed.

Unemployment in the country at large now stands at about 6 percent. Among veterans the percentage is over twice as high: 14.2 percent last June.

For the veteran, however, there is an alternative to unemployment: the GI Bill, which now pays GI's $175 a month to go back to school.

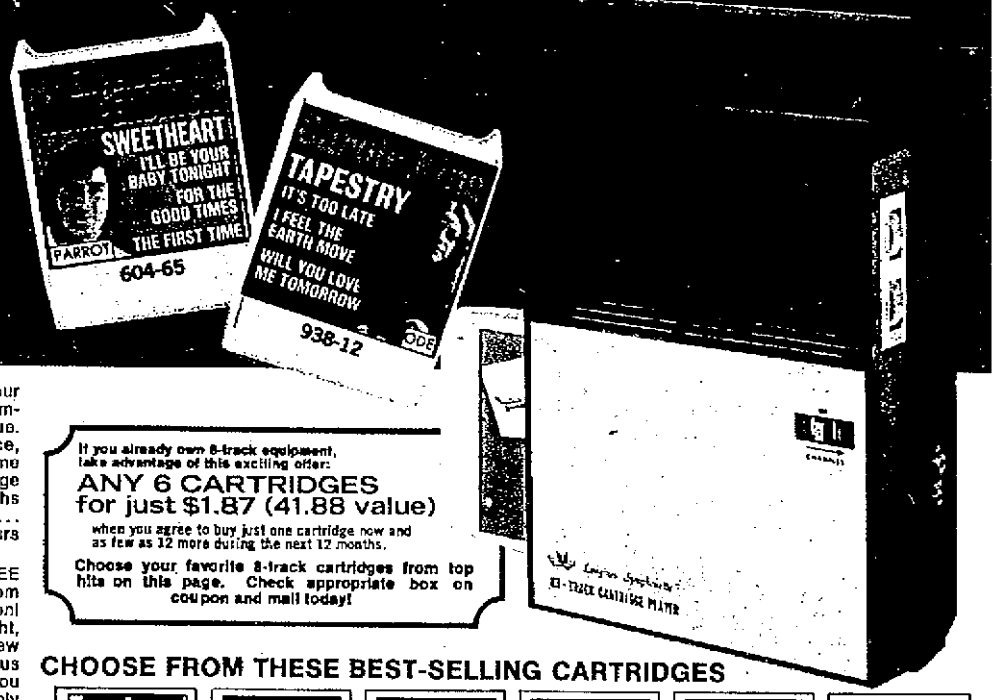

Since World War II when the GI Bill was enacted, 12.7 million veterans have taken advantage of $21 billion in Federal funds to resume their education.

After World War II, 50 percent of those eligible used their veteran benefits, after Korea, 42 percent. But among Vietnam veterans, the percentage may be as low as 20 percent. Why, when the economy is so unreceptive to veterans anyway?

Mrs. Ella T. Grasso, Democratic Congresswoman from Connecticut, believes that skyrocketing tuition and living costs discourage most veterans from taking advantage of the GI Bill. She has proposed legislation to raise the monthly benefits to $277 as an incentive to veterans to improve their skills before entering the job market.

My Favorite Jokes

by Phil Brito

EDITOR'S NOTE: Phil Brito has been in show business since he was 17. An emcee-singer, he made his mark with such top crews as the Al Donahue band and the Jan Savitt orchestra and then went on his own. He has brought his songs and patter to such TV shows as Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, Milton Berle, Jerry Lewis, Jackie Gleason and Steve Allen. Among his million-record sellers is "Mama," to which he wrote the standard English lyric.

But the real story about Phil Brito is that around a year ago he underwent open-heart surgery, after being sidelined for several years. It was his friend, sportscaster Phil Rizzuto, who encouraged him to take that big step. Now on the comeback trail, Phil has cut an album for his own label, Jerida, "It's Ballad Time Again."

Brito, a native of West Virginia, is 53 and lives with his wife in West Orange, N.J. They have three grandchildren. He is active in campaigns to help others live normal lives with their heart conditions. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

During dinner at my house one of my grandchildren found that her serving of chicken included two wings. She complained, "Can't I get something else? This is nothing but hinges."

I had an appointment for a recording conference and I dropped into a Broadway delicatessen for a quick plate of cold cuts. Time passed and the order hadn't arrived. Finally I told the waiter, "I'm in a big hurry. What happened to that plate of cold cuts?" "They're on the fire," he said automatically.

A friend of mine found out that it doesn't pay to take signs seriously. He passed by a novelty shop and on the window there was a sign reading, "Sale. Last three days." He bought an item and, sure enough, it lasted three days.

A hostess was instructing her new maid on how to behave that night. "My husband is bringing home some very important people. I want you to be very careful — don't spill anything." "I won't," promised the maid, "I'll keep my mouth shut all night."

A mechanic visited a psychiatrist and said he was going nuts fixing compact autos. "We'll see what we can do," said the doctor. "Walk over there and climb under the couch."

There's a comedian we know who's so stingy that when he got married he bought half a wedding cake.

My wife has learned a sign language. She doesn't buy things for cash. She takes her credit card to department stores and simply signs for everything she buys. They've named an auto after her—the Charger.

One of my wife's friends bought a parrot. As soon as she brought the bird home, he started to use a stream of vile language. She brought the bird back to the shop. "I don't want this bird. He keeps screaming for whiskey and uses the foulest language." "Don't be too critical, lady," said the man. "Just be happy that he doesn't gamble."

I once played an engagement in a very small town, many years ago. I expected some important mail during the stay, but as the days went by, the letter never arrived. I went to the post office to complain. I told the postmaster, "No mail has come to my hotel room for more than a week. What's wrong?" He pointed and said, "You can see for yourself—the bag isn't even half full yet."

This happened at a USO club. A GI strolled in and he was soon approached by a sympathetic lady in charge. "Why don't you go into the next room," she smiled, "they have a lot of nice cookies in there." "No, thanks," said the soldier, "I expect my own girl to meet me here soon."

A man walked into a dentist's office and was told that it would cost $100 to pull a tooth. "$100 just to pull a tooth?" asked the patient. "What would it cost just to loosen it a little?"

"Hey, waiter," yelled a patron, "are you sure this is peach pie?" "What does it taste like?" asked the waiter. "I really don't know," said the customer. "Then what difference does it make?" said the waiter.

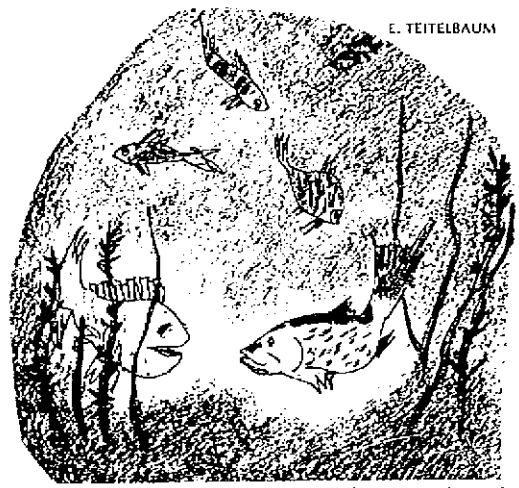

Woman lecturing panhandler: "How come I see you along here everyday in the week—half drunk?" "Because I run out of money, lady," he replied.

Helps Solve 3 Biggest FALSE TEETH Worries and Problems

Consider a denture adhesive. FASTEETH® Powder does all of this: 1) Helps hold uppers and lowers longer, firmer, steadier. 2) Holds them more comfortably. 3) Helps you eat more naturally. Why worry? Use FASTEETH Denture Adhesive Powder. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly.

PIN-WORMS CAN MAKE YOUR CHILD ITCHY, FIDGETY

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms, ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 8 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

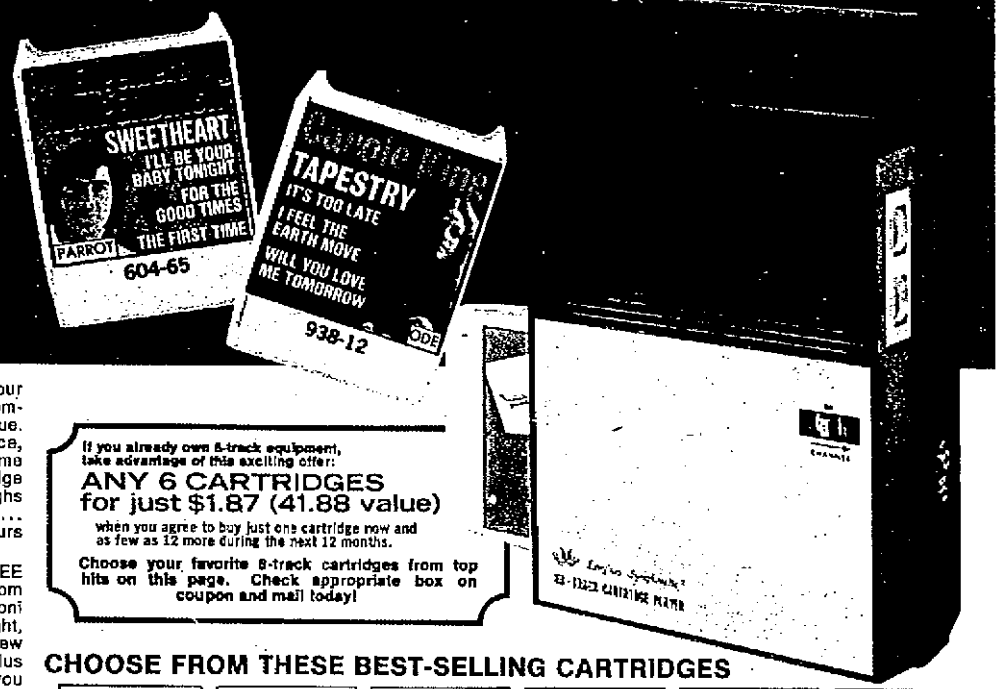

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. When one member is infected, health authorities strongly advise that the entire family be treated at the same time. Get Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special sizes for children and adults.

PORTABLE CARTRIDGE PLAYER

$4.95

Now enjoy the most convenient tape music ever available! As your introduction to Capitol Stereo Tape Club, you can own this handy, compact $29.95 Portable Cartridge Player for a fraction of its retail value. My Favorite Jokes

by Phil Brito

EDITOR'S NOTE: Phil Brito has been in show business since he was 17. An emcee-singer, he made his mark with such top crews as the Al Donahue band and the Jan Savitt orchestra and then went on his own. He has brought his songs and patter to such TV shows as Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, Milton Berle, Jerry Lewis, Jackie Gleason and Steve Allen. Among his million-record sellers is "Mama," to which he wrote the standard English lyric.

But the real story about Phil Brito is that around a year ago he underwent open-heart surgery, after being sidelined for several years. It was his friend, sportscaster Phil Rizzuto, who encouraged him to take that big step. Now on the comeback trail, Phil has cut an album for his own label, Jerida, "It's Ballad Time Again."

Brito, a native of West Virginia, is 53 and lives with his wife in West Orange, N.J. They have three grandchildren. He is active in campaigns to help others live normal lives with their heart conditions. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

During dinner at my house one of my grandchildren found that her serving of chicken included two wings. She complained, "Can't I get something else? This is nothing but hinges."

I had an appointment for a recording conference and I dropped into a Broadway delicatessen for a quick plate of cold cuts. Time passed and the order hadn't arrived. Finally I told the waiter, "I'm in a big hurry. What happened to that plate of cold cuts?" "They're on the fire," he said automatically.

A friend of mine found out that it doesn't pay to take signs seriously. He passed by a novelty shop and on the window there was a sign reading, "Sale. Last three days." He bought an item and, sure enough, it lasted three days.

A hostess was instructing her new maid on how to behave that night. "My husband is bringing home some very important people. I want you to be very careful — don't spill anything." "I won't," promised the maid, "I'll keep my mouth shut all night."

A mechanic visited a psychiatrist and said he was going nuts fixing compact autos. "We'll see what we can do," said the doctor. "Walk over there and climb under the couch."

There's a comedian we know who's so stingy that when he got married he bought half a wedding cake.

My wife has learned a sign language. She doesn't buy things for cash. She takes her credit card to department stores and simply signs for everything she buys. They've named an auto after her—the Charger.

One of my wife's friends bought a parrot. As soon as she brought the bird home, he started to use a stream of vile language. She brought the bird back to the shop. "I don't want this bird. He keeps screaming for whiskey and uses the foulest language." "Don't be too critical, lady," said the man. "Just be happy that he doesn't gamble."

I once played an engagement in a very small town, many years ago. I expected some important mail during the stay, but as the days went by, the letter never arrived. I went to the post office to complain. I told the postmaster, "No mail has come to my hotel room for more than a week. What's wrong?" He pointed and said, "You can see for yourself—the bag isn't even half full yet."

This happened at a USO club. A GI strolled in and he was soon approached by a sympathetic lady in charge. "Why don't you go into the next room," she smiled, "they have a lot of nice cookies in there." "No, thanks," said the soldier, "I expect my own girl to meet me here soon."

START YOUR NEW CAREER NOW! WITHOUT OVERHEAD!

ANY PLACE...ANY AGE!!!

UPHOLSTERING JUST ONE CHAIR can pay you as much as your present weekly paycheck!

you don't even have to quit your present job!!!

Start learning now. At home, or in the garage, in your spare time — no outside classes to attend. If you can tie a knot and drive a tack, you can learn this business, quickly, easily. You start learning the basics right away through the proven MUI Home Training Plan. And before you're barely into it, you can start doing the simple upholstering jobs that are all around you waiting to be done. Chairs, cushions, seats, footstools. Even before MUI students finish their training, people start bringing upholstery jobs to them, and remember — the world is full of furniture that needs fixing and re-upholstering and more is wearing out all the time!

AS YOU LEARN, YOU JUST SLIP INTO THE IMMENSE FLOW OF UPHOLSTERY WORK! Think of all there is! . . . Sofas, lounging chairs finished in beautiful fabrics, which MUI tells you how to get at the right price — even leather and all the new vinyls. And then you have built-ins and breakfast nooks, boats, trailers and all the millions of automobiles in America. Yes, you learn all this and more! When we finish teaching you, (in your own home in your spare time) and when you get our California state approved diploma, you know this business . . . as a real professional! You will then have one of the most fantastic moneymaking skills in America built into your head and hands! No one can ever take this skill away from you . . . and no one can ever fire you, because you're the boss of a business that you can take with you . . . You can make big money from then on . . . any time, anyplace you want to put out your shingle!

F4

"What started as a hobby, now pays me $10 an hour" Yes, many MUI graduates make better than $10 an hour turning old wornout furniture into bright new decorator pieces! Stack it up against what you're doing now! Are you making $150 a week? $200? $250? Do you put in long hours of dull work with small raises? Is that the way you want to spend the rest of your life? Just imagine, you can make $150, $200, $250 upholstering just one chair or sofa these days! And if you're the kind of person who likes to work and earn, you can sometimes finish a job like this in a day. That's pay . . . and it beats what most college graduates make!

it's automation proof!

When you read the papers you see there's a strike here, a lockout there. Detroit lays off 150,000 men. A plant is shut down and moved out of state. A new automated machine eliminates 5,000 jobs. They talk about dislocated workers and try to do something about it. Who pays the bills if you get caught up in one of these situations? When you know upholstering, life gets very simple and lots of fun. It's simple because where there are people, there are upholstery jobs and lots of them. It's fun because life is fun when the bills are paid and there's money in the bank, even enough to buy those things you've always wanted for yourself.

Work the hours YOU like to work!!

If you favor a regular 35 hours a week, upholstery lets you do it and make a really fine living. On the other hand, if you're really ambitious and want to work 60 or 70 hours a week, you are starting to talk about some big, big money! The important thing is that the choice is yours, not somebody elses! (Not like when you're working for someone else.) Many students of retirement age just do a few pieces now and then just to keep things nice and comfortable.

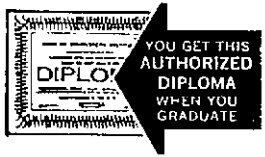

TO GET STARTED, JUST GET THE COUPON IN THE MAIL . . . TODAY! It costs you nothing to get the information and there's no obligation. No salesman is going to call you. This much and this much only, every successful MUI grad8te must do for himself — send the coupon today! YOU'LL GET A BIG ILLUSTRATED 32 PAGE BOOK ON UPHOLSTERY! and the upholstery business, and an actual free sample lesson showing how the fabulously successful MUI system is taught. For your sake and the sake of your future, do it now. Cut out the coupon, fill it out, put it in an envelope and mail it now. Air mail reaches MUI about two days sooner!

Compare for yourself!!! M.U.I. offers more lessons . . . more kits . . . more modern training . . . for FAR LESS TUITION than any other upholstery school in the world.

YOU GET MANY BIG FURNITURE KITS FREE

Cucumbers and Beauty

by ANA MAHER

Every woman, at some time in her life, faces the spectre of an aging skin. Most women never solve the problem, and finally become resigned. A fortunate few find the answer and are rewarded with a complexion that remains fresh and youthful all their lives.

Ten years ago, I had this skin problem. Nothing very serious, but when I took my mirror over to a bright light, I could detect evidence of dryness and faint little lines in those areas where wrinkles have a tendency to show first. And I didn't like it. I knew that these were danger signals that warned of an aging skin.

I was also very bewildered. I had always taken the best care of my skin. I used expensive night creams, lotions and highly touted astringents. So I tried other creams, with no improvement. Finally I became resigned. After all, everybody gets older and most of us show our age.

Then one day I had a visit from an elderly widowed neighbor. This charming lady was about seventy, but she had the most beautiful, moist, youthful skin. I remarked about it and mentioned my own skin problem.

She told me she used a marvelous cream which had been formulated by her late husband, a physician, and that she made it herself. "Try it," she said, and then she left and returned with a jar of this cream.

So I tried using my neighbor's cream.

In only three weeks, I began to see a marked improvement. My skin was fresher, clearer, smoother. After two months, my former dry, dull skin was revitalized. The lines and puffiness had been eased away. My skin now had a youthful, almost translucent quality. I was thrilled with my neighbor's formula.

For six years, this kind lady kept me supplied with this cream. And I want to tell you that my skin was more vital and younger looking than it had been when I first started to use it, six years before.

Then my neighbor died suddenly — and with her went that wonderful cream and its secret ingredients. I was saddened by the loss of a good friend - - and dejected by the loss of a miracle cream. Her family told me that her personal papers revealed no formulas of any kind. I was desperate. But I did have three jars left from the last batch she had made.

So I took the cream to one of the best known analytical cosmetic chemists. The cost of the analysis was enormous, but I got what I wanted. I had the wonder cream formula.

It has a base of pure cucumber juice, two super-moisturizers and three natural lubricants. It also contained Vitamins A and D and a special component to keep the cucumber juice fresh. My chemist told me that the formula consisted of only safe, pure ingredients — no hormones, estrogens or steroids.

I made a batch of cream for myself, following the chemist's instructions. Then my friends and relatives began using it. And in every case, the results were absolutely astounding.

Soon friends began insisting that the cream should be made known and available to all women, since the problem of aging skin is universal.

So my cream was put on the market three years ago, with the financial help of an uncle. It is called Cucumbre Frost.

The same wonderful results experienced by me, my friends and relatives were repeated time and time again by women all over the country. I have in my file hundreds of letters from grateful women telling of the remarkable results obtained with Cucumbre Frost.

Treatment is not a complicated ritual. I don't have time for that and the chances are you don't, either. You apply Cucumbre Frost at bedtime. Leave it on all night. It feeds, protects and nourishes your skin while you sleep.

I know what Cucumbre Frost can do for you. Therefore, I offer you this UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE. Try it. See for yourself in your own mirror how, after a few treatments, Cucumbre Frost helps revitalize dull, dry, aging skin. How Cucumbre Frost helps ease away lines and puffiness. Many women wrote me of astonishing results after only two weeks. Some take longer. But I say this to you: if, for any reason, you are not delighted with Cucumbre Frost — return the unused portion to me for a complete refund. No questions asked.

You now have the opportunity to have a vital, youthful, lovely skin — at no risk. Cucumbre Frost can be purchased only by ordering it directly from me. Simply send your name, address and $5.00 (cash or check) to:

No matter how heavy the downpour, your shoulders stay dry.

the new Clear-View dome umbrella.

Only $5.99 Comparable umbrellas cost $8.00 and more

At last, a forward-looking idea in umbrellas. So sensible, so practical, you'll wonder how you ever got along without it. And so glamorous, you'll win enthusiastic compliments wherever you go. The ingeniously designed Clear-View dome keeps you dry and protected . . . not only your head, but your shoulders as well. Your hairdo stays neat and pretty right through drizzle or downpour. And you'll always see where you're walking! What's more, there's even an extra advantage . . . you won't get poked in the face by someone else's old-fashioned umbrella.

Lovely To Look At, Comfortable To Carry

Our smart, new Clear-View Dome Umbrella is styled in heavy-duty, reinforced clear plastic with sturdy metal ribs that open to a 26" diameter dome. A truly beautiful and useful accessory, wonderfully lightweight and comfortable to carry. You've probably seen umbrellas like this selling for $8.00—perhaps even more—in fine shops around town. Our direct-by-mail price is only $5.99 or 2 for $10.99 plus 60c per order for shipping and handling.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

BY GEORGE WUNDER

GLEN ENGLISH'S HUNCH CONCERNING BENTLY BURLY'S PRIVATE LIFE PAYS OFF.

GLEN, YOUR THOROUGHNESS IS A LITTLE FRIGHTENING! THE MAN'S CAR IS DAMAGED HE RENTS ONE INSTEAD FOR A VACATION TRIP—AND YOU COME UP WITH THIS!

YOUR STATE PARTY PEOPLE WON'T LIKE IT, DOLORES, BUT THE MILEAGE ON THE CAR AGENCY'S RECORDS WOULD NOT HAVE TAKEN BURLY TO CANADA AND BACK.

BUT IT WORKS OUT PERFECTLY FOR A TRIP TO LAS VEGAS AND RETURN.

AND WHY WOULD OUR UPRIGHT CITIZEN LIE ABOUT FICTITIOUS "HUNTING TRIPS," UNLESS HE'S HIDING THAT HIS SHOOTING TAKES PLACE AT A DICE TABLE?

YOUR LOGIC IS TOO BLASTED CONVINCING, GLEN, BUT EVEN IF YOU'RE RIGHT, IT ONLY PROVES BURLY IS NO PLASTER SAINT—WHICH IS NOT ILLEGAL.

DOLORES, THAT GUY MADE A FORTUNE—BUT A SMALL ONE. IT WOULDN'T LAST LONG IF HE RAN INTO A RUN OF BAD LUCK AT A HIGH STAKES GAME!

HOW DOES THE IDEA OF A FEDERAL ADMINISTRATOR IN HOCK TO BIG-TIME GAMBLERS HIT YOU?

RIGHT WHERE I LIVE!

GLEN, YOU'VE BEEN AHEAD OF ME ALL THE WAY. WHAT DO YOU SUGGEST I DO NOW?

NOTHING—UNTIL I GO OVER AGAIN EVERY STEP HIS OFFICE HAS TAKEN IN SETTING UP THAT NEW PROGRAM.

THE OLD MOTH-BALLED MILITARY HOSPITAL OUTSIDE OF TOWN, REOPENED TO CARE FOR ADDICTED VIET NAM VETERANS! IF BURLY'S DIRTIED UP THAT ONE, I'LL BREAK HIM!

I BROUGHT COPIES OF THE CONTRACTS FROM WASHINGTON, DOLORES. WITH LUCK, I'LL BRING BACK A CLUB YOU CAN USE TO DO IT.

THEN:

NUTS! NEW CONSTRUCTION, REPAIR, NEW EQUIPMENT! SEALED COMPETITIVE BIDS ON EVERY MAJOR CONTRACT! NOTHING TO HANG MY HAT ON. THE GUY SURE AIN'T CRUDE!

THE SMALL STUFF—MIGHT AS WELL GO THROUGH THEM, TOO.

HEY! HOW COME BURLY DIDN'T CALL FOR BIDS ON THIS ONE. FOR INSTALLING AND SERVICING VENDING MACHINES AT THE HOSPITAL.

GAVE IT TO A WEST COAST OUTFIT. SMALL POTATOES, BUT YOU'D THINK A LOCAL DEALER WOULD WANT...

SURE, I'LL TALK ABOUT IT, MR. ENGLISH. COME RIGHT ON OVER

OF COURSE I WANTED THAT HOSPITAL ACCOUNT, SONNY. JUST NEVER HAD A PRAYER WHEN THE MOB MOVED IN!

"MOB," SIR?

WHO DO YOU THINK CONTROLS THAT COMPANY? FAT CHANCE A SMALL-FRY LIKE ME HAD—WITH BENTLY BURLY HAND-IN-GLOVE WITH 'EM!
